Halifax, N. S., July 21.—In a letter to Hon. W. T. Pipes, Attorney-General of Nova Scotia, L. A. Lovett, solicitor for the Dominion Coal Co., has raised objections to the action of Magistrate A. D. McCuish, who is considered to be in sympathy with the U.M.W., states that when strikers and their sympathisers have been arrested for alleged assault and interference with workmen, the U.M.W. supporters or their solicitors have procured the release of the person charged by putting up bail, and have immediately gone to another magistrate and laid an information against the police officer who made the arrest, for kidnapping.

"The law is thus being made a farce by these arrests and charges," says Mr. Lovett.

DOMINION CAN APPEAL CASES

London, July 21.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the Privy Council yesterday the following petitions for special leave to appeal were heard:

Montreal Light, Heat & Power Co. v. Sedgwick and others, leave granted.

Montreal Light, Heat & Power Co. v. Regan and others, dismissed, with costs.

Thompson v. Equity Fire Insurance Co., and Thompson v. the Standard Mutual, leave granted, and appeals consolidated.

Dominion of Canada v. the Province of Ontario, re the Salteaux Indian lands, leave granted.

Lach v. the King for leave to appeal in forma paupers, dismissed.

PROBABILITIES.

Unsettled, with occasional showers to-day and Thursday.

Germany is said to be extremely anxious to do more business with Canada.

JAPAN SNARLS AT CELESTIALS

Tokio, July 21.—The Kokumin, one of the most influential of the Japanese newspapers and regarded as the mouthpiece of Marquis Katsura, the Premier, in matters pertaining to the Government's policy, yesterday discussed the situation between Japan and China and struck a somewhat alarmist note, concluding: "The Japanese Government is showing all possible patience, but is not carrying its endurance to the point of sentimentality. Unless China's mood changes before the conclusion of the current month, Japan will be obliged to assume a different attitude."

THE CONCILIATION BOARD DISAGREES

Winnipeg, July 21.—The conciliation board called to arbitrate the case between the Canadian Northern Railway and its men, has failed to agree. The majority report is signed by Judge Myers, chairman, and J. G. O'Donoghue, representative of the men, and the minority report signed by W. J. Christie, the company's delegate on the board. The men and the company had agreed on a schedule covering the rates of wages and everything except two items in the pay list. Christie thought that the board ought to deal with the whole schedule, as the company's offer was not accepted.

COAL OUTPUT IS INCREASING

Glace Bay, N.S., July 21.—From a careful review of the strike situation to date, it can be said there is no indication of the settlement in sight. Strike leaders claim they have 5,500 men on the rolls, while the company refuses to give out a statement as to the number of men in the collieries.

The one important feature of the situation to-day is the remarkable increase in the output claimed by the company, viz., that at 4 o'clock yesterday 7,585 tons had been shipped from the different collieries, including 3,096 tons from the banks.

GAS EXPLOSION INJURED FIVE

Stratford, July 21.—An explosion of gas at the home of William Evans, Erie street, last evening resulted in five persons receiving painful injuries. Evans and his wife were taken to the hospital. Mrs. Evans is in a serious condition.

Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Kirchel and daughter, who were visiting, were able to be taken home.

Major Leckie Vindicated.

Montreal, July 21.—Before Judge Leet yesterday the hearing of the charge of fraud laid against Major R. C. Leckie, Sudbury, was taken up and resulted in the major's honorable acquittal. Judge Leet declared Major Leckie had a perfect right to conclude the transaction in question, and he refused to hear further evidence after the statement of the case. Major Leckie, he said, was completely vindicated.

DISCHARGED EMPLOYEE NOT AWARDED DAMAGES

At the police court this morning a former employee of a local book-store asked that he be awarded $12.00 it being the amount of one week's pay, as he had been discharged without sufficient notice by the proprietor.

The magistrate held that the evidence produced showed that he has been incompetent in the discharge of his duties, and his employer had warned him several times about his mistakes and stated that he would be discharged, and although he did not give the notice in the proper manner he could not allow the complainant any remuneration.

The complainant stated that he had been engaged by the proprietor with the understanding that he would be given the position as manager if he made good. Although he had been called to the office and told about his mistakes he had not understood that his services would be dispensed with, and the only knowledge he had of an impending charge was brought about by an advertisement inserted in the papers by the proprietor, asking for the services of a manager for the store. He stated that he was not managing the store at the time, and did not think it meant that the newcomer would get his position.

When asked by the defendant's counsel as to the many mistakes shown in the books of the store and produced in court, the complainant said they had all been satisfactorily explained, and settlement had been made.

The proprietor of the store, when called to the witness box, said he had told his employee repeatedly that on account of his mistakes and general incompetency he would be discharged. Complainant had been told two weeks before his dismissal, that his services would not be required any longer.

MAY MOVE MARKET TO THE NEW RIVER FRONT

"What do you intend doing with the water-front which has been built up?" Mr. E. F. Mason asked Ald. Phelan at the meeting of the Board of Trade last night.

"The council has as yet no definite policy on this matter," said Ald. Phelan, "but there are several things which may be done in the near future. It has frequently been suggested that the market be moved down there, and this may be done."

"If a change is not made you won't have any market in ten years," some one in the audience remarked.

Whereupon there was a laugh.

Special Meeting

Charlotte St. Ladies' Aid and W. M. S Auxiliary will hold a special meeting to-night after prayer meeting. All members are asked to be present.

THE NEWS AS TOLD IN DESPATCHES

Victims of Strange Disease.

Chicago, July 21.—Pellagra, a mysterious plague as fatal as leprosy, and usually found only in the southern States, and in tropical countries, has been discovered among inmates of the insane ward at Dunning Asylum. Most authorities attribute the disease to the use as food of spoiled or damaged corn or its products. Pellagra eats out the body and mind, but is a chronic disease and not acute. The disease is not considered communicable.

151 Hours Without Food.

London, July 21.—Another suffragette, Miss Elsie Mackenzie, was discharged from prison yesterday in a critical condition, having gone 151 hours without tasting food.

New York for Copper Centre.

New York, July 21.—The reform committee of the metal exchange propose a measure to swing London trading to New York, making it the world's copper centre.

No Trace of Poison.

Chatham, July 21.—Crown Attorney H. D. Smith has received a report from the provincial analyst to the effect that there was no trace of poison in the stomach of Mrs. Edison. It is now certain that the woman died of natural causes, and that no suspicion rests upon anyone.

Moors Good Fighters.

Melilla, Morocco, July 21.—The attack by Moorish tribesmen made on the Spanish forces here last Saturday afternoon was executed under cover of a feint on the front against the Spanish flank. Many of the tribesmen succeeded in breaking through the barb wire entrenchments, where they fell at the mouths of the cannon after hand to hand fighting. It was three o'clock on Sunday morning when the Moors finally retired. The Moors numbered 6,000, and the French and Spanish force 2,000.

Training Ships May Visit Chatham.

Chatham, July 21.—On Saturday, when 50 Detroit motor boats, headed by Mayor Breitmeyer of that city, visit Chatham, the keels of two American warships may plow the waters of the Thames for the first time since 1812. Efforts are being made to induce the Washington authorities to permit the training vessels Don Juan, Austria and the Morrell, to come here with the motor boats.

A Belligerent Farmer.

St. Catharines, July 21.—The police want Morley Secord, a farmer. After being allowed to go on suspended sentence for beating his wife, Secord, according to information laid with the police, went home and licked the hired man and his son, because they were in court ready to give evidence against him in the assault case.

BLUFFING IT THROUGH

When considering what the completion of this road means to Canada, any argument directed at the cost appears ridiculous and un-Canadian. What does it mean to Canada?—The Galt Reformer.

At the time of the building of the C.P.R. it was freely said that Canada was paying too dear for the whistle. The excuse given by Sir John for the enormous subsidies in land and money to that road was that no one would build a road for less. It simply had to be done. But it is quite a different thing with the G.T.P. The Galt Reformer knows perfectly well that the C.N.R. is building a bigger and better road than the G.T.P. AT NO COST WHATEVER TO CANADA. Has the Reformer no time or space for a word upon this extraordinary state of affairs? The C.N.R. is even now allied to and connected with a perfect network of railways. It will cost the eastern section of the G.T.P., which Canada is building at her own expense an extra hundred millions to secure the same advantages.

It will never cease to be a matter of astonishment, to use a mild expression, that Sir Wilfrid should have consented to be hurried into the G.T.P., which is neither national nor private, neither bond or free, although the country is bond all right to the extent of a huge indebtedness increasing by leaps and bounds. In the face of much British misgiving and constant British warnings. The G.T.P. is a case of paying two hundred odd millions of dollars for what might have been got for nothing. It is lamentable. The time is past for partisan recriminations. It is a matter of general and common concern, to the last degree serious and dangerous.

CONDITIONS IN U.S.

The United States has returned to a condition of "billions" prosperity. As Germany has pointed out to Great Britain, the United States is developing itself so rapidly that it is likely to be the successful trade-rival of both. But here arises what may, reasonably, be said to be the question of questions. Why is trade-rivalry allowed to stand in the way of the happiness of toiling millions? It is not a question of fitness or a case of necessity. If it were it could be understood. It is simply a matter of stock-gambling, jobbing on 'change, and putting and bidding the whole system of production and distribution this way and that, in order that out of the general confusion the gamblers may make a killing. For the man who, like a Napoleon, will grasp the situation and rise and restore the common everyday right of the people to the people, to eat when there is plenty, there is an enviable immortality. When men will say: "We have enough for all reasonable needs, why amass further? Let others have a chance" the day of reason in all things will have come. Till then there can be no peace.

When preaching the Gospel blends with the practise of the virtues preached, the Gospel will be listened to instead of being ignored, as at present. It is indisputable that the mass of the people now regard Christianity as a fad, a commonplace, or a side-issue, simply because, with all their getting the [illegible]—the clergy merely—fail to "get understanding." It is not impossible that a totality of plenty should provide an individual average of the same.

It is strange that not vice, in all its hideous variety, but energy and the greed of gain should be the chief stumbling-block to the mass of the people's happiness. Until this conclusion is not only reached, but acted upon, the masses cannot be happy. It will still be with them a veritable struggle for existence. It cannot last. Why not let it be corrected by a spirit of justice and commonsense, rather than by revolution.

WHY DID WE BONUS G.T.P.?

Mr. William Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern Railway, returned from London yesterday with four million dollars in his grip, earmarked for the building of a Canadian Northern line across old Ontario from the Niagara River to the junction at Hawkesbury, where the railway will connect with the Quebec lines of the company. For some time the energies of Messrs. Mackenzie & Mann have been devoted to the building of western lines in the wheat-growing area. There was need of haste there, for the C.P.R. and G.T.R. were both feverishly at work, while Mr. "Jim" Hill was leaning over the fence figuring out some extensions of his own. The railway building boom in the West is by no means over, and the Canadian Northern will build hundreds of miles there this year; but it is evidently regarded as good strategy to get a grip of the west-bound manufacturers as well as the east-bound wheat and cattle. The stretch around the north shore of Lakes Huron and Superior from Sudbury to Port Arthur, is the missing link of the C.N.R. system, and its construction would involve the pouring out of a treasure vaster than even Mackenzie & Mann can at the moment secure from the financiers of London. The North Shore line will probably be the last section to be built. Mr. Mackenzie quite manifestly desires to be able to show bond buyers successful roads in operation over wide stretches in Ontario and Quebec as well as in the Prairie Provinces, and thus convince them that the connecting link will be profitable. At the moment the line from Toronto to Sudbury is isolated from the rest of the Mackenzie-Mann roads. The line from the Niagara River to Ottawa will help to feed it with profitable traffic. It is the intention to use the right of way of the Electrical Development Company from the Falls to Toronto. The railway will be a steam line, the question of electrification being left for the future. Work is to be rushed with all possible speed.—The Globe.

It will be remembered that it was pointed out to the Laurier Government again and again, that the C.N.R. had not asked for a bonus and yet was willing to build its transcontinental line and all the feeders. But no. The G.T.P. was asked for by Messrs. Cox & Co., and the financiers and contractors generally, so it had to be put through. Here is a better road and with feeders, too, for nothing. That G.T.P. business will be got to the bottom of some day, and when that day comes we will wonder how it was ever allowed to happen.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Grand Army of the Republic, 260,000 strong, has taken up the murder of Elsie Siegel, whose father is a member of that organization. They demand better work by the police.

The Montreal Star has a large cartoon of a proposed coat-of-arms for Montreal with the words, "Without Shame, Without Honour" as the motto. An alderman's vampire, sleek, grinning and well-fed roosts upon the prostrate tax-payer. We would suggest something further. The objects of the Star's satire have, of course, their aiders, abettors and assistants, men who their praises "continually do cry" (so long as things are coming their own way.) They should be represented, for without them to stalk the prey the vampires could not live. All those who accept contributions and "help" from them, knowing them to be what they are, should be exposed, too, for the motto "without shame" most assuredly applies to them also.

Abraham Ruef was sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment for bribing a supervisor to vote for granting an overhead trolley franchise to the street railway company in Francisco; 250,000 dollars was paid for the franchise, and Ruef and Mayor Schmitz divided 100,000 dollars. The President of the street railway company is now on trial.

"E. A. S. Blake, convicted of attempting to bribe a juror at Ruef's first trial, was sentenced to be imprisoned four years. In a confession he had asserted that two of Ruef's attorneys employed him to offer the bribe, and that the same lawyer, after he had been indicted, promised to support his wife and pay him $10,000, if he would take punishment without implicating them.

"Before the corrupt councilmen were carried in Pittsburg all the evidence was laid before President Roosevelt, who urged the prosecutors to be sure to punish the bribe-givers as well as the bribe-takers. It appears that the latter have been giving a share of every bribe to Wm. A. Martin, a councilman now in the penitentiary, to which he was sent for his conduct with respect to the Tube City Railroad franchise. He has received his share because he protested his corrupt associates.

"William L. Mathues, formerly Treasurer of Pennsylvania, who was sentenced for his complicity in the Harrisburg Capitol frauds, is dead, and his death was hastened by the judgment of the court.

FOR THE BUNGALOW.

The Furnishings Should Be Simple, Artistic and Inexpensive.

COLOR SCHEME IMPORTANT.

In Floor Coverings an Arts and Crafts Square Is Very Satisfactory For Living or Dining Rooms—Mission Chairs and Denim Hangings Effective.

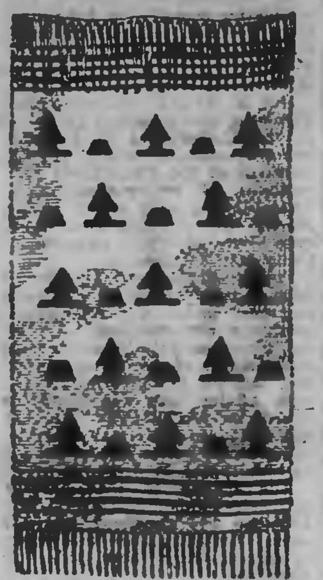
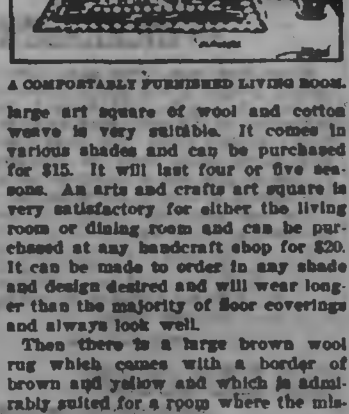
For furnishing a bungalow there is plenty of simple, inexpensive furniture available, and it only requires a little thought on the part of the owner to make her rooms comfortable and cozy. Next to simplicity of design, harmony of color is the most important consideration. In a living room hung with Japanese grass cloth in a light green shade or tinted a soft brownish gray the cushions of the armchairs and window seat should be of dark green or some other equally good contrasting color, and the rugs upon the floor should be of corresponding tones, but light, fadable tints should never be employed in conjunction with such a wall treatment.



HAND WOVEN RUG.

The illustration shows a charmingly furnished living room. The walls are hung in dark green grass cloth, and the woodwork is stained white. The fireplace at one side of the room is constructed of red brick laid in white mortar, and the narrow mantel above is stained to match the woodwork. Simple white muslin curtains shade the long, narrow windows, which open outward, and a few prints and a small mirror adorn the walls. The couch and chairs of polished hard wood, with rattan backs and seats, are fitted with cushions covered with denim in tones that harmonize with the wall hangings. An arts and crafts desk and stool, painted white, stand in one corner, and four small tables serve as receptacles for magazines and various knickknacks. A large rug in shades of green and red is placed before the fireplace and adds a note of brightness to a very pretty whole.

In the choice of floor coverings for the bungalow there is a varied supply to choose from. For the living room a large art square of wool and cotton weave is very suitable. It comes in various shades and can be purchased for $15. It will last four or five seasons. An arts and crafts art square is very satisfactory for either the living room or dining room and can be purchased at any handcraft shop for $20. It can be made to order in any shade and design desired and will wear longer than the majority of floor coverings and always look well.



A COMFORTABLY FURNISHED LIVING ROOM.

Then there is a large brown wool rug which comes with a border of brown and yellow and which is admirably suited for a room where the mission type of furniture is employed, as is a Scotch rug, a woolen product, finished alike on both sides, which comes in various sizes, the 9 by 12 size costing $36.

Picture Pad.

A stationery novelty which is calculated to make the modern youngster enjoy his writing exercise is an unusual writing pad. The novelty lies in the cover, which is decorated with six different decalcomania pictures. These are intended to be cut out when the tablet is exhausted and transferred to cardboard or boxes by the process which every child is familiar with.

There are several different sets of pictures used on the pads. One group consists of Indian heads; another shows a menagerie and yet another a spirited circus.

Nine days after the funeral of Don Carlos his son, Don Jaime, is to be proclaimed the Pretender.

Exporters.

Geo. Rowntree reported having bought several lots of medium exporters at $5.25 to $5.50. Export bulls are quoted at $4.50 to $5.

Feeders and Stockers.

Harry Murby reports good quality steers, 800 to 900 lbs., as holding their own in values, the number of this class being scarce, there not being enough to supply the demand. Common, altho not many offered, are hard to cash. It looks as tho good quality feeders and stockers are not going to be very cheap. Steers, 900 to 1000 lbs. each, at $4 to $4.25; steers, 800 to 900 lbs. each, at $3.50 to $4; fair to good stockers, $3 to $3.50; common stockers, $2.50 to $2.75.

Milkers and Springers.

About thirty milkers and springers sold at from $30 to $50 each, with one at $60.

Veal Calves.

Deliveries of veal calves were liberal, with prices generally much easier; that is, few brought the top quotation. Prices were quoted at $3 to $6 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

The run of sheep and lambs was large—over 2200. Prices were generally easier, and likely to go lower. Export ewes, $3.50 to $4 per cwt.; rams, $2.50 to $3; lambs, $6.50 to $7.00 per cwt.

Hogs.

The market for hogs was very firm, at $8.25, fed and watered at the market, and $8 f.o.b. cars at country points, and in some instances $8.05 was reported paid at country points.

Toronto Junction Live Stock.

Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards for Tuesday, were 88 carloads, consisting of 1750 cattle, 15 hogs, 65 sheep and 3 calves. Besides the above, there were over 80 carloads of exporters, that arrived on Monday, that were on hand for to-day's market.

Exporters.

Export steers sold at from $5.15 up to $6.30, the latter price being paid for the load brought in by F. Restorick, and sold by McDonald & Halligan to A. McIntosh for Gordon, Ironsides and Fhares. Export heifers sold at from $5.40 up to $6 per cwt.

Butchers.

The best butchers' sold to-day were reported at from $5 to $5.30; medium, $4.75 to $5; common, $4.25 to $4.75; cows at from $3 to $4.25 per cwt.

Milkers and Springers.

Fred Rowntree bought 15 milkers and springers at $30 to $50 each.

Soap That is Best for the Baby's Bath

Baby's skin is very sensitive to soap; some soaps soothe and nourish, while others inflame and irritate.

It is of the utmost importance that you know what soap to use, and to do this you must know what is in the soap.

So let us explain how we make Infants' Delight. We first go for pure vegetable oil to France. There we pay often double what we might pay. But the oil we get is pure enough to use on your table.

Then we go more than 12,000 miles to the isle of Ceylon for pure cocoanut oil. Both oils are carefully tested by chemists and doubly boiled.

Next they go through our own special milling process and fall like flakes of snow into enormous bins. Then they are crushed under a weight of 30 tons to press out the moisture.

Finally they pass through granite rollers and come out in miles of silky ribbons. Then they are dried eight times and stamped into oval cakes that just fit the hand.

Isn't it worth while to have soap like this for your baby? Why risk using common soaps when this excellent kind costs no more than others?

This lovely soap leaves the baby's delicate skin as soft as velvet and as smooth as silk. Even the baby knows the difference in this delightful soap—so we call it Infants' Delight.

Baby will like the perfume too. It is so dainty and fragrant—only the exquisite scent of the rose. If this soap is pure enough for the baby's skin it surely is best for your own. Try one cake—you owe it to baby and yourself.

How to Bathe the Baby

Rinse the body with clear, warm water and then rub in a rich lather of Infants' Delight. Then rinse off the lather with a cloth dipped in lukewarm water and wrung out over the skin. Pat the baby's skin dry with a cloth but never rub with a towel for it coarsens the texture of the skin.

"She recognized me, you mean?" Loder's eyes were as keen as steel.

"Yes."

"Then you're wrong. She didn't."

Blessington's eyebrows went up.

There was silence. Loder glanced across the room. Eve had parted from the girl in green and was moving toward them, exchanging smiles and greetings as she came.

"My wife is coming back," he said. "Will you do this for me, Blessington? It—it will smooth things." He spoke quickly, continuing to watch Eve. As he had hoped, Blessington's eyes turned in the same direction. "'Twill smooth matters," he repeated—"smooth them in—in a domestic way that I can't explain."

The shot told. Blessington looked round.

"Right, sir," he said. "You may leave it to me." And before Loder could speak again he had turned and disappeared into the crowd.

CHAPTER XVI.

HIS business with Blessington over, Loder breathed more freely. If Lady Astrupp had recognized Chilcote by the rings and had been roused to curiosity the incident would demand settlement sooner or later—settlement in what proportion he could hazard no guess. If, on the other hand, her obvious change of manner had arisen from any other source—he had a hazy idea that a woman's behavior could never be gauged by accepted theories—then he had safeguarded Chilcote's interests and his own by his securing of Blessington's promise. Blessington he knew would be reliable and discreet. With a renewal of confidence—a pleasant feeling that his uneasiness had been groundless—he moved forward to greet Eve.

Her face, with its rich, clear coloring, seemed to his gaze to stand out from the crowd of other faces as from a frame, and a sense of pride touched him. In every eye but his own her beauty belonged to him.

His face looked alive and masterful as she reached his side. "May I monopolize you?" he said with the quickness of speech borrowed from Chilcote. "We—we see so little of each other."

Almost as if compelled, her lashes lifted, and her eyes met his. Her glance was puzzled, uncertain, slightly confused. There was a deeper color than usual in her cheeks. Loder felt something within his own consciousness stir in response.

"You know you are yielding," he said.

Again she blushed.

He saw the blush and knew that it was he—his words, his personality—that had called it forth. In Chilcote's actual semblance he had proved his superiority over Chilcote. For the first time he had been given a tacit, personal acknowledgment of his power. Involuntarily he drew nearer to her.

"Let's get out of this crush."

She made no answer except to bend her head, and it came to him that, for all her pride, she liked—and unconsciously yielded to—domination. With a satisfied gesture he turned to make a passage toward the door.

But the passage was more easily desired than made. In the few moments since he had entered the supper room the press of people had considerably thickened until a block had formed about the doorway. Drawing Eve with him he moved forward for a dozen paces, then paused, unable to make further headway.

As they stood there he looked back at her. "What a study in democracy a crowd always is!" he said.

She responded with a bright, appreciative glance, as if surprised into naturalness. He wondered sharply what she would be like if her enthusiasms were really aroused. Then a stir in the corridor outside caused a movement inside the room, and with a certain display of persistence he was enabled to make a passage to the door.

There again they were compelled to halt. But though tightly wedged into his new position and guarding Eve with one arm, Loder was free to survey the brilliantly thronged corridor over the head of a man a few inches shorter than himself, who stood directly in front of him.

"What are we waiting for?" he asked good humoredly, addressing the back of the stranger's head.

"Hullo, Chilcote!" he said. "Hope it's not on your feet I'm standing."

Loder laughed. "No," he said. "And don't change the position. If you were an inch higher I should be blind as well as crippled."

The other laughed. It was a pleasant surprise to find Chilcote amiable under discomfort. He looked round again in slight curiosity.

Loder felt the scrutiny. To create a diversion he looked out along the corridor. "I believe we are waiting for something," he exclaimed. "What's this?" Then quite abruptly he ceased to speak.

"Anything interesting?" Eve touched his arm.

He said nothing. He made no effort to look round. His thought as well as his speech was suddenly suspended.

"Jove," he exclaimed, "here comes our sorceress! It's like the progress of a fairy princess. I believe this is the meaning of our getting penned in here." He chuckled delightedly.

Loder said nothing. He stared straight on over the other's head.

Along the corridor, agreeably conscious of the hum of admiration she aroused, came Lillian Astrupp, surrounded by a little court. Her delicate face was lit up; her eyes shone under the faint gleam of her hair; her gown of gold embroidery swept round her gracefully. She was radiant and triumphant, but she was also excited. The excitement was evident in her laugh, in her gestures, in her eyes, as they turned quickly in one direction and then another.

Loder, gazing in stupefaction over the other man's head, saw it—felt and understood it with a mind that leaped back over a space of years. As in a shifting panorama he saw a night of disturbance and confusion in a faroff Italian valley—a confusion from which one face shone out with something of the pale, alluring radiance that filtered over the hillside from the crescent moon. It passed across his consciousness slowly, but with a slow completeness, and in its light the incidents of the past hour stood out in a new aspect. The echo of recollection stirred by Lady Bramfell's voice, the re-echo of it in the sister's tones; his own blindness, his own egregious assurance—all struck across his mind.

Meanwhile the party about Lillian drew nearer. He felt with instinctive certainty that the supper room was its destination, but he remained motionless, held by a species of fatalism. He watched her draw near with an unmoved face, but in the brief space that passed while she traversed the corridor he gauged to the full the hold that the new atmosphere, the new existence, had gained over his mind. With an unlooked for rush of feeling he realised how dearly he would part with it.

As Lillian came closer the meaning of her manner became clearer to him. She talked incessantly, laughing now and then, but her eyes were never quiet. These skimmed the length of the corridor, then glanced over the heads crowded in the doorway.

"I'll have something quite sweet, Geoffrey," she was saying to the man beside her as she came within hearing. "You know what I like—a sort of snowflake wrapped up in sugar." As she said the words her glance wandered. Loder saw it rest uninterestedly on a boy a yard or two in front of him, then move to the man over whose head he gazed, then lift itself inevitably to his face.

The glance was quick and direct. He saw the look of recognition spring across it; he saw her move forward suddenly as the crowd in the corridor parted to let her pass. Then he saw what seemed to him a miracle.

Her whole expression altered, her lips parted, and she colored with annoyance. She looked like a spoiled child who, seeing a bonbon box, opens it—to find it empty.

As the press about the doorway melted to give her passage the red haired man in front of Loder was the first to take advantage of the space. "Jove, Lillian," he said, moving forward, "you look as if you expected Chilcote to be somebody else, and are disappointed to find he's only himself!" He laughed delightedly at his own joke.

The words were exactly the tonic Lillian needed. She smiled her usual undisturbed smile as she turned her eyes upon him.

"My dear Leonard, you're using your eyeglass. When that happens you're never responsible for what you see." Her words came more slowly and with a touch of languid amusement. Her composure was suddenly restored.

Then for the first time Loder changed his position. Moved by an impulse he made no effort to dissect, he stepped back to Eve's side and slipped his arm through hers—successfully concealing his left hand.

The warmth of her skin through her long glove thrilled him unexpectedly. His impulse had been one of self defense, but the result was of a different character. At the quick contact the wish to fight for—to hold and defend—the position that had grown so dear woke in renewed force. With a new determination he turned again toward Lillian.

"I caught the same impression—without an eyeglass," he said. "Why did you look like that?" He asked the question steadily and with apparent carelessness, though through it all his reason stood aghast—his common sense cried aloud that it was impossible for the eyes that had seen his face in admiration, in love, in contempt, to fall now in recognition. The air seemed breathless while he spoke and waited. His impression of Lillian was a mere shimmering of gold dress and gold hair; all that he was really conscious of was the pressure of his hand on Eve's arm and the warmth of her skin through the soft glove. Then abruptly the mist lifted. He saw Lillian's eyes—indifferent, amused, slightly contemptuous, and a second later he heard her voice.

"Do you see what I mean, Eve?"

"My dear Jack," she said sweetly, "how absurd of you! It was simply the contrast of your eyes peering over Leonard's hair. It was like a gorgeous sunset with a black cloud overhead." She laughed. "Do you see what I mean, Eve?" She affected to see Eve for the first time.

Eve had been looking calmly ahead. She turned now and smiled serenely. Loder felt no vibration of the arm he held, yet by an instant intuition he knew that the two women were antagonistic. He experienced it with the divination that follows upon a moment of acute suspense. He understood it, as he had understood Lillian's look of recognition when his forehead, eyes and nose had shown him to be himself; her blank surprise when his close shaven lip and chin had proclaimed him Chilcote.

He felt like a man who has looked into an abyss and stepped back from the edge, outwardly calm, but mentally shaken. The commonplaces of life seemed for the moment to hold deeper meanings. He did not hear Eve's answer; he paid no heed to Lillian's next remark. He saw her smile and turn to the red haired man; finally he saw her move on into the supper room, followed by her little court. Then he pressed the arm he was still holding. He felt an urgent need of companionship, of a human expression to the crisis he had passed.

"Shall we get out of this?" he asked again.

Eve looked up. "Out of the room?" she said.

He looked down at her, compelling her gaze. "Out of the room—and the house," he answered. "Let us go—home."

CHAPTER XVII.

THE necessary formalities of departure were speedily got through. The passing of the corridors, the gaining of the carriage, seemed to Loder to be marvelously simple proceedings. Then, as he sat by Eve's side and again felt the forward movement of the horses, he had leisure for the first time to wonder whether the time that had passed since last he occupied that position had actually been lived through.

Only that night he had unconsciously compared one incident in his life to a sketch in which the lights and shadows have been obliterated and lost. Now that picture rose before him, startlingly and incredibly intact. He saw the sunlit houses of Santasalare, backgrounded by the sunlit hills—saw them as plainly as when he himself had sketched them on his memory. Every detail of the scene remained the same, even to the central figure; only the eye and the hand of the artist had changed.

At this point Eve broke in upon his thoughts. Her first words were curiously coincidental.

"What did you think of Lillian Astrupp tonight?" she asked. "Wasn't her gown perfect?"

Loder lifted his head with an almost guilty start. Then he answered straight from his thoughts.

"I—I didn't notice it," he said. "But her eyes reminded me of a cat's eyes—and she walks like a cat. I never seemed to see it—until tonight."

Eve changed her position. "She was very artistic," she said tentatively. "Don't you think the gold gown was beautiful with her pale colored hair?"

Loder felt surprised. He was convinced that Eve disliked the other, and he was not sufficiently versed in women to understand her praise. "I thought"— he began. Then he wisely stopped. "I didn't see the gown," he substituted.

Eve looked out of the window. "How unappreciative men are!" she said. But her tone was strangely free from censure.

After this there was silence until Grosvenor square was reached. Having left the carriage and passed into the house, Eve paused for a moment at the foot of the stairs to give an order to Crapham, who was still in attendance in the hall, and again Loder had an opportunity of studying her. As he looked a sharp comparison rose to his mind.

"A fairy princess!" he had heard the red haired man say as Lillian Astrupp came into view along the Bramfells' corridor, and the simile had seemed particularly apt. With her grace, her delicacy, her subtle attraction, she might well be the outcome of imagination. But with Eve it was different. She also was graceful and attractive, but it was grace and attraction of a different order. One was beautiful with the beauty of the white rose that springs from the hothouse and withers at the first touch of cold; the other with the beauty of the wild rose on the cliffs above the sea, that keeps its petals fine and transparent in face of salt spray and wet mist. Eve, too, had her realm, but it was the realm of real things. A great confidence, a feeling that here one might rely even if all other faiths were shaken, touched him suddenly. For a moment he stood irresolute, watching her mount the stairs with her easy, assured step. Then a determination came to him. Fate favored him tonight; he was in luck tonight. He would put his fortune to one more test. He swung across the hall and ran up the stairs.

His face was keen with interest as he reached her side. The hard outline of his features and the hard grayness of his eyes were softened as when he had paused to talk with Lakeley. Action was the breath of his life, and his face changed under it as another's might change under the influence of stirring music or good wine.

Eve saw the look and again the uneasy expression of surprise crossed her eyes. She paused, her hand resting on the banister.

Loder looked at her directly. "Will you come into the study as you came that other night? There's something I want to say." He spoke quietly. He felt master of himself and her.

She hesitated, glanced at him and then glanced away.

"Will you come?" he said again. And as he said it his eyes rested on the sweep of her thick eyelashes, the curve of the back hair.

At last her lashes lifted and the perplexity and doubt in her blue eyes stirred him. Without waiting for her answer, he leaned forward.

"Say yes!" he urged. "I don't often ask for favors."

Still she hesitated. Then her decision was made for her. With a new boldness he touched her arm, drawing her forward gently but decisively toward Chilcote's rooms.

In the study a fire burned brightly, the desk was laden with papers, the lights were nicely adjusted, even the chairs were in their accustomed places. Loder's senses responded to each suggestion. It seemed but a day since he had seen it last. It was precisely as he had left it—the niche needing but the man.

To hide his emotion he crossed the floor quickly and drew a chair forward. In less than six hours he had run up and down the scale of emotions. He had looked despair in the face till the sudden sight of Chilcote had lifted him to the skies; since then surprise had assailed him in its strongest form; he had known the full meaning of the word "risk," and from every contingency he had come out conqueror. He bent over the chair as he pulled it forward to hide the expression in his eyes.

"Sit down," he said gently.

Eve moved toward him. She moved slowly, as if half afraid. Many emotions stirred her—distrust, uncertainty and a curious half dominant, half suppressed questioning that it was difficult to define. Loder remembered her shrinking coldness, her reluctant tolerance on the night of his first coming, and his individuality, his certainty of power, kindled afresh. Never had he been so vehemently himself; never had Chilcote seemed so complete a shadow.

As Eve seated herself he moved forward and leaned over the back of his chair. The impulse that had filled him in his interview with Renwick, that had goaded him as he drove to the reception, was dominant again.

"I tried to say something as we drove to the Bramfells' tonight," he began. Like many men who possess eloquence for an impersonal cause, he was brusque, even blunt, in the stating of his own case. "May I hark back, and go on from where I broke off?"

Eve half turned. Her face was still puzzled and questioning. "Of course." She sat forward again, clasping her hands.

"Do you remember the day, three weeks ago, that we talked together in this room—the day a great many things seemed possible?"

This time she did not look round. She kept her gaze upon the fire.

Mr. Sheppard said that the relations of the business men in the above town were harmonious since the annual excursion was held, and said it would be an excellent move on the part of the Peterborough merchants to consider the matter of having a yearly trip of the same nature.

ADDRESS MADE A DEEP IMPRESSION

The attendance at the evangelistic meeting last night was very gratifying to those in charge. The tent was filled and the excellent address given by Mr. Soper made a deep impression. After refusing food for over five days, Miss Roberts, one of the militant suffragists sent to Holloway last week, was liberated yesterday. She is now under a doctor's care.

EXPERT APPROVES OF THE PLANS

For the Smith Street Bridge—Speakeas at Meeting of Board of Trade Favors the Two By-laws—Pro. Young Gave Instructive Address

There appears to be bright prospects for carrying the Smith street bridge and street extensions by-laws. The two measures were discussed at an open meeting of the Board of trade last evening and there was no opposition to the by-laws which will go before the ratepayers on July 29th. It might be stated that the Smith street bridge by-law is for $32,500 and the Street Extensions and Water Front by-law provides for $21,500.

The feature of the meeting was an address by Prof. C. R. Young, of the engineering department of the School of Practical Science, Toronto, on the use of reinforced concrete in bridge construction. Prof. Young has made a special study of this line of work and his address was exceedingly instructive. The lecture was illustrated by a number of fine stereopticon views of some bridges in different parts of the world, which have been constructed of reinforced concrete. Bridges of various designs were shown and the audience got a clear idea of what a well constructed concrete structure looks like. Prof. Young pointed out how a concrete bridge should be designed to give it an appearance of beauty. This was a side of bridge construction, he said, that was too often neglected, especially in towns and smaller cities.

The chair was occupied by Ald. G. A. Gillespie, the president of the Board of Trade. After Secretary Quartermaine had read the minutes of the last meeting, the president explained the object of the meeting and introduced Prof. Young.

After a few introductory remarks Prof Young said that reinforced concrete possessed advantages over timber and steel for bridge construction. Concrete was not a new material. It had been used for centuries. In fact the dome of the Pantheon was of concrete and it had stood for 1900 years without showing a crack. Reinforced concrete, however, was a comparatively new material. Concrete supported by steel rods or girders commenced to be used for bridge construction about the beginning of the last century and it had grown rapidly in popularity. It was used extensively in England before it came into general use in the United States. About 1867 it commenced to be used to a large extent in the United States and since that time hundreds of reinforced concrete bridges had been built in that country and in Canada.

At this stage views were shown of a bridge in Philadelphia 233 feet in length, of the Cleveland bridge over the Rocky river and the Hudson Memorial arch bridge in New York, 708 feet in length.

Prof. Young pointed out wherein reinforced concrete was superior to steel and timber for bridge construction.

Reinforced concrete possessed both strength and tenacity. The tension pressure was much greater than that of plain concrete. This had been proven conclusively by tests that had been made by reputable engineers all over the world. The speaker explained tests which had been made to decide this point.

Concrete became stronger with age. This was one of the great advantages. A bridge built of concrete was much stronger at the end of the first year than it was when first ready for traffic. It increased in strength afterwards, but not at such a rapid rate. Concrete possessed permanency. The effect of the elements upon it was practically nil. In this way it had a great advantage over steel and timber.

Prof. Young referred to the Victoria bridge at Montreal in this connection. The piers of this structure were built between 1855 and 1860 and when the bridge was rebuilt a few years ago the piers were as good as ever and were used for the new structure.

The life of the average timber bridge, Prof. Young said, was twelve or fifteen years; after that it needed repairs. The minimum life of a steel bridge was about fifty years. A concrete bridge was good for a hundred years at least, and the money that would have to be spent on it was practically nil.

Enough attention was not paid in smaller cities and towns to appearance in constructing bridges. A bridge should be in harmony with its surroundings. It was a shame to mar beautiful scenery with a bridge that was not artistic. Several views were thrown on the canvas showing the advisability of having a bridge in harmony with the environs.

Getting down to local conditions, Prof. Young said the estimated cost of a steel bridge at Smith street was $30,000. The concrete structure would cost $32,500. When the permanency of the two types was considered, and the fact that the steel bridge would have to be painted every two years at a cost of from $400 to $500, was also looked at, it was plain that Peterborough did a wise thing in deciding to have the reinforced concrete bridge.

If the proposed Smith street bridge was properly designed there was no danger of failure. Prof. Young said he had examined the plans prepared by City Engineer Hay, and considered them excellent. The ratepayers of Peterborough would make no mistake in passing the Smith Street Bridge By-law.

MR. DUMBLE.

Mr. D. W. Dumble expressed delight at the address of Prof. Young. It was an education to him and secured at very small cost. In the views he had seen some of the nicest bridges in America. All the world was now interested in concrete. He believed the ratepayers would carry the Smith Street Bridge By-law. He wanted to have a structure that would be permanent and beautiful.

ALD. PHELAN.

Ald. Harry Phelan, chairman of the Board of Works, explained the two by-laws. The Board of Works and the Council had spent a great deal of time considering the Smith street situation, and he was confident that they had arrived at the right decision. The money to be raised by the Street Extensions and Water Front By-law, had been expended to good purpose, and if it was not raised by by-law it would come out of current revenue, which would mean increased taxation. This was far from desirable.

Ald. J. J. Turner spoke in support of the two by-laws, and urged the ratepayers to vote for them.

Mr. William Langford said he would support the Smith Street By-law.

Another gentleman in the audience said he lived in the vicinity of the Smith St. bridge, and it was necessary that a new structure should be built.

Ald Turner seconded Mr. Dumble's vote of thanks to Prof. Young, and it was carried. A vote of thanks was also tendered Mr. Fiske.

Ald. Turner referred to the good work of the Board of Trade in bringing these matters before the ratepayers.

Adjournment then took place.

The meeting was largely attended.

WILL INSPECT ISOLATION HOSPITAL AT MONTREAL

Dr. McPherson, Mr. Blackwell and Ald. Bradburn Appointed to go to Montreal For the Purpose of Securing Information in Connection With Proposed Isolation Hospital Here

A meeting of the Property Committee was held yesterday afternoon, when the members present were Ald. Bradburn, chairman; Mayor Rush, Ald. McIntyre, Ald. Morgan and Ald. Duncan. Ald. Bradburn stated that the meeting had been called to discuss the plans for the proposed Isolation Hospital. He suggested that in view of the low state of the finances at the disposal of the committee, it was important that no unnecessary expenses be incurred, and although an up-to-date system would be required to be installed, the construction of the building itself should be of an attractive but inexpensible nature. Dr McPherson had visited the Isolation hospital in Montreal, and recommended it as a very suitable one. Should the committ deem it necessary to send anyone in quest of information, it would be well to visit that city. The members present were in favor of sending Mr. Blackwell, the architect who is preparing the plans, to Montreal, in order that he might secure information which would be beneficial to him. In this way the hospital to be built here would be of an up-to-date design, but much lesser cost than, if the information were not secured.

Ald. Duncan remarked that while he was not in favor of sending deputations out of the city, it was necessary that the hospital be built in such a way as would reflect credit to the city, and he thought that by sending a deputation to Montreal it would mean a saving in the cost of construction.

It was suggested that Dr. McPherson and the chairman, Ald. Bradburn, accompany Mr. Blackwell to Montreal.

Ald. Morgan then moved that Mr. Blackwell, Dr. McPherson, and Ald. Bradburn be appointed a committee to go to Montreal to inspect the Isolation Hospital there for the purpose of securing information there. The motion was seconded by Ald. McIntyre and carried.

The committee appointed will go to Montreal as soon as possible.

OTONABEE'S OLDEST RESIDENT CELEBRATES 97TH BIRTHDAY

Mr. Robt. Hope, of Villiers, a pioneer of Otonabee, and probably the oldest resident of the township, celebrated his 97th birthday last Sunday, July 18th, at his residence in Otonabee.

Mr. Hope, in spite of his advanced years, is still active and takes a great interest in his surroundings. He has lived in this part of the township nearly all his life, saw Otonabee when it was a wilderness and can tell you many stories of pioneer life. Mr. Hope always cast his lot politically with the Conservative party, being able to vote at every election in recent years.

BLACKLISTER IN POLICE COURT

Witnesses State He Was Intoxicated But the Defence Claim They can Prove He Was Sober--Case Enlarged

A charge of being found under the influence of liquor was preferred against a blacklister this morning at the police court. He pleaded not guilty.

The case was enlarged until Friday morning, when witnesses for the defence will be on hand.

License Inspector Stewart stated that on the morning of July 12th he passed the defendant who acted as if intoxicated and his breath smelled strongly of liquor. Other persons had drawn his attention to the fact that accused had been intoxicated in the past, and he knew that he had been getting liquor.

Another witness stated that on the night of the 12th of July, about ten o'clock, while standing in front of his own house, the defendant passed and was intoxicated. He was being taken home by a companion.

Defendant's counsel asked that the case be enlarged as he could bring witnesses to court who would state that the defendant was not intoxicated on the night mentioned, and this was granted by the magistrate.

DOG QUESTION TO BE SETTLED

Two Young Men Mixed up in Dog Deal Will Untangle the Problem Friday Morning

Sidney Crouter was charged with not having a tag for a dog which he owned, but it turned out in Police Court this morning that Roland Butcher was the present owner.

When asked by the Magistrate to explain matters Butcher said he had bought the dog and tag from Harry Brault.

Chief Rezsel knew that Brault had bought a tag, but had a suspicion that there were several dogs mixed up in the case so Brault and Butcher will be asked to attend court Friday morning and fight it out between them.

"JOY-RIDING" ON BICYCLES NOW

Bicycle "joy riders" have made their appearance, and if they are not careful they will be travelling in the company of the police.

On Monday night a young man left his wheel standing on Charlotte street near the English Company's canoe works, while he was in a house in the vicinity for a few minutes. When he came out the bicycle was gone and he has not seen it since. It was a "Regi," with a 24 inch frame, black enamelled, has Morrison coaster brake and reversible handle bars.

The police and owner of the wheel would be obliged for any information about the missing bike.

A JOY RIDE WAS SPOILED

An amusing incident occurred on Hunter street to-day between 12 and 1 o'clock, when a stranger, who was feeling unusually confident and cheerful on account of too great a familiarity with the stimulating cup, climbed into another man's auto and sat at the helm awaiting a trip around the town. The intruder was talking to three or four young men and was in very hilarious mood when one of them asked him if he would not have a ride in his car. A machine was standing in front of the group and the inebriated one accepted the invitation and had just seated himself comfortably in the auto when the real owner arrived. The was considerable indignation on the part of both principals when a dispute took place and an immediate vacation was ordered.

Immediately afterwards the Seagramized individual walked into an office with a guest of the moment and was under the impression that he had struck the cafe department of an hotel until he was shown the way to the pavement.

Miss Edna Armstrong has returned home after an enjoyable trip to the Canadian West. She arrived in Peterborough last evening.

WHAT WILL BE DONE ON THE LAST DAY OF JULY?

On the last day of this month the three months' extension of time to sell out which was granted the four hotel proprietors, whose licenses were cancelled by the License Commissioners, will have expired. The hotels concerned in the matter are, the Peterborough House, Grand Hotel, Queen's Hotel and the Cavanagh ers are not saying anything in regard to the matter, but it is understood that a meeting will be held by this body within the next few days. So far none of the proprietors have made any move, and the question whether a further extension will be granted or not cannot be ascertained.

GRATEFUL RECOGNITION OF MRS. MAXWELL'S GIFT

bytery, Honan, China, in grateful acknowledgement of the generous contribution of Mrs Mary A. Maxwell, of this city, to the missionary work at China, has been received by Mrs. Maxwell and handed to the press for publication by Rev. J. G. Potter, pastor of St. Andrew's.

The letter is an evidence of the fact that the committees of the church entrusted with missionary funds are faithful in the discharge of their trust, and that the whole amount donated finds its way to its destination. It is to be hoped that there may be other friends who will find it in their hearts to assist in the very needy work of China or India, where so much depends on what the Christian church does now.

The letter is as follows:—

Weihweifu, June 4, 1909.

Mrs. Mary A. Maxwell,
Peterborough, Canada.

Dear Madame,—I have been instructed by the Presbytery to send to you the following minute extracted from the minutes of Honan Presbytery—

"It was resolved that the Presbytery of Honan feels deeply grateful to Almighty God for the way in which our urgent needs for fuller educational equipment have been met At a time when China is changing so rapidly and moving on into unknown paths, a grave responsibility is laid upon the church to guide the young in their pursuit of knowledge, to improve them with an enlightened Christian education, and to train them for efficient service for Jesus Christ among their fellowmen. Mrs. Maxwell's generous gift of $5,000 for the High and Normal schools, at Weihweifu is most opportune, making possible the erection of commodious and substantial buildings, and greatly assisted the development of our educational policy. The very sincere thanks of the Presbytery are therefore extended to Mrs. Maxwell."

It gives me great pleasure personally to convey to you the thanks of Presbytery, and I can assure you that this gift will be the source of untold blessing to many. The young men attending the High and Normal schools at present are a splendid lot of young fellows, the Chinese premises at present used for the school are very inadequate and unsuitable Now, however, owing to your generosity, we can look forward to better things.

Faithfully yours,
W. HARVEY GRANT,
Presbytery Clerk.

As soon as some of them were released, two were arrested by the Ottawa police, and on Monday will face a charge of stealing $200 from John Stokes. Six are concerned in this and to-day most of them were let out on bail.

SPORTING NEWS

LINES ON SPORT

Toronto lost a game to Newark yesterday in the 12th innings. The score was 11—10 and both teams used three pitchers, who were all to the bad.

Christy Matthewson had a finger broken yesterday in the New York-St. Louis game, in which the Giants were beaten 4—3.

Efforts are being made to have Bobby Kerr, Cartmell and Walker brought together in Montreal this fall.

Kid Malding made two hits in one innings yesterday when Toronto scored six runs.

Langford has accepted the original offer of a guarantee of $5,000 win or lose, and $1,000 for training expenses, made by the promoters of the fight between Langford and Ketchell. The bout will take place on Labor Day in Ely, Nevada.

Stanley Ketchell is reported to be hitting up the pace that kills. Prosperity is probably too much for the Michigan assassin.

Jimmie McAleer, of the St. Louis Americans, has turned down an offer of $10,000 from the Highlanders for the services of Rube Waddell.

In the New York-Detroit game yesterday the Highlanders got three runs in the seventh without a hit or without putting the ball outside the infield.

THE RING

San Francisco, July 20.—Willus Britt, manager of Stanley Ketchel, received a wire last night from his New York representative to the effect that Sam Langford has decided to accept the terms of the Nevada promoters for a match with the middleweight champion at Ely on Labor Day. Langford had until last night refused to accept the offer of Ted Hall, and it is presumed that the Boston fighter finally decided that the $5,000 was ample remuneration for the chance of fighting for the title.

SPORTING TALK

Yabbie Flaherty has received an attractive inducement to go up to the silver country and pitch for a team next Saturday. Should Flaherty decide to go, the T.A.H. will be placed in an awkward position in the game with the P.A.C. team on that date.

TOM FLANAGAN FORMS CLUB

Following His Resignation From the I.C.A.C. —Would Join C. A. A. U.

Last night's News says:—

Good-bye, Irish.

The Irish-Canadian Athletic Club has practically gone to the wall, following the resignation of Tom Flanagan, the erstwhile manager of the club. Flanagan has met with considerable criticism by members of the Executive, who, perhaps, did little else than complain, and Tom naturally grew tired of this. Flanagan was the working head of the organization, and now intends to form a new club to be known as the Scarboro Beach Athletic Club, which will be composed of all the old athletes.

Tom Flanagan has been made president, with Elwood Hughes secretary, and the work of the runners will continue as in the past, with the exception that they will compete at the different meets under the new name.

The Scarboro Beach Athletic Club has applied to the O.A.A.U. for membership in that body, and their application will undoubtedly be considered. The new club, with Skene, Pearce, Black, Marsh, Hitchin, Bowes and others, will continue to be a big factor in the athletic world, although it is a pity the name of the Irish-Canadians is to be dropped.

THE NOTHERENS WERE TOO FAST

At Nicholls Oval this morning two West Toronto baseball teams, the north and south, played an interesting game, the North Ends winning by 16—7. The battery on the victorious nine dished up an assortment calculated to stop Hans Wagner, while the South End pair were touched up rather freely.

General George Hallock, who is an authority on baseball, and threshing machines, handled the indicator to his own satisfaction.

BASEBALL

Norwood, July 20.—The Methodists played an interesting game of baseball with the Catholic-Baptist team on Friday night, winning by 9—4. The winning runs were scored in the second innings, when with one run and bases full Scriver soaked out a liner for a single, and reached second on an error. In an effort to catch the runner at third a high throw resulted in clearing the bases, giving the Methodists a lead of 3 runs. The Catholics scored 3 in the next three innings, but the Methodists came at them again, scoring 4 more in their half and blanking the Catholics. The game was one of the best yet played this season, giving the Methodists a nice lead for first place.

Batteries—Methodists, Weldon and Hendren. Catholics—Doherty and Kempt.

On Monday night of this week the Presbyterian and English aggregation put a crimp in Methodist hopes of winning the league without a defeat by beating them 6—3. It was a hotly contested game, the result being in doubt to the end. This makes these two teams tied for first place, and the play-off is sure to be one worth seeing. Large crowds saw both games.

A picked team of the Church League plays Hastings on Wednesday afternoon, and many supporters are going to accompany the team and hope to see them win.

THIS YEAR'S FIREWORKS.

Great Double Bill at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto.

What will the fireworks at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, be this year? That is the question that has been fired at the Exhibition management for months past, and at last they are in position to answer. The fireworks this year will be practically a double bill. The historical spectacle selected for this year is "The Siege of Kandahar," and it will be put on on a scale in keeping with the military nature of this year's attractions, and that will do honor to "Bobs," the darling of the British army and the hero of the historic event.

But the Dreadnought has occupied so large a share of public attention of late that it could not be overlooked by a management that always caters to the popular demand, so a second, or it might rather be called the principal feature of the evening will be "The Battle of the North Seas," in which the Dreadnoughts will sail into the arena and engage in the most realistic naval battle ever fought in times of peace.

A Heroic Dog.

Near the Hospice of St. Bernard, Switzerland, is a monument to Barry, one of the dogs, which always interests tourists. This animal died some years ago, and a writer in the Wide World Magazine tells his story: "During the ten years he was at the hospice he saved the lives of forty persons who had lost their way in the snow. On one occasion he found a child ten years old lying in the snow under the influence of the fatal slumber which precedes death. The dog warmed the child with its breath and then roused it from sleep by licking it. This much accomplished, Barry by lying down on its side gave the child an obvious invitation to get upon its back and ride. The child did so and was carried to the monastery. Barry was killed by some unknown person, probably in mistake." The inscription on the monument is: "Barry, the Heroic. Saved the Lives of Forty Persons and Was Killed by the Forty-first."

THIEVES GET AWAY WITH TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS WORTH OF DIAMONDS

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, July 21.—A big diamond robbery occurred here between one and two o'clock this afternoon, when four men entered McMillen's jewelkry establishment on Spark street, right in the central business section, and took two trays out of the window, in each of which were fifty diamond rings.

The four entered the store at once. One asked to see nail files, another to see umbrellas, and the other two "worked the theft"

At 2.15 it was said one of the clerks had identified a man, and that the police are now on a train between Central and Union station, with the possibility of making an arrest.

The same firm was robbed of $2,000 in much the same way two years ago.

It is estimated that the jewellery stolen to-day was worth from eight thousand to ten thousand dollars.

COIN IN HIS VEST POCKET SAVED PROSPECTOR FROM A REVOLVER BULLET

Mr. Walter Smith, of this city, showed a coin to the Review to-day that was responsible for saving his life. Mr. Smith has just returned from a trip to New Liskeard, where he has mining interests.

On last Tuesday evening he was passing through a small grove near his claims, when a bullet from a revolver struck him on the coin which was in his vest pocket and placed a dent in it and twisted it out of shape. Another prospector was trying a new revolver at the time and did not think anybody was near by. Mr. Smith was walking behind a growth of cedar and the bullet whistled through the bushes and hit the coin, which was an ordinary Canadian cent, but which proved of unusual value under the circumstances.

Mr. Smith is visiting his parents and will go to Hastings county on a prospecting trip before he returns to New Liskeard.

JUDGE ROGER RETURNS AFTER TWO MONTHS TRIP

To England, Scotland and the Continent—Land Owners Very Bitterly Opposed to New Budget Measure—An Interesting Visit

Judge Roger, who was recently appointed County Judge of Durham and Northumberland counties, has returned to the city after an interesting two months' trip to England, Scotland and the continent. He was accompanied by his niece, Mrs. A. M. Smith, of Chicago, and left Peterborough on May 22nd. He reached Montreal on Saturday on the "Victorian" coming from there to Peterborough.

Judge Roger and his niece visited a great many places in England and Scotland. They did not stay very long at any one city, their longest visit to any one place being a two weeks' stay at London. During his absence Judge Roger met Professor Cameron, of Edinburg's University, a brother of Mr. John Cameron, of the local Customs House.

He talked interestingly to the Review on the public movements that are agitating the motherland and said that the matter which was receiving the greatest public attention in England and Scotland at the present time was the question of land taxation on which the budget is based. It is causing the keenest conflict in political circles and it is going to divide the public on somewhat new lines.

The landed interests feel that they have been attacked in the most vital point by the portion of the budget, which provides for land taxation.

Heretofore there has been no very strict investigation of individual land holdings and there have been no land registries or other means by which the public could investigate these matters closely. The fact that the new budget will involve a systematic investigation into the land holdings and the valuation of these holdings is the feature that the land owners so bitterly resent as being an interference with their private rights and an exposure to their personal affairs which they content no Government has a right to subject them to.

Judge Roger did not care to discuss his appointment to the bench which was made after he had left the city, on his voyage to the Old Country. He has not accepted the appointment yet but will leave for Cobourg shortly on business in connection with his new judicial office.

OH YOU WISE OLD OWL!

When Mr. Fred Hunter, of Otonabee, went out to have a look at his hen coops this morning he received such a shock that made him doubt for a minute if he was not still in the land of dreams. The surprise was caused by an inspection of a large coop in the yard, which had contained a valuable hen the night before, but then was occupied by a fine speckled owl of immense proportions. The intruder had managed to get in at an opening at the side of the coop and make a feast of its occupant, but when the time arrived for an exit the wise old owl was up against it and could not bring herself down to the desired size that would permit her departure through the opening. Mr. Hunter brought the coop and the imprisoned owl to the city this morning with the intention of showing his prize to Mr. Fleming, but found a purchaser in Mr. Fred McCluskey, who now is the proud possessor of the bird.

FELL FROM THE SECOND STOREY

Bricklayer Had Narrow Escape From Injury—Struck Pile of Soft earth

This afternoon one of the bricklayers working on the new house being constructed for Mr. J. B. Knapman, at the corner of George and Dublin streets, had an unpleasantly close call to serious injury.

He was walking on a scaffold at the second storey, when he lost his footing and fell to the ground. He, fortunately, alighted on a pile of soft earth, and with the exception of being somewhat shaken up, he escaped without injury.

Big Manufacturers' Display.

The display in the Manufacturers' Building at the Canadian National Exhibition this year promises to eclipse anything ever seen there before. Every inch of space in the big building, which covers two acres of ground, was applied for three months before the opening of the Fair, and as more applications are pouring in every day, the management have been able to select exhibitors who put in an attractive display. There is no better evidence of the growing popularity of the Canadian National than the anxiety of the manufacturers to display their wares there.

FRANK'S GREAT ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN AND WHAT HAPPENED TO THE FOURTH OF JULY GRAND PRIZE.

BY ARTHUR MORGAN LANGWORTHY

(Copyright, 1909, by the New York Herald Co. All

FRANK WILLIAMS and his younger brother, Bill, were among the crowd gathered around the melancholy remains of the dirigible balloon Zepher, which had come to the usual sad end of its kind—total smash.

Some clever advertising man had adopted the novel idea of having a balloon constructed with the "balloon envelope" or gas bag in the form of a long brown loaf of Vienna bread. On either side of the loaf was painted in big white letters "Eat Zepher Bread."

The aeronaut's instructions were to make an ascension at every county fair in the State. He threw out a thousand sealed envelopes on each ascent. One envelope contained a check for $25, nine other envelopes had checks for smaller amounts down to $1, while the remaining nine hundred and ninety envelopes contained advertisements of the bread. The plan so far had been a tremendous success. Every farm hand, every country boy and girl in the State had been engaged in chasing the fluttering white envelopes as they came sailing out of the sky.

"Bill," said Frank, "now I want to ask you, as a good business man, what does our lemonade business need? You know how hard we've worked ever since Uncle Mark let us build our stand down on the common. Trade is getting worse and worse. Next Wednesday'll be the Fourth and there'll be a lot of people out at the Fourth of July games on the common, and I say that'll be our chance to make good."

Bill did most of the work at the firm's business establishment the next few days, while Frank busied himself in the little outhouse workshop at home he called his "balloon shed"—for it was his idea to conduct a great balloon advertising campaign of his own!

The first public move in the new scheme occurred when the following notice appeared in the Clarion, the village paper:—

GRAND FOURTH OF JULY
BALLOON ASCENSION!
You are invited to be present at the inaugural ascent of the Balloon
ZEPHERINO.

Don't fail to see this marvellous spectacular event, and share in the shower of good things

FREE FROM OUT THE SKY!

Ascent at 10 A. M. Wednesday, July 4, next, at Williams & Co.'s Stand, on the Common.

PRIZES! PRIZES! PRIZES!

The days swiftly passed until the morning of the Fourth dawned.

Frank's "ad" campaign must have had some effect, judging from the crowd of children that began to collect early around the front of his stand.

The throng of spectators gathered around Frank, who delivered a little address in which he briefly thanked them for their interest and attendance, and then he got right down to business.

"Ladies and gentlemen, it's not for pure pleasure we have patriotically assembled here this Glorious Fourth, it's for mutual profit; you're going to get something out of it—and so am I. All hands—ready to inflate!"

"All hands" consisted of Bill and Joe Wheeler, another of Frank's trusted confidants, who sprang to the flat round pile of tissue paper resting on the ground. This was the balloon envelope. Joe, who was very tall for his age, lifted up the top and slowly straightened to his full height, while Bill pulled down the bottom. As the folds of the balloon envelope straightened out the onlookers began to shout.

"Why, it's a lemonade glass!" and, sure enough, Frank had taken the hint from the "Zepher," whose loaf of bread shaped envelope made such a hit. Frank had constructed the Zepherino in the form of a glass. It was simple enough to make by using a small barrel hoop as a bottom frame to paste the tissue paper around, leaving the inside of the hoop open. The top framework of the balloon envelope consisted of a large barrel hoop, just as a glass is larger in diameter at top than bottom. This was roofed over air tight with a strong layer of white tissue, which overlapped the edges and extended six inches down the sides, where it met the lemon colored tissue, which represented the lemonade in the glass. (See drawing.) On the yellow part was pasted in big red paper letters:—

"DRINK ZEPHERINO LEMONADE."

A wire stretched across the centre of the bottom hoop had a closely wrapped roll of cotton rags around the middle of it. This roll was soaked in alcohol, and when lighted the hot air would rush upward into the balloon envelope, thus inflating it and causing it to rise.

Then Frank brought the next object of interest in the balloon's equipment before the admiring crowd.

"There are five prizes somewhere among those fifty envelopes, ladies and gentlemen—prizes that you can bet will make your mouth water. And what are they? Think how hot these summer days are getting! Think how thirsty you all are! These prizes just hit the spot. One prize of one drink of the famous 'Zepherino' lemonade, one prize of three drinks, one five, one of ten and THE GRAND FOURTH OF JULY PRIZE—it's well worth striving for—FIFTY DRINKS!"

Then Frank started to attach the prize basket to the balloon, leaving his hearers stunned by the magnitude of what they stood to win. By looking at the picture you will see how Frank arranged for the discharge of the envelopes in the air. Figure 1 shows the basket and its four weights at each corner, attached to the balloon. Figure 2 shows heavy cords, also soaked in alcohol, burned away, and how the four corner weights caused the basket to overturn in the air and spill out its contents.

Space forbids going into the thrilling details of the successful ascent of the Zepherino. Frank's plans succeeded perfectly. The Zepherino rose to a height of several hundred feet and then floated across the common and out over the prairie, followed by the shouting crowd of children, all waiting expectantly for the great moment to arrive when they could scramble for the prizes.

Finally, above Deacon Hunter's farm the cords burned through, down dropped the envelope basket, out pitched the envelopes, and the strong breeze carried them in all directions. The flying balloon was completely forgotten in the rush and disappeared a speck in the distance. You can imagine what a time there was then as the excited boys and girls chased those fluttering envelopes, leaping into the air to catch them as they fell. At last, after several fights among the bigger boys, the envelopes were all pounced on, the lucky winners of four prizes gleefully announced their discovery, while the rest envied them. The came the question, Who won the grand prize?

After a fifteen minutes' hunt a shout came from the direction of Deacon Hunter's cow pasture, and the crowd rushed over there, to find one of the small boys pointing to what was undoubtedly the missing envelope. It lay a small white square on the grass about fifty yards from the fence. But why didn't that small boy get it? It wasn't because he didn't want to. Oh, no. But he had a mighty good reason, just the same.

This was the Deacon's big bull, Black Pete, whose aversion to intruders was extremely well known to the youthful population of the neighborhood.

Black Pete stood guard before the fence, his little red eyes glowering wickedly at the children behind it as he snorted and pawed the ground.

"Well, there's the grand prize! Why don't somebody go and take it?" laughed Frank, I am afraid, rather sarcastically. No one moved. Black Pete had too much of an aerial reputation. Not that he did any ballooning, but he had helped a boy ascend as high as a tree once, and nobody seemed to want this kind of Fourth of July ascension, much as they were interested in ballooning.

This disgusted Frank, who told the crowd what he thought of their bravery and then announced he'd do it himself. The crowd, acting under Frank's orders, quietly disappeared, leaving Frank hidden behind the fence. Then they ran along behind some trees and again approached the field, this time from the opposite side, yelling and hooting to attract Black Pete's attention.

They did. Black Pete galloped across the narrow pasture, bellowing defiance at what he thought was a new attack on his home privacy. This gave Frank his chance; he climbed the fence and darted toward the envelope, reached it, hastily crammed it into his coat pocket and started to return. So did Black Pete, who must have had eyes in the back of his head. Frank never knew a bull could run so fast before. A great warning cry caused him to look over his shoulder about fifty feet from the safety of the fence.

Black Pete had nearly reached him. Then Frank played matador. He had no chance to gain the fence now. Quick as a flash he peeled off his jacket and dodged to one side, throwing the coat over Black Pete's head as he rushed at him. Frank started to run again, but the coat on Black Pete's horns only covered one eye and poor Frank suddenly rocketed into the air, cleared the fence a flying tangle of working arms and legs and landed on the turf with his breath completely jarred out of him, but fortunately unhurt.

Frank quickly recovered his scattered senses and watched Black Pete circling round and round the field with the coat, in the pocket of which was the grand prize, on his horns, and as he looked a solution of the great problem suddenly dawned on him. He pulled out his watch, which still ticked away in spite of the late shock, and addressed the crowd:—

"I see Black Pete is still hanging on to the grand prize. Now I want to be fair. I'll give you fellows half an hour to take it. If by that time no one has taken it I declare Black Pete the winner!"

A big howl arose at this. Frank was again accused of unfairness, a charge which he indignantly spurned. The half hour was consumed in bickerings and squabbles. Frank denied he intended to evade giving the prize, but refused to explain until, watch in hand, he solemnly declared Black Pete the winner. It was a most unpopular decision, if the groans of the disappointed contestants meant anything.

What! A bull drink lemonade? Frank stoutly maintained no bull would refuse Zepherino, and, accompanied by the crowd, marched back to [illegible] for payment. He found Bill, whom he had left to run the stand, doing a great business. Then the story of who won the grand prize spread all over the village and by the time Frank was ready to fetch Black Pete his first instalment he had to almost fight his way through the crowd of laughing spectators.

Probably no bull ever had a more appreciative audience to see him take his first drink of lemonade. If Frank had any doubts as to Black Pete's fondness for the refreshment they were dispelled, amid the cheers of onlookers, as Black Pete trotted up to the bucket on the grass and, after an inquiring sniff, gulped down the whole bucketful.

Frank's great day of financial triumph ended gloriously only with the last sputter of the fireworks, for the Evening Clarion had printed one of the funniest stories about Frank's enterprise ever put in the paper. And this boomed business so that Frank had to put on an extra force to help him out that night. Business even continued to be so good after the Fourth that he and Bill opened a second stand in the village. And it must have been a wise move, for up to date there is a steadily increasing demand for "Zepherino, the great bull tamer lemonade."

Where they make all kinds of cut-outs
For newspaper girls and boys.

And the paper toys they make there
Are the nicest that are made.

And at sundown when the sunshine
Gilds the window glass so bright
You can see the Cut-Out workmen
Going home to spend the night.

Let's pretend that you're a workman
In the factory's employ,

Birthday Reflections.

I've learned most all there is to know;
I'm growing wise and old;
And now for ten eternal years
I've done what I was told.

So do you wonder that I wish
That for variety
My mother'd do what pleases her
And I what pleases me?

I shouldn't hurry when I dressed,
Nor when I went to bed;
And nobody would make a fuss
If lessons were not said.

I'd start my dinner with dessert,
And I should always run
Without a hat upon my head
Beneath the hottest sun.

I'd never go to dancing school,
And I should choose to play
With all the interesting boys
That mother sends away.

But these are dreams. I cannot live
My life like other men;
There's no delight in growing old—
Nor one in being ten.

Among the Marsh Pipers---Our Common Frogs and Their Cousins.

By W. Seward Wallace.

BIRDS and squirrels are such demonstrative, beautiful creatures that they absorb much attention when we are in the country. Yet we ought not to forget that our beautiful land is favored with natural dwellers in woodland and meadow who are not birds or bunnies but who are nevertheless highly interesting.

Our true frogs are those that live in the water itself, or near it, and not on land or in trees. We will probably see first the common leopard frog and the pickerel frog, both ardent songsters of marsh and swamp. It seems puzzling that a frog should have four legs and no tail, while their tiny babies have a long fine tail and no legs. But as they grow and grow their tails become shorter, while the soft skin of their sides pushes out into knobs, where the legs are coming beneath. The hind legs appear first as short protrusions; then the front ones come, and gradually the tadpole finds he has four legs as well as a tail. And now he begins to swim less and to climb and cling more. Tail going, becoming smaller and smaller, while the tadpole is getting, oh, so hungry. He is absorbing his tail and his appetite is growing, while the curious gills with which his neck has been fringed prettily all along now wither up. Finally he looks as much like a frog as can be, except that he still has a very short tail. His body has shortened up some too, while the absurd little legs begin to grow long and strong. It is at first a race between the front and the hind legs and between gills and tail. But the "tails have it," while the hind legs soon outrun the front ones. The last stage of his growth now commences. He loses all his tail; the front legs are bowed, like a bulldog's, and the hind ones develop enormous muscles, with which later in life he will leap six to eight feet easily. It will take him two or three years to grow up.

Most frogs and toads undergo a similar change, which is called by a long word, metamorphosis. The butterfly grows from a worm by a similar sort of change, in its cocoon, the worm hatching from an egg first.

The pickerel frog you can tell by his handsome back, which is a fine light brown and has two rows of large oblong, square marks down it of darker brown. Along each side of his nose runs a black line. His relative, the leopard, is bright green, or greenish brown sometimes, and his marks are irregular black blotches edged with white, whence his name, the leopard frog. Both these live in ponds and the deep, darkened places in swamps, where the yellow marigolds and the blue water lilies live also. They are by far the noisiest fellows if we except master bullfrog and the rare spade footed toad, whose noise requires separate mention.

Another pretty and familiar frog is the quiet, gentle wood frog, whose scientific name, Rana sylvatica, or the sylvan frog is well earned by his habit of dwelling in the prettiest wooded ponds and damp woods. He is a small, delicate creature, pale reddish brown, nearly plain, but with a broad, almost red band from his mouth to his eye, along the head. His note is feeble, so he has earned the name, the silent, also.

In clear springs, ponds and brooks we will meet almost everywhere east of the prairies a splendid green frog whose white throat and bright eyes will make us love him on sight. He jumps, plump, splash, into the water and then comes up close under the bank, poking his bit of a green nose out, just up to the eyes, and watching us keenly. We can sometimes take a little stick and gently scratch his back without his moving at all, or even quickly put our hand over him; but a noise drives him at once into the deep water.

If you do catch a frog do not hold him too long or pull his legs too hard, but notice his ears. I would wager not one in ten boys or girls could find them. Oh, yes, he has excellent ears, they can hear under water better than out of it, but they are not like ours. Do you see that round, thin and flat place just behind the [illegible] side? It looks like a drumhead and is his ear. His nostrils are plain, and see his bright, pretty eyes with the black pupils. His feet are webbed for swimming and his toes very long. Watch him jump from your hand far into the pond.

Our bullfrog is the largest frog known in this country, but in other lands are some as large, and in the rocks are found remains of giant frogs beside which he is a pigmy. However, he can grow to be a foot long, which is quite large enough. His commonplace dwelling is a pond, lake or river, where there are reeds and muddy banks. And his famous bass voice is familiar to us all.

Besides these water loving frogs there are frogs which dig into the earth and burrow, called spadefoots, provided with a spur on the hind feet for digging. They are remarkable songsters, making a noise so loud it has been compared to a steam whistle. Spadefooted frogs are very rare indeed, and I have never seen one alive and never heard one whistling.

Tree frogs, in spite of their arboreal habits, are real frogs, and in spring these handsome little chirpers go into the water to lay their eggs. Most of their life, however, is spent in the trees and bushes, and while in Europe there is only one kind of tree frog, we are blessed with no less than five distinct kinds.

The swamp-loving cricket frog, which lives in bushes over the water, is a tree frog in the making. He has not the curious feet lobed at the ends for clinging to leaves and hanging upside down, as his cousins, the real tree frogs, have, but his hind legs are very long and so he is called the cricket frog, and he is a wonderful jumper. Real tree frogs are wonderful creatures, of a bluish green or [illegible] shade color, and he has something of the power of turning in a moment from one tint to another like a chameleon. Some of the frogs are rare, in particular the [illegible] less frog—most frogs have a few small teeth—the swamp cricket frog, [illegible] tinted, and the swamp tree frog.

Unsettled, with occasional showers to-day and Thursday.

FIVE GYPSIES WERE PLACED IN CELLS

Further Developemnts at Ottawa—Said to Have Held up Rival Gypsy—Some More About the Girl Bride

Ottawa, July 20.—Five members of the Mexican band of gypsies who are camped in Hull, crossed over to Ottawa last night and held up Eli Stokes, a member of the Bulgarian band of gypsies, camped on Wellington street, and, it is alleged, at the mouth of a revolver, Stokes was persuaded to hand over a sum amounting to over $200.

The row arose out of the ill-feeling between the two bands over the case in the Hull courts over the alleged selling of Katrina Alexis, the 12 year old Bulgarian gypsy. In the dead of night the Mexican band, who claimed that they had bought the Bulgarian girl, entered the camp of their rivals, and pointing a revolver, demanded Stokes' money. Meanwhile the other members of the raiders had spread among the tents and severely handled some of the sleepers.

TOLD THE POLICE.

This morning Eli Stokes and his wife appeared at the police station and complained that they had been robbed of $200. Detective O'Meara and Detective Ryan went over to Hull and arrested five members of the Hull band. They are Peter Sterio, Cristie Stetman, Peter Michael, Stephen George and Stephen John. They were placed in their caravan and accompanied by the officers were driven to the Ottawa police station.

DRIVEN OUT OF HULL

Mayor Fontaine to-day gave orders to Chief Genest that all the Mexican gypsies camped in Hull are to be compelled to leave the city limits this afternoon. The excitement amongst them incident to their trouble with the Bulgarian camp on the Ottawa side has almost turned Hull upside down. The men and women have been riding up and down the streets in an automobile hired by the day. Well known citizens have not hesitated to stop them on the street and talk to them out of curiosity, and children and others have blocked main street about the hotel where they were staying with a view to getting a glimpse of the strangers. The mayor says that complaints have been made that members of the tribe, men and women, were going in bathing near their camp in a half naked condition.

He said they had proved a nuisance in the city and that he would not stand for their staying any longer.

Mr. L. Cousineau, who has been acting for the Mexicans in their legal troubles in Hull, says that the police have no right to arrest them as vagrants. He claimed that they have become Canadians, being able to produce the necessary papers, and are engaged in buying and selling horses. The women, he claims, have not been telling fortunes or doing anything that would bring them into the hands of the police.

BACK TO PRAENTS

Judge Champagne this morning gave judgment in regard to the 12-year-old girl, Katrina Alexis, who was held by the court in connection with the case against Eli Stokes, of kidnapping her. He allowed her to go with her parents, saying that her detention was illegal. Katrina gave vent to her feelings by crying and kissing her lawyer's hand.

The Mexicans assert that the girl Katrina, concerning whom the rival camps are fighting, is only the adopted child of Miguel Alexis, and his wife, and that her father is in Russia and is a poor man.

"They sell her at Peterborough. She is married and lots of money was spent on her wedding. Even the little children in the camp will tell you that. They now say our men robbed their camps, but it is not true. The police watched our camp last night and all our men were there."

Little Katrina Alexis, the 12-year-old Bulgarian gypsy girl, over the possession of whom certain members of two nomadic tribes are fighting in Hull court, did not have to spend last night in jail, as the authorities had first intended she should.

At the hearing yesterday afternoon, on the application of the parents of the child for a writ of habeas corpus, Judge Champagne decided that while the girl would not have to stay in jail a constable would have to be stationed at the hotel, where the father, mother and daughter are staying.

To Bailiff de Coeli was assigned this duty of seeing that Katrina, who will be an important witness in the case against Eli Stokes, a member of a Mexican gipsy tribe camped in Hull, who is charged with kidnapping her, is not spirited away, or does not disappear from sight until after the trial day.

CALL HER A BIRD.

The Mexicans say that they bought Katrina at Peterborough for 200 pounds sterling, and that she was married to one of their tribe with great ceremony—a ceremony which one of them remarked yesterday, cost about $400. The parents deny that the girl is married.

The court, of course, cannot recognize such a sale as alleged, even if it was made, and some nice points are likely to come up before the case is finished.

LITTLE GIRL CRIED.

Katrina, not grasping the nature of the judgment, got scared when she saw the constable coming over to her at the close of the court, and started to cry piteously, and to hold her mother around the waist for dear life. It took the court officials some time to calm her.

The court room was filled with gypsies, principally of the Mexican clan camping in Hull, the women members of which are exceedingly picturesque, with their vari-colored dresses and head gear, and the strings of gold coins about their necks which rattle as they walk.

SAY SHE WAS HIRED.

As was stated in yesterday's Free Press, Miguel Alexis and his wife claim that they hired Katrina at Peterborough to Stephen George, chief of the Mexican tribe, and that they brought her home after she complained of being tortured in the camp. Eli Stokes, the father alleges, kidnapped her from her home after that and hence the arrest.

THEY ARE RIVALS

The affair has made great rivals of the two camps and the argument yesterday afternoon was a hot one between the lawyers representing the respective parties. Messrs. A. Desjardins and L. A. Leduc for the Bulgarians, contended that the girl was in the custody of Jailer Moussette illegally as no complaint has been made against Katrina, but only against Eli and John Stokes, the latter of whom is charged with using insulting language to a member of the Bulgarian camp. Messrs. L. Cousineau, jr., and H. A. Fortier argued just as determinedly that the court needed the girl as she was an important witness, and that it could not afford to let her altogether out of sight. The judge's decision to parole the child in the company of her parents, and a constable was in the nature of a compromise.

The nomads, or a good number of them came here from Calgary. The women tell fortunes, and are said also to reap fortunes by the business in some of the larger cities. They have been around Ottawa and Hull for several days.

THE MARKET DURING THE WEEK

Peterborough, July 23.—There has been a fair amount of produce brought on the market during the past week. Not much grain is being marketed, but new hay is coming in freely the price being $12 to $16, while good old hay is a little higher.

The high price offered for hogs has brought in some fine bunches this week, $8.00 being paid for them. There is no movement in cattle, as there seems to be practically none to come in at this time.

BURGLARY IN THE MUSEUM OF TORONTO NORMAL SCHOOL

Van Koughnet Collection Stolen—Toronto Institution is Entered by Unknown Person and Seven Valuable Relics Presented by Son of Late Captain Van Koughnet, R.A., Taken.

Toronto, July 22.—Seven invaluable relics were stolen from the Normal School Museum on Monday night, between nine and twelve o'clock, when no watch of the premises is kept.

The collection was presented to the University of Toronto by the late Capt. Edward Barker Van Koughnet a short time before his death at Gibraltar four years ago.

They are a silver trowel, about eight inches long, with wooden handle, a silver cigar case, from the Prince of Wales; a silver jug, about fifteen inches high; a silver snuff-box, about two inches long and one inch wide; a silver inkstand, eight inches long, six inches wide, containing two ink wells with candle placed between them; a combination gold pen and pencil, and a gold tray, made of Kruger sovereigns.

The sovereigns alone are worth $350 face value. It is for their associations and artistic value that the articles are most highly prized.

The Provincial Museum has been located in the Normal School for many years, Dr. Daniel Boyle being the superintendent. Since Dr. Boyle's illness Clarkson W. James, secretary to Hon. Dr. Pyne has been in charge. William H. C. Phillips is the assistant curator. W. A. Poole is guard.

The valuable Van Koughnet collection was carried away from the museum between nine o'clock and midnight Monday last while the alleged custodians dozed dreamily and in peace.

The traces left behind do not stamp the theif as that of an expert in the art of housebreaking, but with the tempting inducement held out to the amateur such accomplishment must have seemed, as they were, superfluous. Also the thief was modest in his taking. There lay open to him $300,000 worth of relics. Many of these would be easily negotiable and with a ration of portability and value much more tempting than those taken.

The seven relics were kept in a case on the second floor. To break open this the thief resorted to tools as antiquated as the methods used to guard the treasure which he sought. With hands (exactly like those presented to Adam at creation) he forced another case and took from it an ancient stone tomahawk. With this he burst open the case containing the collection, and then, confident of not being disturbed, waited to commit silly acts of vandalism, but touched none of the other valuable articles which lay ready to his hand.

UNITED STATES WARNS JAPAN

New York, July 22.—The American to-day claims to be "in a position to state on the highest authority" that the U. S. Government has abandoned its altruistic policy in the Orient and is now determined to deal with China, Japan—and Russia, as represented in Manchuria—in the firmest possible manner.

The role of benevolent advisor is to be replaced by the mailed fist.

The Governments of China, Russia and Japan have been notified of this change of demeanor by the present administration. Ambassador Takahira is returning to Japan unable to approve of Japan's hectoring attitude in Manchuria; and the United States will transfer its Pacific fleet to the Orient.

The United States will demand the restoration of the status quo in Manchuria from all the nations concerned, and that if this status quo is not speedily restored by voluntary and graceful act an acute situation will develop which Congress in regular session will be called upon to consider.

WILL WIND UP A WHITBY COMPANY

Toronto, July 22.—Aaron B. Haines, Whitchurch, a creditor to the amount of $266, has applied for an order winding up the Farmers' Co-operative Harvesting Machine Co., holding that the concern is insolvent within the meaning of the act.

The company was incorporated in 1903, with a nominal capital of $1,000,000, divided into 100,000 $10 shares, of which 14,000 were said to have been subscribed and paid up. The company has a large factory at Whitby and an office in Toronto.

Wm. J. Clokey, president of the company, died on June 19.

SUFFRAGETTES ARE RELEASED

London, July 22.—Six out of fourteen suffragettes, who were recently imprisoned in the Halloway Jail for breaking windows at Whitehall, have been released on account of insubordination, and Herbert Gladstone, Secretary of State for Home Affairs, intimated in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon that it was only a question of a few days untill all of the women would be turned out, as the "hunger strike" has become general.

Since the women were sentenced to close confinement they have been defying all the prison rules, and now Mr. Gladstone said they have taken to kicking and biting the female wardens.

The Home Secretary hotly denounced James Kier Hardie's suggestion that the cells underground were unsanitary.

Attempts made by the supporters of the suffragettes to adjourn the House, in order to discuss "the infliction of a punishment that was dangerous to the health of the ladies," was defeated by the Speaker, who refused to put the motion, on the ground that there had been no departure from the ordinary administration of law.

DEAD MAN HAD $15 IN MOUTH

New York, July 22.—Michael Murphy, an eastside character, was interrupted last night in the operation of prying open the mouth of a corpse in an undertaking establishment. Examination revealed three $5 bills in the dead man's mouth. They had been there since Sunday last when Andrew Ericksen met death in Jamaica Bay.

Murphy said he and Ericksen had lured a drunken sailor to a boat and had robbed him. Then the oar broke, says Murphy, and Ericksen, stuffing part of the money in his mouth to keep it dry, jumped overboard after it, but sank.

MASONS ARE IN SESSION

Grand Lodge Opened in London—A Successful Year

London, July 22.—The Ontario Masonic Grand Lodge opened its annual communication here yesterday.

Grand Master Freed, in his report, said that the revenue for the year just closing was $37,446, and the expenditure $41,349. Grants for benevolent purposes totaled $26,372. The receipts from lodges for the semi-centennial fund during the year were $7,657 and the amount to the credit of the fund on May 31, 1909, was $51,759. Since that time contributions of over $3,000 had been received.

R. W. Bro. Aubrey White, Toronto, in his report on the condition of Masonry, shows 22 districts, with 406 lodges, with a membership of 42,180. Several lodges were instituted during the year, bringing the membership up to 43,763. There were 2,600 initiations during the year. Some criticism is given on the slipshod methods of keeping Masonic records, and the inability of district deputies to ascertain if lodge rooms have been ever dedicated. The frequency of fires draws forth advice to insure Masonic property.

Warrants have been granted for lodges in Bancroft, Granton, Dryden, Haileybury and Cobalt. Dispensations had been granted to Blind River, Harrow, Arden, Smith's Falls, Markdale, Cardinal, Coldwater, St. Mary's, Hamilton and Toronto. Petitions for new lodges at Sutton, Mount Albert and Lombardy had been refused.

THE DEATH OF DR. McINTYRE

Alberta M.P. Dies After Operation for Kidney Trouble

Strathcona, Alta., July 22.—Dr. Wilbert McIntyre, M.P. for Strathcona, succumbed to an acute attack of kidney trouble at 4.40 o'clock yesterday morning. At an early hour Tuesday evening the attendant physician, Dr. J. M. Holson of this city, after consultation with other resident medical men, determined to take the only remaining chance to save the life of the sufferer, and had him removed to the hospital. The patient never rallied from the operation.

By the death of Dr. McIntyre Parliament loses one of its most popular and promising members. Returned at the bye-election in April, 1905, rendered necessary by the appointment of Mr. Peter Talbot to the Senate, Dr. McIntyre brought to the House of Commons a knowledge of public affairs, a grasp of political principles, and a personality which quickly marked him out as a coming man.

LATE DR. WILBERT M'INTYRE.

Mr. McIntyre was forty-three years of age, having been born on July 15, 1867, at Rosedale, Victoria county, Ont. He received his education at Owen Sound Collegiate Institute, and studied medicine at the University of Toronto. Before entering Parliament he was president of the Strathcona Board of Trade and of the Northern Alberta Medical Association.

TEN ARE KILLED BY TIDAL WAVE THAT STRIKES CITY

Only Seawall Protects Texan City From Another Disaster Lower Part of City is Inundated and Exact Loss of Property is Unknown.

Galveston, Texas, July 22.—Fortified behind her 17-foot seawall and elevated to a point above the danger line, Galveston yesterday passed safely through a hurricane that resembled the disastrous storm of 190. Part of the island on which the city is situated was again inundated, the overflowing seawall reaching a height of seven feet or more. That portion of the island which has been protected suffered comparatively little harm.

While the city of Galveston was held safe against the fury of the storm by the two-million-dollar seawall, seven miles in the Gulf, on Tarpon Island, where the storm whipped over the jetty into the bay, ten persons were washed from the rocky promonotories into the Gulf. Boats last night were searching the bay for the bodies, but so far have been unsuccessful.

Sweeping westward, the tropical storm, which had been central over the Gulf of Mexico for 24 hours, struck Galveston shortly after 11 o'clock. The wind attained a velocity of 68 miles an hour, and shifted to the northwest, heaving the waters of Galveston Bay up against the island and flooding that quarter which had not been raised. The water backed up into the main streets of the city, but the damage was confined to the beach front, where bath houses and pleasure piers were swept away. Shipping was undisturbed.

A hurricane for east Texas was forecasted at the district weather bureau in New Orleans early yesterday morning, and warnings were sent out. When wind and rain arrived several hours later they found Galveston prepared. The inhabitants of the few scattered houses in the lower part of the island had already sought safety, and the vessels that had cleared and had prepared to sail were riding at anchor in the bay.

So short was the duration of the storm that the Mallory Line steamer, which was booked to sail for New York shortly after noon, left on schedule time.

SOME IMPORTANT BOOKINGS FOR SEASON AT THE GRAND

THE "NAIAD" AT LAKE SIMCOE

Doing Good Work in Hunting Down the Poachers

Toronto, July 21.—The first fisheries patrol steamer to be placed on Lakes Simcoe and Couchiching, the "Naiad," is now cruising in those waters. She was placed in the water at Lakefield this spring. Last summer she was in Rideau waters, and in the autumn she cruised in the Bay of Quinte and down the St. Lawrence river.

POACHERS OUT OF BUSINESS

Poachers have lost many nets and their uninterrupted solitary reign has been closed summarily. The "Navarch" is now the fisheries patrol in Rideau waters.

"We won't need to restock these lakes if we keep after the poachers," said Mr. E. Tinsley, chief game warder. Anglers won't deplete any lake to such an extent that it has to be restocked."

BIG CROWD AT PICNIC

Conservatives Addressed by Premier Whitney at Jackson's Point Yesterday

Jackson's Point, July 22.—The annual North York Conservative picnic held yesterday, was as great a success as the uncertain state of the weather would permit. All morning though the sky was overcast and rain fell intermittently, the roads leading to the Point were crowded with teams many driving a score of miles from all sections of the riding and from North Ontario and Simcoe. The trolleys brought several thousands from Toronto and York Radial stations, trains had a few thousand from Stouffville, Beaverton, Uxbridge and other points, while 500 or more came in by steamers from Barrie, Allandale and other Lake Simcoe ports. Everyone who knows about crowds says yesterday's turnout exceeded last year's. A modest estimate would place the figure at 12,000 at any rate.

The occasion was graced by the presence of Sir James Whitney, Hon. Dr. Pyne, Hon. James Duff and several members of the Legislature and House of Commons. They addressed the crowd from a stand in a sheltered corner and their words fell on a sea of umbrellas. Not till the program was well advanced did the rain cease.

Premier Whitney was the real "lion of the hour," and, as it was his first visit to a North York gathering since his accession, he was presented with a laudatory address.

In his reply Sir James told how his administration had honestly—and successfully—endeavored to carry out its pledges; and then in concluding, referred to the power question.

SCUFFLE ENDS IN DROWNING

At the 200 and 500 yards' ranges Corpl. Sprinks' score was each time seven bulleyes. At the 600 yards range he made 33, a total of 103. He is using a Lee-Enfield rifle and is not with the team. Last year a score of 103 won this stage.

Sergt. Kelly, Sergt. Smith, Pte. H. D. Gougeon, Staff-Sergt. Bayles and Sergt. Blackburn with scores of 95 shoot off with 96 others for places in the second stage of the King's Prize. This is open only to the 300 taking the highest places in the first stage.

Staff-Sergt. F. Richardson of the 5th C. A. Victoria, is first in the "All-Comers" aggregate, with a score of 167 out of a possible 175. This cup has only once before been captured by a Canadian, when Sergt. Broadhurst took it in 1898 with a score similar to Richardson's.

While passing along the 600 yards range the Duke of Connaught enquired of Col.-Sergt. Freeborn of Hamilton, "Is that the Ross rifle?"

"Yes, sure," answered Freeborn, not knowing the identity of the speaker.

"May I look at it?" asked the duke.

"Sure you can," said Freeborn, and he explained the rifle to the duke, who expressed the opinion "It's a very heavy rifle."

On another range Lord Roberts asked Pte. Gougeon of Winnipeg, "How are you getting on?"

"There's the board," laconically replied Gougeon, jerking his head in the direction of the score board. He didn't recognise Lord Roberts.

Sergt.-Major S. J. Huggins, Sergt. W. Kelly, and Col.-Sergt. J. Freeborn will shoot in the Irish team for the National Challenge Trophy.

Kingston, July 22.—Interviewed yesterday, Mayor Oliver of Toronto, who is here attending the annual meeting of the Oddfellows' Relief Association, stated that he would not be a candidate for re-election to the mayoralty next year.

"I cannot afford to neglect my business any longer," he said. "The mayor's chair is an expensive seat, and I am $20,000 poorer than I would have been if I had continued to look after my own business rather than the city's."

A number of similar policies have been taken out recently by English investors. The rate was equivalent to 8 per cent.

Harness Stealing Conspiracy?

Guelph, July 22.—Wm. Smith pleaded guilty yesterday to several charges of harness stealing from farmers. ## INTENSIVE FARMING

In another ten years intensive farming will be as general as all-over farming is at present, in the older countries. The pioneer cut off his bush and sowed and planted in virgin soil. The soil was in an already fertilized state. Long years of cultivation have changed all that, speaking generally, and the need is felt of putting more into the land and getting more out of a given amount of it than ever before.

Soil bears just in proportion to the chemical properties in it, and their quantity. Where Nature's original endowment of the land has been, or is being exhausted, man must come to the rescue. He will get out of the soil in exact proportion as he puts in.

Recognizing this, the farmers of France and Germany, aided by the state, began experiments in fertilizing, with the result that they found that a given quantity of fertilizer on half the amount of acreage utilized before, would produce just as much, and of a superior quality, with, of course, a tremendous saving of labour and expense. Farms of twenty-five acres were reduced to five acres. Five acres under intensive farming, were found to yield as much as fifty acres under the former method. The scheme was tried in Great Britain. Two acres were found to be all that a man could oversee. In some cases $2,500 an acre were cleared. The saving in distance alone was a matter of immense profit. The system of intensive farming should have been begun here years ago. Instead of farming all British North America, the intensive method, employed in the older settled parts, would have produced infinitely better results directly and indirectly. It would have developed us at home, given us better schools and better roads, better means of communication and transportation everywhere. It would have made the older, and in some cases nearly deserted parts, "blossom as the rose."

Abandoning used-up land for new land afar off is simply one remove from the act of a gypsy. It is crude in the extreme.

Until intensive farming is adopted in all its beauty in Ontario, we shall not be able to keep up with those countries which have adopted it already.

Ontario is going back in population and prosperity. Our people are fewer except in the asylums and houses of correction, our lands are of much less and of constantly decreasing value, and the quality of the product is not up to the level of the best markets. It will be only by government money spent on our own roads, our own bridges, dairies, local railways, cold-storage, etc., that Ontario will be rescued from decay. The west is not needed yet. It will prove the ruin of us. We are expending vast sums on railways, etc., into the wildest of wilds, while our lands are declining in value. The "new policy" is, unfortunately, not a dead failure. It is alive, and more alarming now that we realize it than weevil scale and the tussock moth.

THE WEEKLY SUN

It cannot be too clearly understood that the one great desire of Canadians is to be left alone to work out their own destiny along peaceful lines and that they have no intention of being dragged into wars in which the national conscience does not approve.—The Weekly Sun.

We have no quarrel with the Weekly Sun. It is frank, candid and strong. But that does not prevent our differing from its views sometimes, and the view expressed at the top of this article is an instance. It is implied there that the rest of the empire is likely sometime or other to drag us into a war that may be against our conscience. For "'conscience' read 'convenience,'" and we have what is clearly meant by the Sun, if it only knew it. The idea of holding up our conscience as a tender and lovely plant in danger of being injured by the rude barbarities of the mother countries, &c., is too funny for anything. With all due apologies to the estimable writer, it is also downright rot. In the very next column of the Sun is an excellent article on co-operation without a word as to conscience. It is evidently, therefore, because of the word "war" that the Sun kicks, not conscience.

It is to the last degree objectionable no doubt, but does the Sun mean that Canada is not prepared to do her share in facing its stern necessities of such a case? Let us give over this picayune policy and stand for a unified empire, the realization of long years of dreaming and preparing. We can trust each other, and founded upon mutual trust our strength would be doubly strong and all that it protects doubly secure. As it is we are—well! as the negro said, "Where are we?"

The Sun, apparently, wishes to "stand out." Is that the case? If so it must be the Liberal half of the editor which is speaking. It certainly is not the Conservative. But there is another point. Who is he that would be so unwise as to put the toiling millions of this fair country further into the hands and power of the raving, roving money-sharks? The rest of the empire with all its love of equity, fair-dealing and common sense would prove an excellent check to such a possibility. We are in favour of peace, but not at any price.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The present summer seems to bear all the ear-marks of old times, except extreme heat.

Free rural mail and parcel delivery has NOT been introduced into Peterborough. Why? It is on more than a hundred other routes.

---

The Thaw woman again speaks to the world and what a message! The poor creature is worthy of pity not contempt. She is one of the tragedies of life. If all the "world" had the supreme indifference to morals, etc., that she affects where would she be? It is the "orderliness of civilization" that has made her possible. The best fruit always attracts the vilest pest.

---

The attempt of the Examiner to make out that the fine shooting of the Canadians is wholly due to the Ross rifle won't "go." The Lee-Enfield was used by several of the team with just as good results. At any rate the old Ross rifle which has been so heavily subsidized at Ottawa is now what it was not before, perhaps the equal of the Lee-Enfield and no more.

FELL ON A BEAR

Burnt River, July 20.—Bears are plentiful around here if all stories are true. The animals frequent berry patches, were they feed on luscious fruit. The other day Mr. Arthur Young fell over a bear and it is hard to say who was the most frightened, Arthur or the bear.

FINDS IN EGYPT.

Ancient Palace Discovered by British Archaeologist.

Prof. Flinders Petrie recently gave an account of the work of the British School of Archaeology during the past season at Thebes and Memphis. The great result of this year at Memphis has been the discovery of the palace of King Apries—the Pharaoh Hophra of the Bible—who was contemporary with Jeremiah. Hitherto no palace has been known in Egypt beyond the tower at Medinet Habu and some portions of rather earlier date. The palace now discovered is of impressive scale, about 400 feet long, and half as wide. The Middle Court is well over a hundred feet square, and the painted stone columns in it were more than 40 feet high. The stone-lined halls, of which seven remain, were over 40 feet long and half as wide. The brick walls were nearly as large and the walls were about 15 feet thick. A still larger court extended on the north side, in which lie capitals of columns which must have been about 50 feet high. The approach to the palace led up through a large mass of buildings to a platform at a height of about 60 feet above the plain. In the ruins scale armour, hitherto rarely found in Egypt, was discovered. Good bronze figures of gods were also found. What Prof. Petrie described as the one supreme piece was the fitting of a palanquin of solid silver, a pound in weight, decorated with a bust of Hathor with a gold face, of the finest workmanship of the time of Apries. The great gateway and the immense walls descending deep into the mound indicated that there lay there the ruins of successive palaces built one over the other, and Prof. Petrie prophesied that in six or eight years, if the school received sufficient financial support, they might dig down to the earliest records of the Egyptian Kingdom. The temple of Merenptah occupied a large part of the work, some of the columns and bases showing that Pharaoh was appropriating older work. The temple of Ptah and the desert village or region were also explored during the season.

Princess Christian, Clubwoman.

Her Royal Highness takes a very prominent part in public and charitable works. She is the moving spirit of the Royal School of Art Needlework in South Kensington, which provides work for numbers of poor gentlewomen.

In accordance with her desire to live, as far as possible, the life of a private person, Princess Christian recently joined a ladies' club in the West End of London. On one occasion she went there, attended as usual by a gentleman-in-waiting.

Now, one of the rules of this particular club is that no "mere man" are allowed on the premises. Another member who happened to see the princess going upstairs with her escort at once complained to the manager that "a member had broken the rules by bringing a gentleman friend with her!"

A Man of His Word.

Sir Peter Nicol Russell, a wealthy Australian, who died in England, received knighthood in recognition of his munificent gifts to the University of Sydney, and his will has been under discussion in the Sydney courts. A curious fact was mentioned in evidence. Sir Peter was the proprietor of extensive ironworks in Sydney. His men threatened to strike over some subject in dispute. Sir Peter told them that if they did he would shut down the works and never open them again. The men laughed, and said that was all "bluff." They struck, and Sir Peter was as good as his word. The gates were closed, and never again was the clang of steel heard there. Sir Peter left Sydney forever, and spent the rest of his life in England. That strike cost the workers of Sydney many hundreds of thousands of pounds.

"Budge."

It is probable that if that popular actress Miss Ruth Vincent, who is appearing with such success in "A Persian Princess" at the Queen's Theatre, Shaftesbury avenue, London, could be induced to mention whom she considered to be the greatest admirer of her singing, she would reply, "Budge," by which name her little son is known to his intimates. "Budge" is now about four years of age and is a charming little fellow. "He always sits in the drawing-room when I am practicing my songs," says Miss Vincent, "and imitates my notes wonderfully in his little staccato voice. Is he to become an actor? No, I shall not let him go on the stage."—London Tit-Bits.

The Origin of John Bull.

In March, 1712, there was published in London a satirical brochure dealing with the events of the previous year and bringing prominently into light the doings of Spain, Louis XIV., Holland and England—the last-named country being represented by "John Bull." The original of the character was John Bollingbroke, Minister of Queen Anne—who in the first edition was spoken of as "Lord Bullingbrook" and "John Bullingbrook" alternately—the title of the brochure subsequently becoming abbreviated to plain "John Bull." It was the production of a Scotch writer, Dr. John Arbuthnot, and not Swift, as some have stated.

The Star Chamber.

The "star chamber" was so called from the place in which the court was held in one of the rooms of the King's palace in Westminster. Upon the ceilings were stars, hence the camera stellata or chamber of stars. It was of very ancient origin and had excessive powers, but could not pronounce the death penalty. It was abolished by act of Parliament in 1641 during the reign of Charles I., but this unfortunate monarch was sentenced to be beheaded from this same "star chamber."—London Queen.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, July 21.—(Special.)—Since this day week there has been an improved demand for ocean freight space for August shipment, and a fair amount of business has been done to Liverpool and Glasgow at 32s 6d and 25s, the former figure being for the first half of the month, and the latter for the last half. The feeling in London space is easier, and it is now offering at 30s. At the Canadian Pacific live stock market this morning the offerings were 250 steers, 150 cows, 50 bulls, 900 sheep, 100 lambs, 600 calves and 600 hogs. Considering the fairly large supply of cattle, of which the quality was only medium, and the warmer weather, the trade done was all that could be expected. The demand was fairly good for small lots, and the undertone to the market was steady, as the prices paid were much the same as on Monday. Good steers sold at 5¼c to 5½c; fair at 4¾c to 5c; medium at 4c to 4½c; good cows at 4c to 4½c; common at 3c to 3¾c, and bulls at from 3c to 4c per pound. Notwithstanding the fact that the offerings of sheep were the largest this season, the tone of the market was stronger, and prices advanced ¼c per pound under an active demand from local buyers, and a brisk trade was done in this line at 4c to 4½c per pound. There was also an active demand for lambs, and prices were firmer, at from $4 to $5 each, as to size. Calves met with a good demand at from $2 to $8, as to size and quality. The condition of the market for hogs remains strong, and prices were firmly maintained at the recent advance, under a good demand, and small supplies, and sales of selected lots were made at $9 to $9.10 per hundred pounds, weighed off cars.

THE Masquerader

By KATHERINE CECIL THURSTON,
Author of "The Circle," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, 1904, by Harper & Brothers

"Do you remember?" he persisted quietly. In his college days men who heard that tone of quiet persistence had been wont to lose heart. Eve heard it now for the first time and, without being aware, answered to it.

"Yes, I remember," she said.

"On that day you believed in me." In his earnestness he no longer simulated Chilcote; he spoke with his own steady reliance. He saw Eve stir, unclasp and clasp her hands, but he went steadily on. "On that day you saw me in a new light. You acknowledged me." He emphasized the slightly peculiar word. "But since that day"—his voice quickened—"since that day your feelings have changed, your faith in me has fallen away." He watched her closely, but she made no sign, save to lean still nearer to the fire. He crossed his arms over the back of her chair. "You were justified," he said suddenly. "I've not been—myself since that day." As he said the words his coolness forsook him slightly. He loathed the necessary lie, yet his egotism clamored for vindication. "All men have their lapses," he went on. "There are times—there are days and weeks when I—when my"—The word "nerves" touched his tongue, hung upon it, then died away unspoken.

Very quietly, almost without a sound, Eve had risen and turned toward him. She was standing very straight, her face a little pale, the hand that rested on the arm of her chair trembling slightly.

"John," she said quickly, "don't say that word! Don't say that hideous word 'nerves!' I don't feel that I can bear it tonight—not just tonight. Can you understand?"

Loder stepped back. Without comprehending, he felt suddenly and strangely at a loss. Something in her face struck him silent and perplexed. It seemed that without preparation he had stepped upon dangerous ground. With an undefined apprehension, he waited, looking at her.

"I can't explain it," she went on with nervous haste, "I can't give any reasons, but quite suddenly the—the farce has grown unbearable. I used not to think—used not even to care—but suddenly things have changed—or I have changed." She paused, confused and distressed. "Why should it be? Why should things change?" She asked the question sharply, as if in appeal against her own incredulity.

Loder turned aside. He was afraid of the triumph, volcanic and irrepressible, that her admission roused.

"Why?" she said again.

He turned slowly back. "You forget that I'm not a magician," he said gently. "I hardly know what you are speaking of."

For a moment she was silent, but in that moment her eyes spoke. Pain, distress, pride, all strove for expression; then at last her lips parted.

"Do you say that in seriousness?" she asked.

It was no moment for fencing, and Loder knew it. "In seriousness," he replied shortly.

"Then I shall speak seriously too." Her voice shook slightly and the color came back into her face, but the hand on the arm of the chair ceased to tremble. "For more than four years I have known that you take drugs—for more than four years I have acquiesced in your deceptions, in your meannesses"—

There was an instant's silence. Then Loder stepped forward.

"You knew—for four years?" he said, very slowly. For the first time that night he remembered Chilcote and forgot himself.

Eve lifted her head, with a quick gesture, as if, in flinging off discretion and silence, she appreciated to the full the new relief of speech.

"Yes, I knew. Perhaps I should have spoken when I first surprised the secret, but it's all so past that it's useless to speculate now. It was fate, I suppose. I was very young, you were very unapproachable, and—and we had no love to make the way easy." For a second her glance faltered and she looked away. "A woman's—a girl's—disillusioning is a very sad comedy—it should never have an audience." She laughed a little bitterly as she looked back again. "I saw all the deceits, all the subterfuges, all the—lies." She said the word deliberately, meeting his eyes.

Again he thought of Chilcote, but his face paled.

"I saw it all. I lived with it all till I grew hard and indifferent—till I acquiesced in your 'nerves' as readily as the rest of the world that hadn't suspected and didn't know." Again she laughed nervously. "And I thought the indifference would last forever. If one lives in a groove for years, one gets frozen up. I never felt more frozen than on the night Mr. Fraide spoke to me of you—asked me to use my influence; then, on that night"—

"Yes. On that night?" Loder's voice was tense.

But her excitement had suddenly fallen. Whether his glance had quelled it or whether the force of her feelings had worked itself out it was impossible to say, but her eyes had lost their resolution. She stood hesitating for a moment, then she turned and moved to the mantelpiece.

"That night you found me changed?" Loder was insistent.

"Changed—and yet not changed." She spoke reluctantly, with averted head.

"And what did you think?"

Again she was silent. Then again a faint excitement tinged her cheeks.

"I thought"— she began. "It seemed"— Once more she paused, hampered by her own uncertainty, her own sense of puzzling incongruity. "I don't know why I speak like this," she went on at last, as if in justification of herself, "or why I want to speak. But a feeling—an extraordinary, incomprehensible feeling seems to urge me on. The same feeling that came to me on the day we had tea together—the feeling that made me—that almost made me believe"—

"Believe what?" The words escaped him without volition.

At sound of his voice she turned. "Believe that a miracle happened," she said; "that you had found strength, had freed yourself."

"From morphia?"

"From morphia."

In the silence that followed Loder lived through a century of suggestion and indecision. His first feeling was for himself, but his first clear thought was for Chilcote and their compact. He stood, metaphorically, on a stone in the middle of a stream, balancing on one foot, then on the other; looking to the right bank, then to the left. At last, as it always did, inspiration came to him slowly. He realized that by one plunge he might save both Chilcote and himself.

He crossed quickly to the fireplace and stood by Eve. "You were right in your belief," he said. "For all that time, from the night you spoke to me of Fraide to the day you had tea in this room, I never touched a drug."

She moved suddenly, and he saw her face. "John," she said unsteadily, "you—I—I have known you to lie to me about other things."

With a hasty movement he averted his head. The doubt, the appeal in her words, shocked him. The whole isolation of her life seemed summed up in the one short sentence. For the instant he forgot Chilcote. With a reaction of feeling he turned to her again.

"Look at me!" he said brusquely.

She raised her eyes.

"Do you believe I'm speaking the truth?"

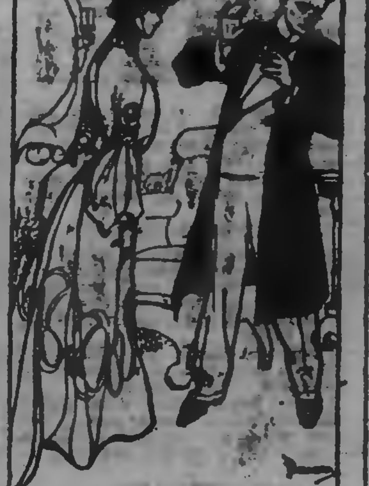
She searched his eyes intently, the doubt and hesitancy still struggling in her face.

"But the last three weeks?" she said reluctantly. "How can you ask me to believe?"

He had expected this and he met it steadily enough. Nevertheless his courage faltered. To deceive this woman, even to justify himself, had in the last half hour become something sacrilegious.

"The last three weeks must be buried," he said hurriedly. "No man could free himself suddenly from—from a vice." He broke off abruptly. He hated Chilcote; he hated himself. Then Eve's face, raised in distressed appeal, overshadowed all scruples. "You have been silent and patient for years," he said suddenly. "Can you be patient and silent a little longer?" He spoke without consideration. He was conscious of no selfishness beneath his words. In the first exercise of conscious strength the primitive desire to reduce all elements to his own sovereignty submerged every other emotion. "I can't enter into the thing," he said; "like you, I give no explanations. I can only tell you that on the day we talked together in this room I was myself—in the full possession of my reason, the full knowledge of my own capacities. The man you have known in the last three weeks, the man you have imagined in the last four years, is a shadow, an unreality—a weakness in human form. There is a new Chilcote—if you will only see him."

She was trembling as he ceased; her face was flushed; there was a strange brightness in her eyes. She was moved beyond herself.



"No, I haven't got the right."

"But the other you—the old you?"

"You must be patient." He looked down into the fire. "Times like the last three weeks will come again—must come again; they are inevitable. When they do come, you must shut your eyes—you must blind yourself. You must ignore them—and me. Is it a compact?" He still avoided her eyes.

She turned to him quietly. "Yes—if you wish it," she said, below her breath.

He was conscious of her glance, but he dared not meet it. He felt sick at the part he was playing, yet he held to it tenaciously.

"I wonder if you could do what few men and fewer women are capable of?" he asked at last. "I wonder if you could learn to live in the present?" He lifted his head slowly and met her eyes. "This is an—an experiment," he went on. "And, like all experiments, it has good phases and bad. When the bad phases come round I—I want you to tell yourself that you are not altogether alone in your unhappiness—that I am suffering too—in another way."

There was silence when he had spoken, and for a space it seemed that Eve would make no response. Then the last surprise in a day of surprises came to him. With a slight stir, a slight, quick rustle of skirts, she stepped forward and laid her hand in his.

The gesture was simple and very sweet. Her eyes were soft and full of light as she raised her face to his, her lips parted in unconscious appeal.

There is no surrender so seductive as the surrender of a proud woman. Loder's blood stirred, the undeniable suggestion of the moment thrilled and disconcerted him in a tumult of thought. Honor, duty, principle, rose in a triple barrier; but honor, duty and principle are but words to a headstrong man. The full significance of his position came to him as it had never come before. His hand closed on hers; he bent toward her, his pulses beating unevenly.

"Eve!" he said. Then at the sound of his voice he suddenly hesitated. It was the voice of a man who has forgotten everything but his own existence.

For an instant he stayed motionless. Then very quietly he drew away from her, releasing her hands.

"No," he said. "No, I haven't got the right."

CHAPTER XVIII.

THAT night for almost the first time since he had adopted his dual role Loder slept ill. He was not a man over whom imagination held any powerful sway. His doubts and misgivings seldom ran to speculation upon future possibilities. Nevertheless, the fact that, consciously or unconsciously, he had adopted a new attitude toward Eve came home to him with unpleasant force during the hours of darkness, and long before the first hint of daylight had slipped through the heavy window curtains he had arranged a plan of action—a plan wherein, by the simple method of altogether avoiding her, he might soothe his own conscience and safeguard Chilcote's domestic interests.

It was a satisfactory if a somewhat negative arrangement, and he rose next morning with a feeling that things had begun to shape themselves. But chance sometimes has a disconcerting knack of forestalling even our best planned schemes. He dressed slowly and descended to his solitary breakfast with the pleasant sensation of having put last night out of consideration by the turning over of a new leaf, but scarcely had he opened Chilcote's letters, scarcely had he taken a cursory glance at the morning's newspaper than it was borne in upon him that not only a new leaf, but a whole sheaf of new leaves, had been turned in his prospects by a hand infinitely more powerful and arbitrary than his own. He realized within the space of a few moments that the leisure Eve might have claimed, the leisure he might have been tempted to devote to her, was no longer his to dispose of, being already demanded of him from a quarter that allowed of no refusal.

For the first rumbling of the political earthquake that was to shake the country made itself audible beyond denial on that morning of March 27 when the news spread through England that, in view of the disorganized state of the Persian army and the shah's consequent inability to suppress the open insurrection of the border tribes in the northeastern districts of Meshed, Russia, with a great show of magnanimity, had come to the rescue by dispatching a large armed force from her military station at Merv across the Persian frontier to the seat of the disturbance.

To many hundreds of Englishmen who read their papers on that morning this announcement conveyed but little. That there is such a country as Persia we all know, that English interests predominate in the south and Russian interests in the north we have all superficially understood from childhood, but in this knowledge, coupled with the fact that Persia is comfortably far away, we are apt to rest content. It is only to the eyes that see through long distance glasses, the minds that regard the present as nothing more or less than an inevitable link joining the future to the past, that this distant, debatable land stands out in its true political significance.

To the average reader of news the statement of Russia's move seemed scarcely more important than had the first report of the border risings in January, but to the men who had watched the growth of the disturbance it came charged with portentous meaning. Through the entire ranks of the opposition, from Fraide himself downward, it caused a thrill of expectation—that peculiar prophetic sensation that every politician has experienced at some moment of his career.

In no member of his party did this feeling strike deeper root than in Loder. Imbued with a lifelong interest in the eastern question, specially equipped by personal knowledge to hold and proclaim an opinion upon Persian affairs, he read the signs and portents with instinctive insight. Seated at Chilcote's table, surrounded by Chilcote's letters and papers, he forgot the breakfast that was slowly growing cold, forgot the interests and dangers, personal or pleasurable, of the night before, while his mental eyes persistently conjured up the map of Persia, traveling with steady deliberation from Merv to Meshed, from Meshed to Herat, from Herat to the empire of India! For it was not the fact that the Hazaras had risen against the shah that occupied the thinking mind, nor was it the fact that Russian and not Persian troops were destined to subdue them, but the deeply important consideration that an armed Russian force had crossed the frontier and was encamped within twenty miles of Meshed—Meshed, upon which covetous Russian eyes have rested ever since the days of Peter the Great.

So Loder's thoughts ran as he read and reread the news from the varying political standpoints, and so they continued to run when, some hours later, an urgent telephone message from the St. George's Gazette asked him to call at Lakeley's office.

The message was interesting as well as imperative, and he made an instant response. The thought of Lakeley's keen eyes and shrewd enthusiasms always possessed strong attractions for his own slower temperament, but even had this impetus been lacking, the knowledge that at the St. George's offices, if anywhere, the true feelings of the party were invariably voiced would have drawn him without hesitation.

It was scarcely 12 o'clock when he turned the corner of the tall building, but already the keen spirit that Lakeley everywhere diffused was making itself felt. Loder smiled to himself as his eyes fell on the day's placards with their uncompromising headings and passed onward from the string of gayly painted carts drawn up to receive their first consignment of the paper to the troop of eager newsboys passing in and out of the big swing doors with their piled up bundles of the early edition, and with a renewed thrill of anticipation and energy he passed through the doorway and ran upstairs. Passing unchallenged through the long corridor that led to Lakeley's office, he caught a fresh impression of action and vitality from the click of the tape machines in the subeditor's office, and a glimpse through the open door of the subeditors themselves, each occupied with his particular task; then without time for further observation he found himself at Lakeley's door. Without waiting to knock, as he had felt compelled to do on the one or two previous occasions that business had brought him there, he immediately turned the handle and entered the room.

Editors' offices differ but little in general effect. Lakeley's surroundings were rather more elaborate than is usual, as became the dignity of the oldest Tory evening paper, but the atmosphere was unmistakable. As Loder entered he glanced up from the desk at which he was sitting, but instantly returned to his task of looking through and making a pile of early evening editions that were spread around him. His coat was off and hung on the chair behind him, and he pulled vigorously on a long cigar.

"Hello! That's right," he said laconically. "Make yourself comfortable half a second, while I skim the St. Stephen's."

His salutation pleased Loder. With a nod of acquiescence he crossed the office to the brisk fire that burned in the grate.

For a minute or two Lakeley worked steadily, occasionally breaking the quiet by an unintelligible remark or a vigorous stroke of his pencil. At last he dropped the paper with a gesture of satisfaction and leaned back in his chair.

"Well," he said, "what d'you think of this? How's this for a complication?"

Loder turned round. "I think," he said quietly, "that we can't overestimate it."

Lakeley laughed and took a long pull at his cigar. "And we mustn't be afraid to let the Sefborough crowd know it, eh?" He waved his hand to the poster of the first edition that hung before his desk.

Loder, following his glance, smiled.

Lakeley laughed again. "They might have known it all along if they'd cared to deduce," he said. "Did they really believe that Russia was going to sit calmly looking across the Heri-Rud while the shah played at mobilizing? But what became of you last night? We had a regular prophesying of the whole business at Bramfell's; the great Fraide looked in for five minutes. I went on with him to the club afterward and was there when the news came in. 'Twas a great night!"

LUCKY MR. BROWN.

If it had not been for "Fruit-a-tives," Mr. Lemuel Brown, of Avondale, N.B., would still be living on stale bread and porridge, and suffering tortures with indigestion.

His stomach was so weak that he had to give up all kinds of meats, potatoes and other vegetables, and even deny himself the comforts of a cup of tea. Fortunately, Mr. Brown read about "Fruit-a-tives," bought a box and was so much improved by taking the tablets, that he used four boxes altogether. "I have been a great sufferer from Indigestion for fifteen years. About two years ago, I read about Fruit-a-tives and concluded to give them a trial. I used nearly four boxes of "Fruit-a-tives" and they have made me feel like a new man. I can eat all kinds of hearty foods and enjoy tea and coffee." This is not a rare case, but the regular experience of everyone who uses "Fruit-a-tives" for Weak Stomach, Indigestion and Dyspepsia. Try them. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. ## THE CULTIVATION OF CHILDREN

New Move in Old France—A Statesman's Policy

A late dispatch from Paris contains the announcement that the Field Crop Competition prize will in the future be extended to the raising of children. A row of fine regular-limbed, healthy children will receive the prize over a small spare crop of unmitigated brats. Every other plan having failed hitherto to increase the population, it is now determined as a last resort, in order to save France, that she shall make the raising of children a lucrative financial undertaking. It is hoped that on this basis it will succeed in future.

WEST PETERBORO' ELECTION PROTEST

"Yesterday two motions came up before Hon. Justice McGee at Osgoode Hall, Toronto; one to compel Mr. Burnham to furnish better particulars of his charges herein and the other to compel Mr. Burnham to attend for examination for discovery and to answer the several questions which he has already refused to answer and to produce to the Court certain documents which he failed to produce on the occasion of his partial examination on the 29th of June. Mr. Jones on behalf of Mr. Burnham asked to have both motions enlarged until Friday. Mr. Smith on behalf of the respondent opposed his appplication intimating that the granting of it might result in the postponement of the trial. Mr. Justice McGee said that in his opinion the examination should proceed during long vacation whether the rule respecting long vacation applied or not and he intimated that he would make an order to that effect when the motion came on. Notwithstanding such intimation, however, Mr. Jones insisted upon having an enlargement until Friday of this week which was finally granted."

The above extract from the Examiner conveys, no doubt unintentionally, a wrong impression. The Mr. Smith who is said to have hinted at postponement, is not one of the lawyers for Mr. Burnham, but is, it will be observed, one of the lawyers for the respondent. Hinting under those circumstances assumes an entirely different meaning from that conveyed.

The motions, for there are really three of them, in one, adjourned from Tuesday morning, come up to-morrow morning in Toronto. They are, first for an order compelling Mr. Burnham to go on with his examination of July 29th, in July and August (Long Vacation). This examination would have been gone on with without a further order, but for the fact that the petitioner's lawyers informed him that the Rules of Procedure said that "no examination shall be held in Long Vacation except by the order of a court or judge."

If that advice is correct it remains simply for the respondent's lawyers to go and get the order of the court or judge. No one is opposing it, except in so far as there have been months during which the examination could have been held and was not.

The second motion is for an order compelling Mr. Burnham to reveal his witnesses and evidence. That is what it means. These are the "questions" which Mr. Burnham refused to answer.

The third motion is for an order requiring the petitioner to put his particulars in better shape or in default have them dismissed and with them of course, would necessarily go the protest itself. The "delay" referred to is from Tuesday till Friday and is caused by the very fact contemplated by the rules referred to above, viz., that it is Long Vacation. However, it will all be argued to-morrow morning. The petitioner was not aware until he saw it in the Examiner that he was the cause of "the delay" in the protest proceedings so far. He had thought it was someone else.

TOURIST SEASON NOW AT ITS HEIGHT AT STONEY LAKE

Every Cottage is Opened and There are Parties at Many of Them—New Piano Arrived at Pavilion at Crowe's Landing.

(Special to the Review.

Stoney Lake, July 21—With very few exceptions all the cottages on the lake are opened for the season, and at many there are very large parties. On Saturday the steamers brought up a larger number of passengers than on any other day this year, and in fact, all the up trips are heavy now on account of the stream of tourists to this most popular resort.

If present conditions are to be taken as an indication this year will see more campers on Stoney Lake than ever before in its history. Also the steamer men say that from a comparison of the number they have carried this year with the corresponding number of previous years, 1909 will be a record breaker.

The weather of the last two days has been ideal camping weather, and is being enjoyed to the full after the windy and disagreeable weather of last week.

HOTELS AND BOARDING HOUSES FULL.

All the hotels and boarding houses report that their capacity is at present taxed by the number of guests, which is unusually large for so early in the season. Mr. Graham, of Viamede, could not admit any more on Saturday, and similar conditions prevail at Burleigh and the other resorts.

VISITORS TO THE LAKE.

J. M. Perks, of Peterborough, is holidaying at Stoney Lake.

The following comprise the party at Buenavista;—Mr. J. Farewell, Master Hubert Farewell, Miss Edith Roger, Fannie Hales, Louisa Hales.

D. K. MacDonald and P. G. Armstrong are at Mount Julian.

Mr. J. H. James, Pittsburg, is at Kimo.

C. G. Dunn, Toronto, is holidaying at Dunnclgie.

Jessie Starr, Toronto, is at "Glencairn."

Mr. and Mrs Rapp, of Cincinnati, arrived at Bellvidere Monday and received a hearty welcome from the campers in that vicinity.

Inspector Mowat, who has rented "Rocklands" for August, was up on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Wood, of Peterborough, are at "Water-Lee Brae."

Mr. T. Finlay, of Norwood, opened his cottage on Monday.

PIANO AT CROWE'S LANDING.

On Friday the "Stoney Lake" brought up from Peterborough the long awaited piano that the Association has purchased. On Saturday a dance was held, and now they are regular on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. A pleasant time is anticipated at the card party next week.

ABOUT THE GYPSY SITUATION

The gypsies apparently have the police and newspapers at Ottawa tied up in knots. The energetic scribes are pretty nearly camping with the wanderers in order to get on the inside of what's happening and are writing interviews at the rate of one per minute. But so complicated has the situation become with kidnapping, stabbing, revolver hold-ups, alleged marriages, etc., etc., that the newspapers can hardly make head or tail of what is transpiring. Meanwhile the police are gathering the foreigners into the toils like so many tagless dogs and in this way are adding to the excitement generally.

Peterborough and Ottawa appear to have a corner on the market as far as extended visits from the nomads are concerned. But there does not appear to be any of the "entertaining—angel—unaware" phase to the situation.

BURLEIGH FALLS POWER QUESTION AGAIN TO-NIGHT

The City Council will meet in committee of the whole to-night to take up the Burleigh Falls power question. Representatives of the Central Ontario Power Company will be present, and it is expected that some definite conclusion will be reached. It is understood that the company will make a new offer to the city, and that the Council will make a definite statement of their intentions.

The directors of the company who are coming are: Mr. J. A. Culverwell, managing director; Dr. Adams, vice-president; Messrs. R. S. Hudson, general manager Canada Permanent Mortgage Co.; W. VanDusen, president of the Sun and Hastings Loan Co., and Col. Harry Ward, ex-M.P.

GYPSIES QUARRELLED HERE AND FORMED TWO BANDS

Say They Had Big Time at Peterborough at Their Wedding Celebration—Girl Bride Kidnapped because $300 Demanded Did Not Come—Some Further on the Mixup.

Such was the remark made by Christo Boy Sterio, when speaking of 12-year-old Katrina Alexis, who was alleged to have been kidnapped from our parents, and over the possession of whom two bands of gypsies have been wrangling in the Hull courts.

Though Christo Boy Sterio is as dirty as the rest of his clan, and wears long trousers and smokes a pipe like his father, he is, according to his own testimony, only 12 years of age.

The boy husband said that Katrina was a pretty fine girl. She could cook, and better than that, she could play tag very well.

"Where is your wife now?" asked the reporter of the 12-year-old husband.

"She is over at the other camp in Ottawa," replied the man. "I'm sorry to lose her; she was a darned fine wife!"

"When were you married?" he was asked.

PAID $200 FOR HER.

"Oh, about three weeks ago, over in Peterborough. She cost five hundred dollars. You see, we paid $200 for her and $300 for the stuff at the wedding."

All this time Christo Boy Sterio was pulling at a big pipe, and the tobacco he used would have done credit to some of the oldest smokers. It was so strong that it made his eyes water, and the stench was terrible. Still he stuck to it like a man.

"What did you pay $300 for at the wedding?"

"Well, you see, we had music, and big feasts every day for over a week. You see she was such a fine wife that we had to have the feasts."

Christo Boy Sterio is the only man in the camp now. All the others are in jail. Even though he is only 12 years of age, his word is law in the camp during his father's absence. Christo's father and Stephen George are the leaders of the band.

The band is camped just beyond the cement works on the Gatineau road, about three miles from Hull. There are five women who are comparatively young, and three elder ones. All have infant children and innumerable urchins about one and two years old are crawling and running around the camp. They are all possessed with a keen desire to meddle, and a more keen desire to beg.

A reporter called at the camp with a camera, and no sooner opened it than half a dozen black, dirty hands were pushed into it, pressing the bulb and pulling the levers.

COULD TALK SOME.

Gracio Sterio, wife of Chief Sterio, who is in jail, and mother of the 12-year-old husband, then told the reporter that she was going to bring evidence that would clear her husband, and the other members of the band, who appeared this morning, charged with highway robbery and holding up the rival camp of Katrina Alexis' guardians on Wellington St., Ottawa.

"What you say when we tell that men were in an automobile at 12 last night, eh! What you say when we have two witnesses, two police, who watched camp last night to keep away men from Hull. Eh! What you say when we tell Stokes very bad man. Eh! Ha, ha! Police then skidoo! Eh!"

The chief's wife waxed warm, and in her anger relapsed into her native language, going through all kinds of gestures and every now and then running her finger around her throat, mimicing the action of cutting someone's throat.

ONE FINE TIME.

After awhile she became cooler and commenced to tell the reporter all about her 12-year-old son's marriage.

"Ha, one fine time," she said. "Ha, music, feast and stuff, music for week, one big time."

"Where did Alexis get Katrina," asked the reporter, as the result of a statement of the woman.

"Ha, she bought from other gypsy in Roumbia three years ago. She bought when we camped at Sofia, Roumbia. Only paid $20 for her; we paid $200.

ALL ONE TRIBE.

From the investigation it has been learned that both bands of gypsies, those of Hull, and those camped on Wellington street, were the same tribe. They travelled together until three weeks ago when the band was in Peterborough. Stokes and Alexis sold their horses and rigs, and when they wanted to bring their goods in other rigs their fellow gypsies objected. Stokes, with Alexis, then proceeded to Ottawa by train, and camped near the Union Depot. Before separating, Stokes' band and the main body had a row, and they separated on bad terms.

After the main body arrived in Hull and camped on the Gatineau road, Stokes went over and demanded the girl back, or $200 more, according to the gypsies of the main body. Chief Stephen George, of the main body refused, and later Katrina was kidnapped.

"He (Stokes) say he not belong to our camp; he lie," said Gracio Sterio, the chief's wife. "He with us for a long time. He travelled all through this country with us."

"His wife is a bad woman. She put pink and white on her cheeks. He pretended to be copper-smith. He steal copper in one town and sell it in next. He bad man."

"The men in jail, they alright. We get them out. We get evidence or we pay lots of money.

"What for we want to steal their money. They say we have revolver. If we have revolver, what for not all people see it. What for they not tell police right away. They lie."

Just then a very pretty and very clean girl, about eighteen years old, well dressed, with a very tiny baby at her breast, pushed her way between the excited wife of the gypsy chief and the reporter, and queried:

"You come back to-morrow! Yes! No! Aw do, please do, and bring me some tobacco and some cigarette."

Taken a Slump

There has been a slump in the matrimonial market in Peterborough during July. Only a small number of marriages have been registered at the city clerk's office.

STABBING CHARGE HAS DEVELOPED AT OTTAWA

Gypsy Hold-up Has Another Feature—Wife of Eli Stokes Bears Wounds Said to Have Been Inflicted During Hold-up With Which Hull Tribe is Charged—Fails to Identify Assailant Among Prisoners.

Ottawa, July 21.—The alleged hold-up of the Ottawa gypsy camp on Monday night by five members of the Hull tribe and the theft of $200 developed another and more serious side to-day when it was learned that Mrs. Stokes, whose husband was relieved of the amount in question, claims to have on the same occasion been stabbed by one of the midnight visitors. The woman was struck twice with a knife in the lower part of the neck and displays two large wounds, caused, she alleges, by a weapon in the hands of one of the Hull gypsy callers. She declares that she rushed to her husband's help as one of the intruders held a revolver at his head, and that as she did so one of the others shoved her back, at the same time drawing a large sheaf knife. A second attempt to go to her husband's help resulted in the stabbing, accompanied, she says, by threats to cut her throat.

At the police station Mrs. Stokes declared that the stabber was not among the prisoners arrested yesterday, and that Cris. Steman had not been in the party at all. Steman was accordingly released to-day, but Stephen George, Peter Mitchell, Peter Sterrio and Steve John were held and on the information of Mrs. Stokes, Sterrio was declared to be the man who held the pistol at Stokes' head on Monday night. The prisoners were remanded until Monday morning next, bail in the amount of $750 being accepted for George Mitchell and John, while Sterrio was not admitted to bail. Messrs. Fripp and Gordon Henderson appeared for the prisoners, with Mr. Cousineau, of Hull, who represents the Hull tribe, on the Quebec side.

Detectives Ryan and O'Meara left for Hull this morning to look up the alleged stabber of Mrs. Stokes. The latter states that two oher men were in the party that held up the tent occupied by herself and husband. She will endeavor to point these men out to the detectives.

SITUATION IN HULL.

The gypsies are still all the rage in Hull, the latest development of importance being that if they show themselves on the street they render themselves liable to summary arrest.

The twelve women and four men who were arrested last night for vagrancy, after they had refused to leave the city when requested by Chief Genest were brought before Recorder A. Desjardins this morning. After hearing the evidence of P.C. Lafontaine, who testified that the Bohemians were overrunning the city streets, and the speech of Mr. Louis Cousineau for the defence, who said each was a naturalized Canadian and that none made themselves nuisances or told fortunes on the street, the recorder remanded the whole lot for one day. He allowed all to leave gaol on their own recognizances on the distinct understanding that they should not show themselves in the streets, otherwise they would be arrested.

The tribe was escorted back to the camp, which is about fifty yards from the city boundary, and there they remain, closely watched.

The case of the kidnapping of the girl Katrina Alexis, who is in the custody of her adopted parents, came before Magistrate Goyette at the court house. Mr. Louis Cousineau, the lawyer for the defence, was appearing in the Ottawa court and the case was put off until to-morrow.

It is difficult to say when the tribe will be moved. Chief Genest says he will try to induce them to move by Monday. Mayor Fontaine desires him to oblige them to go at once, and Ald. Gravelle, president of the police force, says they must go within another 24 hours.

HAVE LIKELY LEFT.

Detectives Ryan and O'Meara reported at one o'clock that efforts to locate the alleged stabber of Mrs. Stokes had thus far been fruitless. The police are of the opinion that the men for whom they are looking have left the Hull camp and are now far from the scene of the trouble.

MERCANTILE SUMMARY

The following is a summary of trade in the United States for the past week from Dun's Review for July 17, 1909—

"Each succeeding week has now become a record of advancing activity in industry and commerce. The extraordinary expansion in the iron and steel trade continues, and whereas a short time ago the problem was how to find business, now the problem is becoming that of meeting orders with adequate dispatch. In other words consumption is rapidly catching up with productive capacity; and while this development is most conspicuous in iron and steel, it is true also, in greater or less degree, in most other branches, the most notable exception being copper, which is still under the influence of long-continued over supply."

HAVELOCK TAKES THE ROUND FROM THE CLAREMONT TEAM

And Will go into the Finals for Football Championship of Ontario—Score Was 1-0 in Game Played at Havelock Yesterday.

Special to the Review:

Havelock, July 21.—By defeating Claremont here to-day by the score of 1—0, Havelock has got into the finals for the championship of Ontario. From the time the ball was kicked off, up to the last minute, it was a battle royal, and the brand of football put up by both teams was of an exceedingly high calibre.

On Saturday last Havelock went to Claremont and succeeded in keeping them down to a no score game, and as goals count on the round, a hard game was expected here.

At two o'clock the ball was faced off, and both teams got down to business. Pretty rushes were made, and some hard tackling took place on both sides. Every player was alert and ready for a chance that might give their team an advantage. All sides of the field were lined by a big crowd of interested people, who were not a bit backward in expressing their sentiments. Many fast rushes were made, some nice tackling done, and some nice stopping by the backs. Havelock kept the ball fairly well into Claremont's territory, but not enough to score. Just before half-time a pretty combination was carried from the centr eof the field, up the left wing, over to right, and from there into the front of Claremont's goal, where Robinson put it between the stakes.

When the ball was kicked off from centre, Claremont tried to imitate the trick, but the Havelock backs were on the job.

After half-time Havelock had it a little in their favor, but were unable to locate Claremont's goal. Mathison, from a nice pass by Lancaster, nearly notched another one, but the ball struck the bottom of the crossbar and bounced into the goal-tender's arms, and wa soon in the centre of th efield. Havelock's goal was in great danger at one time, when, from a corner kick, a scramble took place in front of the goal, but they succeeded in clearing the decks and McPherson carried the ball up the length of the field, and put a nice long shot into the goal-tender's arms.

In the last few minutes Claremont did their best to even up the score, but Havelock knew they had the game and were content with playing a hard defence game.

Goal—Wm. Rose.

Backs—H. Andrews, H. McKay.

Halves—W. McMullen, W. Hitchins, H. Kindred.

Centre—C. Robinson.

No specialising can be done in regard to the playing of the Havelock team. They all played fine ball and worked well together. The same can be said of the Claremont team, only they are used to playing a slow pass game, and thus, when one wing was a little hard pressed they would pass across the entire field to the other wing. They also had the advantage of being a little heavier than their opponents.

Havelock have had great success this year, not having lost a game. They have won the Midland Football League championship, and will give the western district a hard run for the championship of Ontario.

Ther eare only four teams now in the running in Western Ontario, viz., Stratford, Brussels, Green River Valley, and All Saints (Toronto). The winners of Stratford and Brussels district will play the winners of Green River Valley and All Saints' fo sthe finals.

RUNNING

Alfred Shrubb is perfectly willing to meet John Svanberg who conquered Tom Longboat at fifteen miles Saturday night. The Swede's challenge was taken up this morning by Shrubb, who says he will run him a series of three races, namely, at ten, twelve and fifteen miles.

"I consider that the only fair way," said Shrubb to-day.

He also wants to meet Longboat before Svanberg, if possible, at twelve, fifteen and eighteen miles.

"I'll tackle them both," said Alfred, "just as soon as they are ready."

LINES ON SPORT

Jake Gettman brought about Montreal's downfall yesterday by smashing out a home run in the sixth. McGinnity outpitched Keefe and the score was Newark 4, Montreal 2.

Mathewson's finger is not broken as was first thought and the Giant's star flinger will be back in the game within a week.

In the Brooklyn-Chicago game yesterday there were four double plays pulled off in four innings. The Cubs won 3—2.

Toronto and Jersey City did not play yesterday on account of too much dampness.

It is reported that Jack Chesbro is to quit baseball for good; now for a few last farewells.

If a Canadian wins the King's Prize it will almost be a clean sweep for the Maple Leaf sharp shooters at Bisley.

Toronto is crawling up in the Eastern League race and before the Leafs leave home they should be pretty nearly the top.

Rugby will soon be coming in for attention. The Peterborough club was organized last fall and in this way should get off to a good start. There are bright prospects here for a strong team.

Some public-spirited citizen might donate a trophy for the tennis championship of the city. The game has taken a strong hold here and a trophy would add interest to the competitions.

Carl Hayes or Bill Cahill will pitch for the T.A.S. in their game with the Park street team Saturday.

Bill Cinnamon is going up to Cobalt to play ball. Perhaps Bill may scare up a little cobalt bloom and stake out a claim in the silver country. Fancy the ex-Redskin handling a pick. —Lindsay Warder.

Norman Lusty who did some twirling for the Orientals here last year is pitching for a city league team in Peterborough and the way he's tossing the leather isn't lazy. An opposing team got noe measly bit off him the other day.—Lindsay Warder.

If Hamilton didn't have Bobby Kerr there would be a dearth of copy around the newspaper offices there.

Looking at a banana that had been run over by the road roller reminded us of the flatness of the baseball situation in Lindsay.

Local followers of the Rugby game will remember the Kennedy brothers, Murray and Hal, who resided in this city some time ago. Murray will probably play on the Ottawa team this coming season, but Hal is at Cobalt, where he will likely remain.

Eddie Collins, the big noise of the Philadelphia Americans, was playing for a Burlington team in the Northern League three years ago. While he was considered a good player, his performances did not warrant him selling into the big league. But there he is now playing second base, leading the American League batters, and pulling off plays calculated to cause heart failure to the fans of that place.

The Cobourg Red Birds defeated Whitby Saturday in an exhibition game before a large crowd by 11—7. A feature of the game was Niles' sensational fielding at second base for the Red Birds. Dick Turpin, of Cobourg, umpired, and there wasn't a kick during the game.

LOCAL BOWLERS WON FROM VISITORS YESTERDAY

The local bowlers had a visit from two rinks of bowlers who came down on the excursion from West Toronto, Weston and Lambton yesterday. The Peterborough bowlers won by 31 shots.

THE SLY FOX.

Dead In the Dairy, But Lively When He Got Outside.

Several years ago at an old-fashioned farmhouse called Tittle Hall, in Boxted, a small village lying between Sudbury and Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk, England, there lived a farmer and his wife who thought much of their cows and dairy, but they were rather pestered with foxes, as the squire of Boxted Hall, an ancient mansion, being lord of the manor, did not allow them to be molested, as they were reserved for sporting, and so it happened that the farmer's wife on going into her dairy one morning was horrified to see a fox of an enormous size lying dead, as she supposed, on the floor. The dairies at that time were large and airy, with large lattice windows and floors paved with clinker bricks, which were often scrubbed down with a birch broom and much water. A brick was left out of the wall level with the floor for a sink hole, where all the refuse was washed out. The fox in his nightly prowls around the house appears to have scented the cream through the windows or sink hole and, as he would like to taste it, squeezed himself through the hole into the dairy and made his way to the cream pot, and as it was so very nice he ate it all up. He swelled himself up to such a size that he could by no means get back through the hole again, and, hearing footsteps coming, he lay down on the floor and feigned to be dead. The lady, suspecting what he had been doing, looked into her cream pot, and, finding it all gone, she was so exasperated that she took him up in a rage, thinking he was dead, and with an ugly word threw him out into the backyard; but, to her great consternation and dismay, as soon as reynard found he was at large and once more free to use his legs he bounded off at full speed, leaving the lady to grieve over the escape of the audacious and crafty thief.

Municipal Ownership.

Municipal ownership of the city gas plant has proved to be not only a profitable undertaking for Manchester, Eng., but economical for the consumer as well.

The city's profits since the works were taken over 25 years ago have been $4,750,307, while the price of gas in the Manchester district at present is only 55 cents per thousand cubic feet, according to a report to the bureau of manufactures.

In addition to furnishing gas cheaply, the Manchester corporation has provided free of charge gas stoves to all householders making requests for the same. A movement is on foot to reduce the price of gas to 49 cents for sundry manufacturing purposes and a graduated reduction for ordinary uses.

To illustrate the growth of the business, it is stated that the producing capacity of the works is 25,900,000 cubic feet per 24 hours, against 13,000,000 in 1883. An investment of $13,382,875 capital is represented.

Manchester has a population of about 600,000.

His Hobby Is Work.

There is a good story told regarding General Sir Beauchamp Duff, whose name is mentioned as successor to General Sir O'Moore Creagh as Secretary at the India Office. Not long ago a reporter tried to find out Gen. Duff's recreation. "Do you play bridge much?" he asked. "Not much," answered the general. "Billiards, maybe?" "Nothing to speak of." "Chess?" "Badly." "Any outdoor sports?" "At long intervals." "Then what on earth do you do?" "The rarest thing possible in the British Army," said Gen. Duff; "I work."

A Clergyman's Sacrifice.

From time to time taunts have been levelled at the clergy in regard to their efforts to obtain "fat" livings. Here is a case, however, which proves that they are not always influenced in their choice by monetary considerations. Rev. F. Swainson, vicar of St. Barnabas, Holloway, has just rejected the offer of a living worth approximately $8,000, although his present income is under $1,500; and simply because he is so deeply attached to the working people of his parish that he will not leave them.

CONFESSIONS OF A GAMBLER

Sturgis Opens for Business at Shelter Bay and Unexpectedly Finds a Wife

BY HELEN GREEN

(Copyright, 1909, by Helen Green. Book and Dramatic Rights Reserved.)

THE lid was officially down on gambling in New York. That don't mean that I and all the rest couldn't have kept our houses open and gathered big money, but during these periods the slip-me squads made it too expensive. You could keep open if you obeyed the hint to "see the captain" of the district. After him came his men, and don't ever think they were pikers! They called every night, and as soon as one pair were supposedly staked permanently they switched the cut on us and a fresh brace appeared. That's why so many places close—not because of laws or district attorneys, but because the bulls have to get theirs and request it too frequently.

The same sort of "reform" was agitating New Jersey. They had soaked the Long Branch crowd so hard that Daly closed up his big Pennsylvania Club. The little fish stood for raids and shakedowns until custom dwindled, because a man of reputation was afraid to play in a house where a pinch was liable to come off any minute. I had a partner called Yukon Garvin. He was only about thirty, but he'd turned out early and began by bankrolling the sure thing boys over the old trail between Skagway and Dawson, and when a chechaco—the name given to visitors to the North who haven't spent a winter in Alaska—came along and wouldn't warm up to any of Yukon's pickets he'd do the guy the honor of spreading for him in person.

He'd worked for me a good while. He could slide into evening clothes and entertain a party by gassing about literature and art, owned an artless, boyish laugh that kidded many a tightwad into shooting away a thousand where he had meant to risk a century note, and always left the mark feeling pleasant. It's the best system. I've had the same men coming back for more year after year, and ready to fight me for the chance to get skinned.

I sent Yukon to nose around the watering places near town, and he dug up a joint that listened like money to me.

It was at Shelter Bay, not far from Long Branch. Brokers and bankers kept summer homes there, and it was within easy automobile or power boat ride of two other resorts.

"There's a flossy inn on the water front," reported Yukon, "all ready to go into. It's furnished, small restaurant, big grounds, boathouse and landing, and for lease at $350 a month. It's small, but we ain't rentin' rooms. If you can drag the play there it's just the place. Owner's too ill to run it."

Starting the Game.

To cut the details, I rented Shelter Inn and sent down my crew from the New York house. The builder had designed a long dancing hall, which extended out over the water, connecting with the second floor of the hotel by a long passage. A flight of steps gave entrance from the float. The other door was at the end of the passage. Underneath the hall was a storehouse for boats.

When I had sumptuously furnished the hall I put in the faro layout, a roulette wheel, a craps table and made provision for a stud game if any one wanted it. It was a swell snare, and better than some of my millionnaire customers had at home. My black cook came to boss the kitchen, and Yukon provided two waiters who had worked in such an establishment before and knew how to forget whatever they saw. When we were all set for business, with the 'phone going and my automobile ready for service, I notified various persons that there was something doing at Shelter Bay. My "club house" was so arranged that in case of a raid I could hold the fort until the evidence was stowed away.

I was eating breakfast with Yukon one morning when he clipped an advertisement from the paper.

"Here's another Shelter Inn," he said. "Pipe! 'Shelter Inn, Long Branch, offers superb board, $10 a week. Boating, tennis, every convenience and pleasure. Guests met at station.'"

"Well, that's not at Shelter Bay," I said. "What of it?"

"Be funny if they got some of our folks by mistake, that's all," said he. "I passed it yesterday. An awful joint!"

I wasn't interested, and said so. No one but an ass was going to mix the two.

Ten minutes later Scott, my black steward, called me to the telephone. There was a woman squawking into it, evidently the central, but I couldn't hear anything. Finally I caught part of it. She asked if Jesse Hamlin could get a room for $10. To make sure I repeated the question. "Yes," she answered.

The long distance was acting prankish, and it was all I could do to make her hear me.

"Why, tell him to come down and be my guest!" I bawled. "What? Rates? Any rate he wants. I don't dare. What? Well, ten if he insists, then; only tell me his train and I'll send the machine. To-day? Yes, if he hurries—the three o'clock boat from New York. All right. Eh? Room for two? Twenty, if you like. Goodby."

I was all in when I dropped the receiver. Yukon was pleasantly excited, for Jesse Hamlin was about as ripe a live one as ever hung on the line. A couple of my dealers were stalling around in the bar, yawning over the papers. There was the bay to swim in, but they preferred a shower bath in their rooms. Country life bored them. A guy who works all night and sleeps all day ain't strong for rural pastimes. The sun hurts his eyes.

"Well, boys, we'll have a little trade to-night," I said, "and besides Hamlin there's the Wall street bunch from Long Branch."

While I expected no revenue from the rooms, if Hamlin felt like paying he should have the privilege. The restaurant and bar were expected to bring in enough to run the place.

There was a young man in town who had just got his eager mitts on a trust fund created for his benefit and held until his twenty-fifth year, and if I lured him to my cosey retreat and got him loosened up, as I knew I could, I'd be even for all summer. A few persons while automobiling would stop and order lunch or a drink. In these cases they were served, but at a pretty steep price. Still, they got the cream of the market, and no one cared if they came back or not. In fact, I hoped they wouldn't, for gossip travels fast, and Shelter Inn could stand a lot of silence.

"Ladies" a Curse.

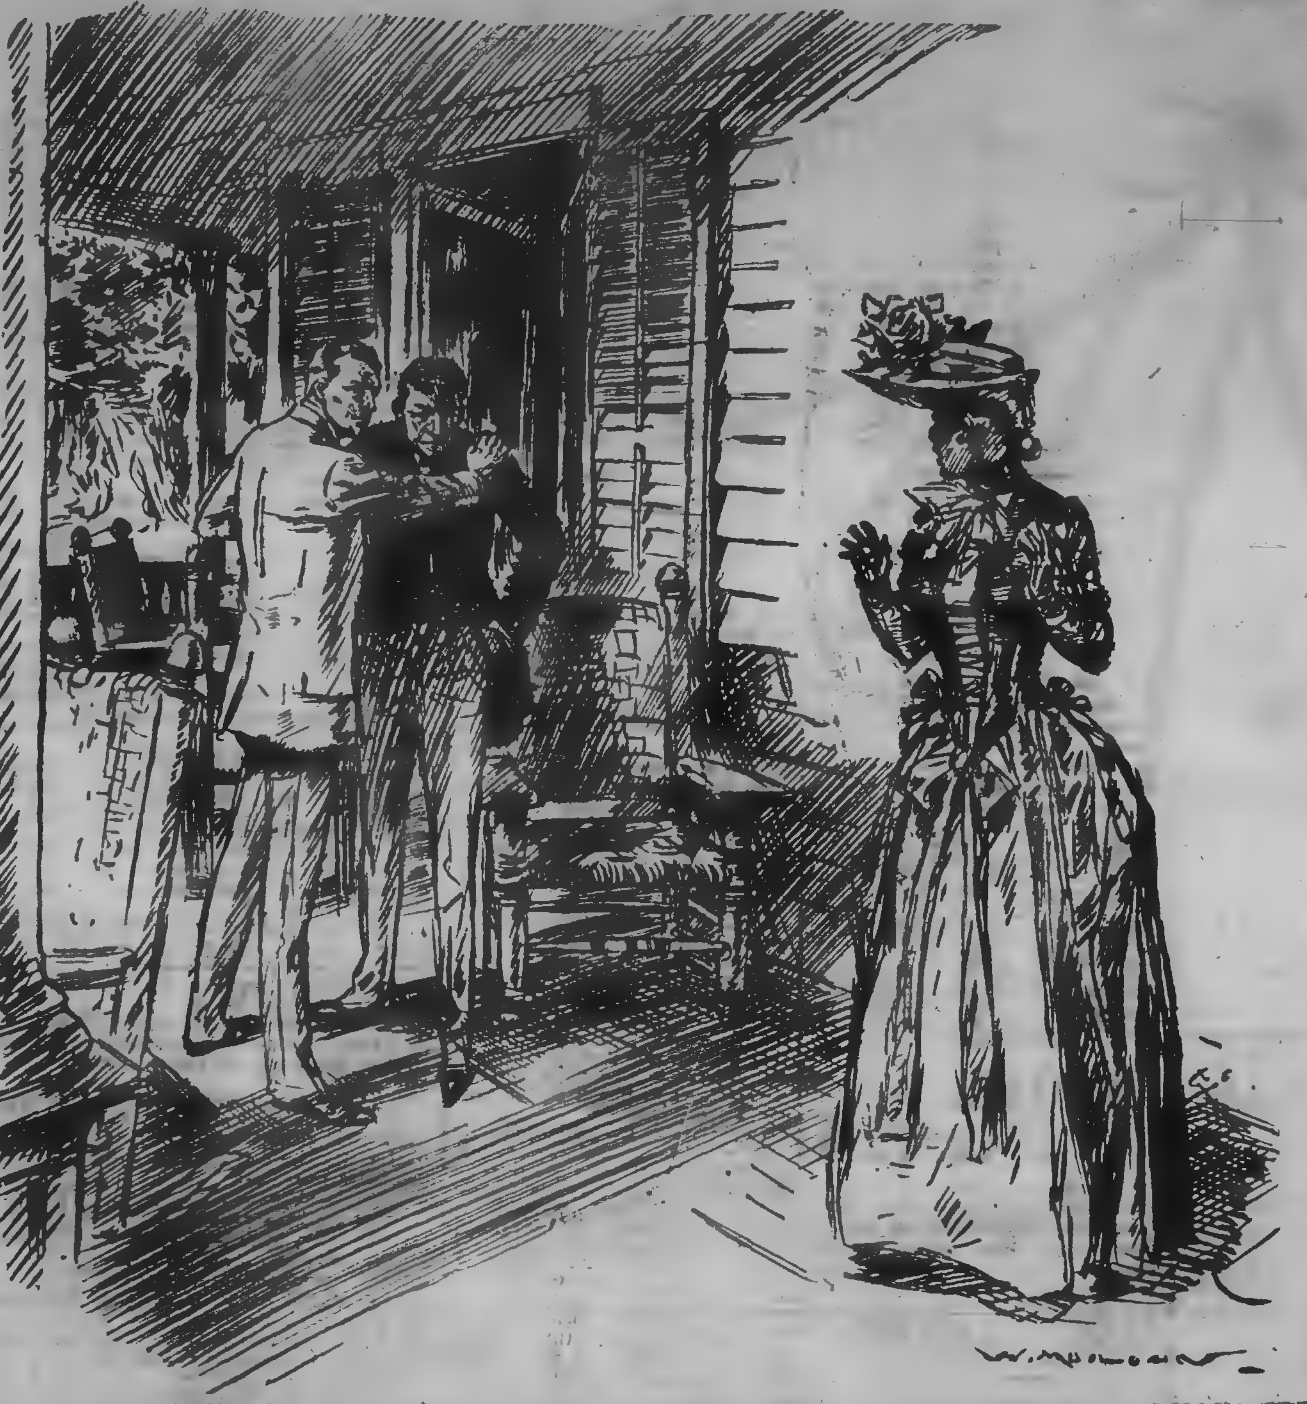
I sent Yukon in the machine to meet the boat train. It began to rain, and at five o'clock was quite dark. I heard the car rolling up the road, got into a dinner jacket and prepared to welcome the mark and his friend. On the last step I halted, for a woman's voice sounded from the veranda.



I WAS TRYING TO QUIET HIM WHEN MISS HAMLIN BLOWS UP TO US, GAVE A SCREAM AND THEN SHE TORE INTO HIM.

Oh, but I got sore! Had that mutt brought some doll—his wife or some one's else—it was all the same, for a skirt can spoil your business quicker than anything else. I was thinking of that when Scott softly came up to me.

"Mist' Frank," said he, grinning, "so we got ladies yeah, an' yo' done fohgot to tell me bote fixin' flowahs foh de table. Jus' listen at Mist' Yukon! Cyant he talk sof' an' low when he wants to? Reckon he'd make a hit in any comp'ny."

"But, curse it, they must have stopped to get out of the rain, Scott," I said; "that's all. There are no women coming here. It's Mr. Hamlin and a friend."

I moved to the window, where, standing in the shadow, I could view everything on the electric lighted veranda. Yukon was earnestly addressing two girls.

"But we have to be quite sure," said the smaller of two little creatures, who looked like a couple of innocent kids; "the ad. said ten a week, and that's twenty for two, and it's all we can afford. And what did you mean by asking if I was Mr. Willetts' wife?"

I knew. That was the divorced spouse of my craps dealer, and she had a habit of tipping the police to come and make a raid on Willetts' employer whenever the former failed to slip her the alimony. A little hard on Willetts' boss that was, and Yukon, being pessimistic, was always eying strange females with alarm. But what was all this gab about?

"And what I mean is, does the ten include the meals, too? Please pardon me for asking again, only we—I, at least—oh, Jessie, what shall we do?"

"Do? My dear lady, be shown to your room and then come down and order a nifty little dinner," said Yukon earnestly.

He turned that bunk laugh of his on, and after that the stuff was off.

"Huh! I don't see why you're fussing so, Anne," said the brown eyed one. "It looks just lovely to me, and this gentleman will consider us quite rude if we stay here asking silly questions over and over."

"Certainly," said Yukon. He almost purred it. I felt like sticking a foot and kicking the swine. He led them around the veranda, and in through the side door. I heard the stairs creak.

"For God's sake!" I exclaimed, rushing into the bar, "where's Burke? Where's Mr. Hamlin?"

"Only the ladies come," said he, "an', fur a fact, boss, I think they got in wrong, see?. Mr. Garvin, he's huntin' that gent when the littlest gal asts him sumpin'. She says they're expected, 'cause she 'phoned. Then I see him laffin', an' in they all git."

"You're sure Hamlin wasn't on the train?"

"There were but two cars and few passengers," he replied, "and Hamlin wasn't among them."

I decided that when Yukon quit acting chambermaid and got down to the ground floor again we'd hook up on this thing.

"Hey, Scott! Where's that housekeeper with the keys? Well, tell her to hike up here. I can't get 14 open."

They Like the Place.

I went to the stairs and listened after Yukon had roared this from above. He was answered by the occupant of No. 14.

"Damn it! I'm taking my bath is why you can't get into my room!"

Fine. The muffled voice of Willetts indicated that he was ready to repel boarders. Yukon was profusely begging his pardon. The girls were giggling. Then I heard:—

"Anne, did you see all those men, and no women at all? Good heavens, suppose—something seems wrong to me. This man can't be the clerk."

The girls were talking together as Yukon hunted the housekeeper, who was asleep, as usual.

"It's a magnificent place, dear—but his face is too kind for him not to be all right. And do remember how we read those ads till our heads buzzed. We'll stay here and have one glorious week, with no awful office. One week, then another year of horror. I'm not afraid."

Burke's guess was correct. They had us mixed. So they had one week free out of a year? Grand life for a white woman. Now I know what ailed Yukon. He'd murder a man, but kids and women had him buffaloed.

The housekeeper had been found. There were orders from Yukon, all the women gabbing at once. I broke in myself.

"I'll send up a bottle o' wine," I called.

Then I beat it, feeling like a fool. And yet I was rather pleased. Yukon came bustling down.

"Say, old pal," he said, "list to my song of woe!"

"Oh, I'm hep," I assured him, "but now what? They'll have the whole inn upside down."

"I had fifty on All Green at 6 to 1 Saturday," said he, flushing. "It's in my kick. Well, you said ten bucks a day to Hamlin. The girl thought you meant per week, 'cause she couldn't hear you. And her name's Jessie Hamlin. Ain't that a bit? Well, lemme put up that double sawbuck a day, and they'll never be the wiser. The poor little tykes. I'll trot 'em around if I don't get any sleep at all. Women got it pretty tough, ain't they?"

"Oh, shut up," I said sourly; "you and your bankroll gimme a pain. They're here and they'll stay. We'll take their two little ten spots, and you can run it up for 'em at the bank the day they're leaving. Only keep 'em both away from me. I don't like skirts."

"You're a prince," he began, but I waved him off.

I saw the girls later at a table in a corner and hurriedly warned Scott to keep our menus out of sight, for ham and eggs at $1.25 and peaches and cream the same didn't jibe with board at $10 a week. Yukon stuck around, of course. He kept it up until I warned him to leave 'em alone. Then he declared that he was only trying to make it cheerful.

"I only want the big boys," I remarked. "The pikers must keep right on going. This'll be a gold mine if they let us alone, and I think I've squared everybody. While only a small percentage of millionnaires are entertaining companions, their coin makes up for that." Two brown heads came into view just below. The rain was over, and our fair guests were strolling around the inn. So was Yukon. Had they heard me?

I hoped not.

"How about a little trip in the launch just for a breather?" Yukon was suggesting.

I leaned over the rail.

"Don't forget that you go to work at eight," I said sharply.

"What, at night?" they were asking him. "That's a funny time to go to work."

"But I'm the night watchman," said Yukon cheerfully.

Wall Street Arrives.

They laughed incredulously. He had switched to evening clothes and looked a pretty classy watchman. At eight I saw him headed for the club house, and followed him. We loafed there until eleven, when the Wall street people, having made a good many stops for liquid fuel, arrived.

It was a busy night, but the total clean-up was only ordinary. At five o'clock I went to bed, awaking an hour later. I was fidgety and couldn't sleep. I rang for a drink of booze, which I never touched in business hours, and the bar boy fetched it.

"The ladies are up," said he. "I was dozin' in the bar, an' they came a-walking' in, wonderin' what time breakfast was. So I said to wait awhile an' I'd tend to it."

What the devil did any one want to get up in the middle of the night for? Why didn't they sleep? I pondered a moment. The cook had been up fixing the crew's supper at four-thirty. He wouldn't feel much like piling out.

"Can you cook?" I asked.

"Me?" said the barkeep. "Hully gee, no. But I'll go after it an' take a chance."

"Oh, curse it!" I breathed and arose; "they must eat."

Some one padded along the hall. It was Yukon in bath robe and slippers. He stopped at my door.

"Watch me get that grub," he yawned. "I'm the old camp cook. Soon's I get my bath I'll be on the job and they won't know, because Mac here will serve it. He can be a waiter for once."

We made the cook and Scott stay up after that. Once I stuck around and fed with 'em, and I never realized until I got to my room that a man who came to breakfast in evening clothes must sure seem dippy. But they were game. After a look of surprise neither cracked about it. I gave 'em credit, reflecting on it afterward.

At twelve that night I left the club room and hurried down the corridor to get some blank checks which a loser was to fill out for me. Passing the girls' door their voices reached me.

"I have heard automobiles and carriage wheels for three nights, but I wouldn't wake you," soared through the transom. "Just now I stole out and almost ran into three men who were going toward what Mr. Garvin said was only a storehouse. One said, 'I lost twelve hundred Tuesday, and seven hundred to-night is stronger than I can go. Is his game square?' The other one said, 'Oh, sure it is; he's one square man, is Sturgis.' Jessie, we're in a den!"

"We haven't been hurt," said the other sleepily. "It is not a den! You're dreaming. Mr. Sturgis is a fine man. I know what the autos are. Long Branch is a prohibition town, and the men come here to drink. Mr. Garvin told me."

"Do you know, then, that what he said was champagne cider served to all the guests, and that we had at lunch and dinner, was real champagne, miss?"

"You've got a mash on him, you idiot," giggled Jessie. "Any one could see that. I only wish Mr. Sturgis would worry about me a little."

It seemed about time for me to be on my way. She got her wish next day. I didn't go to bed at all, and I took 'em for a twenty mile ride in the launch. I spun some expurgated yarns of different places, and Jessie came back with the simple tale of her own brief life. "One week out of a year to rest." It was in my mind as she talked, and it stayed there all day and part of the night, until the sudden arrival of the male Jesse Hamlin drove other things away. I didn't mention my odd mistake. He explained that he was going on a wedding trip to Thibet and wanted a flyer or two first.

Long Way from Broadway.

"Win out expenses, you know," he laughed.

To Thibet, eh? It was a long jaunt from Broadway, and it would be well to "take" Mr. Hamlin, and take him quick.

He liked any form of gambling, but the dice best.

"A craps game's speedy action," he observed. "I got fond of it in California." He began to play about nine.

He probably wouldn't care so much for it later, for I fancied that the sagacious Willetts had a few pairs of dice that might be new to him. He dropped three hundred at the craps table and wandered over to the roulette wheel. This move pleased me, and I honored Hamlin by taking the operator's place.

My customer had shot away a chunk in houses of chance, but he, like millions of others, might have gambled for forty years and never cut his eye teeth. He considers himself a "sport," and in his case the synonym for sport was "sucker." No one but a fool smears his bets all over the board. Fortunately, Hamlin was one, so he dribbled twenty dollar checks from the several stacks which he had bought on the numbers, the double and single "0," and the color. I encouraged him with gay sallies.

"Oh, I'll beat you yet," he shouted. "Hey! Bring me another drink, Scott, please."

Then he changed what he proudly described as his "system" and quartered $300 on four numbers. He lost each bet. Finally he won a few small bets, which reddened his face and brightened his eye.

Five hundred dollars on red followed, and black won. One thousand dollars on the black was his next effort. The ball clicked, and red came up. I rallied him merrily, and he quartered $1,000 on a new set of numbers he fancied. The ball threatened for an instant to die on one of his numbers, but it wobbled, and rolled finally into a 27 hole, on which Hamlin had played in $100 the previous spin. The double "0" fascinated him and he continually pushed $100 on it. When he did the little silver sphere dodged the "00" in the wheel as if it were alive. Single "0," 7, 5, 23, 2—anything he played won, except the double "0;" 35 won two small bets for him. Enticed by a hunch he didn't stop until $900 had dribbled away on the same number.

I'll tell you the cause of Hamlin's ill luck. There wasn't any luck to it, for it was a cinch, but not for him.

Down through the centre of the wheel ran a wire so fine that had it dangled before him he might not have seen it. It ran through the table leg, under the thick velvet rug and through it again in a spot which my foot covered. A pressure of my toe as I smiled amiably at the fool regulated the speed of the spinning wheel and settled the fate of the ball. As the bets are made before the wheel spins the answer was easy. When he won it was because I had to ease him along. Naturally he cashed mighty few bets, and watched the big ones raked in by the man who usually rolled the wheel, now acting as croupier.

It was six A. M. when Hamlin turned a dull eye on me and thickly said that would be plenty. He was pretty well boozed and very ugly. I had his check for $53,700, a good night's business.

Yukon escorted him to a room, and when he had flung himself upon the bed he muttered something about "stopping that check." That's usually their first thought.

There was only one early boat for New York. I was aboard when it left the pier. When I got back to Shelter Bay Burke met me with the machine.

"We've had a hot time at the house," said he. "Hamlin woke up and swore he'd have you raided. He was stampin' around an' met up with the two ladies an' one of 'em give him hail Columbia! They had it sumpin' awful, boss, an' she bawled him out fur fair."

I was horrified. We broke all the speed laws getting home. "Where's that mutt?" I whispered to Yukon. He laughed cheerfully.

"At first," said he, "I was going to lick the life half out of him, but I knew your policy—caution. I was trying to quiet him when Miss Hamlin blows up to us, gave a scream, and then she tore into him. 'So Sturgis is your gentleman friend,' says he, 'that's it? You've got a nice side partner. He's a crook and I'm goin' to the District Attorney of New Jersey and close him up to-day!' Honest, it was beautiful to see that gal, Frank. She's a peach. She's got the Injun sign on him, and he shut up like a whipped hound. What do you make of it?"

I was all up in the air. Hamlin was capable of making a beef to the authorities; all of our sportive rich are. Then I had to square him. I always had an ace in the hole on my customers, for it was necessary, if they got nasty, to come back at 'em in a hurry. I had the goods on this one, for his mother still controlled most of his estate, and I held some of his paper which wouldn't make pleasant reading for her. Also, he was just married, and notoriety was to be avoided. I found him walking in the grounds.

Did He Cash It?

"Well, old man," I shouted jovially, "how are you feeling?"

To my surprise, he rushed up to me, and shook hands.

"Did you cash it?" he cried. I nodded.

"Thank the Lord there was enough to meet it," he sighed. "I was afraid there wasn't, and Garvin said your telephone was out of order so I couldn't arrange it with the bank. You see, my mother's down on me already and any trouble"——

I shook hands again, and gave him a fond glance. It was all right. He left on the next boat, and mighty subdued was his demeanor. Now I must interview the lady who had so strangely calmed my mark. She was on the side veranda, and as I approached I did some hard thinking. It would be lonesome when that week of hers was gone. Would she be sorry to leave?

I was a direct sort of guy, and the way to find out was to ask her, of course. Now, I'd known plenty of women of all kinds, but the sex didn't make much of a hit with me. They were well enough in leisure hours, but to have one forever meddling in your affairs—I'd got that far when I looked up and saw the little girl. It was all off with me. She could butt in on my affairs or do whatever suited her. My heart was pumping like mad.

"Mr. Sturgis!" she said softly, "please come up here. I must tell you something—I must! That man Hamlin who quarrelled with Mr. Garvin while you were away—he was once my husband. I married him while we were both at college, but I had to leave him. I divorced him, and refused any alimony, and that's why I work as I do, as I have told you. I prefer to work, because—anyway, he threatened you, and I warned him he'd regret it if he tried to harm you."

She was crying. I climbed over the veranda rail. Never mind what my next move was. I asked why she had left him, though one look at him was a sufficient answer.

"Women, drink, and—gambling," she sobbed.

Gambling? Hum. I'd never seen any reason to feel ashamed of my profession. I wasn't then, but believe me, I was some worried.

"Gambling?" I said; "oh, you wouldn't stand for gambling?"

She blushed. I breathed hard, for she had me winging.

"Oh, it depends on who does it," she said. "Isn't it true that you are a gambler? Anne and I are sure of it."

"Yes, but I'm a good one, girl," I told her. "Don't that make a difference?"

She must have thought so from what she answered. Yukon and I went to town next day, and bought diamonds with Hamlin's money for a wedding present. That junk has always been a joke in my family. There, you've got my romance.

DEARER CEMENT MAY BE EXPECTED IN NEAR FUTURE

News that will be of great interest to local contractors and builders is the announcement of a rise in the price of cement which is predicted to take place shortly. Within the next month or two, partly on account of the firmness of steel, state manufacturers of the article, a substantial advance will come into effect.

It is not generally known that the present price of cement is about 25 per cent lower than that of last year. When asked as to the reason for the drop one large dealer told the Review it was due to the fierce competition which was being carried on in regard to the sale of the material. One of the largest manufacturers of cement in the country, however, stated that it had originated in the unwise selling methods adopted by some manufacturers. Cement, it was stated, generally rose or fell with the price of steel. The month of June was one of the lantest as regards trade in building material which has yet been experienced and during August, September and October, it is expected, prices will mount steadily. On account of the large amount of cement being used in Peterborough at the present time, the change in price will have considerable effect locally.

TORONTO EXCURSIONISTS PLEASED WITH VISIT HERE

West Toronto, July 21.—The annual outing of the Business Men's Association to Peterborough to-day was a decided success, in spite of the fact that the threatening weather dampened, for a short time during the afternoon, both the enthusiasm and the clothes of those who took part in the sporting events.

The steamer trip in the evening down the Trent Valley Canal and through the lift locks, was both enjoyable and instructive.

The officials of the Business Men's Association, to whom the success of the excursion is due, were tireless in their efforts to provide for everybody's comfort and enjoyment.

Chief Howard, of the Peterborough Fire Department is a man of parts. Whether engaged at explaining the electric mechanism of the fire alarms or acting as judge in a baby contest, the chief was equally at home. Chief Howard was judge in the baby show. The winners were:—Girls, Thelma Piggott, Vine street, 1; Edna Meadowcraft, 602 Campbell avenue, 2.

Boys—A. Brown, 613 Campbell avenue, 1; Frank H. Gavey, Myrtle avenue 2.

DOING WELL IN VANCOUVER

A Son of Mr. Richard Winch Builds Big Office Building— Area 12,430 Sq. Feet

The Review has received a copy of a handsome souvenir pamphlet containing views of the Winch Building, Vancouver, B.C. Mr. R. V. Winch, the owner, is the second son of Mr. Richard J. Winch, of this city. The building is a five-storey office building on the latest up-to-date modern plan. It is of steel and concrete stone. The measurements are 12,430 square feet area, the frontage being 120 feet on Howe street and 104 feet on Hogan street, the main business streets of Vancouver.

FEW CASES IN COUNTY COURT

Gypsies Have Been the Biggest Proposition for Some Time

There is very little doing in County Police Court circles at the present time. Although there have been many informations laid the cases have not been of an extensive nature. The gypsies proved to be the biggest proposition to handle for some time, but they were sent out of the county minus considerable of their money, without any serious trouble being experienced. Several cases of illicit selling of liquor have been disposed of, but on the whole, the county authorities are congratulating themselves that nothing of a serious nature has occurred within their jurisdiction and it is to be hoped that conditions will continue so.

DID NOT LIKE THE INSPECTION

Considerable indignation has been caused in London, Ont., by the report of the wire inspector of the Fire Underwriters' Association. He inspected 240 buildings and condemned the wiring in 208 of them. This means that the London people will be compelled to expend about $50,000 or $75,000 in rewiring their premises if they expect to have the insurance rate reduced.

REV. MR. BROWN TO SPEAK TO-NIGHT

A Strong Appeal Made Last Night for those Present to Make a Decision

At last night's evangelistic meeting in the tent on George street, Mr Whelan was the speaker, and a large number were present. He took his text from Matt. 27:22, "What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ." These words were uttered by Pilot in the Judgment Hall, to the people in regard to Christ, whom they wished to have crucified. The speaker wished to show how, at the present time, many of us know what the proper course is, but do not act on it as we should. He made a strong appeal to those present to make a decision and accept Christ.

Rev. Mr. Brown, of St. James' Methodist church will speak at the meeting to-night, and Mr. Soper, of George street will act as chairman.

A BURNT BARRIER,

The Lover Laid His Pride at His Sweetheart's Feet.

By MARIE MONTROSE.

[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Down the dust white country road sped Doxy, palpitating and panic stricken, her eyes bent on a volume of smoke that was rolling up from the sheep dotted pasture. She went "cross lots" and came to the charred remains of the old farmhouse, where a knot of neighbors, helpless and wondering, gathered round the pathetically small pile of rescued household effects.

Doxy was not a young woman, but she was of the type that time touched gently. Her eyes were soft and gray and expressive of a past but unforgotten time. Her optimistic fatalism was not wanting in this hour of trouble.

"I don't see how you managed to save so many things," she said to her friends, each of whom at this encouragement began to point out what he had snatched from the flames.

"See, Miss Barton," cried a lad, triumphantly thrusting a tin can into her hand, "I hearn you say as how this 'ere was yer bank, so I grabbed it fust thing."

"Oh, Jim, there is $50 in it!"

Her father, Seth Barton, now arrived upon the scene. His heart was full of memories which were smothered in the philosophical remark, "Never could have saved her in this wind!"

"You and Doxy 'll come right home with us and stay," cordially invited the nearest neighbor.

"You are so kind, but we'll stay right here," said Doxy in response to each invitation. "Our upstairs is fitted up snug as a fireside, you know."

Her father's stoical face brightened. He had a catlike clinging to home—not from love of every heart beat for it, as in Doxy's case, but because he could not bear the thought of uprooting and transplanting.

The neighbors carried the goods and chattels to the barn and helped Doxy arrange a temporary home. While the men were aiding in the evening work their wives prepared supper. Any event, joyful or calamitous, in the district was deemed an "occasion" worthy of a general repast. After supper they departed for their homes. Seth settled down to his evening pipe and weekly paper as if nothing had happened.

Then Doxy in the soft shadows of the dusk stole out and went through the garden to the blackened ruins of tottering walls and crumbled mortar. All the voices of long ago called to her, most persistently the voice of the youth who ten years before had wooed her.

There had been the lovers' quarrel, and Jed Knox in a moment of hot headed anger had sworn he would never again cross the Barton threshold.

Time and events showed him that he was entirely in the wrong and that the quarrel had been of his own making, but he held stubbornly to his oath. With quiet and firm dignity Doxy had refused to see him elsewhere than in her own home.

As Jed's stubbornness increased he grew bitter and morose, avoiding all mention of Doxy.

She started at sight of a man coming from out the ruins, but in an instant she recognized Sol Opper, the village carpenter, early in line for a contract.

"Sol," said Doxy briskly, "I want you to build me a house as near like this as you can."

"Waal, Miss Barton, tell me how much you can put into a house."

"There's the $50 Jim saved, the bank account, a little insurance, some that Hobbs owes us"—

"Knock out the cellar," commanded Doxy, "and take off the blinds. In the fall I will use the turkeys for blinds."

"The turkeys!" repeated Sol wonderingly.

"The money I get for selling them, I mean."

When the blinds were off, the bay window deducted, the gables torn off, the back porch taken away, the stairs removed and a general clearing of fireplace, attic, paint, plaster, lath and partitions had been effected, the amount of cash available was triumphantly reached.

The architecture appealed to Sol as easy to build, but was not in accordance with his ideas of what a dwelling should be.

"Your house won't have no insides, Miss Barton, but I'll be on hand tomorrow to begin," said he disapprovingly.

When he had gone she again resumed her twilight reveries.

"Miss Doxy!"

She started and, turning, saw the figure of a lad so like the youth of the long ago that there was a momentary stirring in her heart like pain.

"Don't you remember me? Laurie Knox?"

He was Jed's young nephew, who had been used as a child to spend his summer vacations with his uncle.

"Little Laurie! A man!"

"I hope so," he replied, taking her hand. "I came today for a visit after all these years. We just heard of the fire, and Uncle Jed asked me to come and see you and ask if there was anything we could do to help you. Won't you and your father come over to Uncle Jed's and stay, just for night anyway?"

Had it been so long, then, his struggles? She pondered sadly. It hurt her that he could not come himself, but must send another. She thanked the boy kindly, but declined the invitation. After talking a few moments of old times she bade him go to the barn and see her father.

"You had better come, too," he pleaded. "I don't believe it's just good for you to stay here."

She smiled at his boyish wisdom.

"Just a few moments more, Laurie, and then I'll join you and father."

It was very quiet. A lone bird called. She felt solitary and outlawed. A third time she was interrupted. There was no mistaking the man. Jed, strong and straight, his grimness softened, but showing in the lines of his face, came straight up to her.

"Doxy, I thought they would never go. As soon as I sent the lad I knew I must come myself. I took a short cut, but the Opper man was ahead of me and then Laurie."

"Well?"

Her voice was curiously subdued.

"Doxy, I am here at last. I have punished myself all these years, which have not meant much to you, for you are as young and as fair as the night"—

"The night you said you should never cross our threshold."

"Doxy," he cried, seizing her hand passionately, "I have suffered for it. Be good to me."

"Why did you come tonight, Jed?" she asked quietly, but with beating heart.

"Why? Because everything brought me. I couldn't keep away."

"You came," she said, turning proudly away, "because you knew that at last you could come and still keep your oath, because you knew the house was gone."

"No," he said, with a long breath. "You don't mean that, and you don't think so."

She felt his strong arms about her. She was lifted and carried over the smoking ashes and bricks to the place where the doorstep had been. He held her closely with his left arm, while his right hand grasped a blackened beam. In a moment he was standing on the charred threshold, pressing her to him in a tight embrace.

"Here," he said with forced lightness, "I lay my pride at your feet. Now, Doxy, won't you say something?"

"Never mind the ten years now, Jed. They are gone—like the house."

"But we'll have a new house, Doxy, right here, and Sol shall put on and in all those things you told him to leave off."

"I say," cried the voice of Laurie from a distance, "Uncle Seth just found a ten dollar bill in the old dictionary. He says he'll bet it's the one he lost ten years ago."

A Case For Condolence.

Not all that glitters is gold and not all who lean over the rail are seasick. One of the lessons of life is not to take too much for granted. However, in the instance mentioned by F. J. M. Smith in "The Hades of Ardenne" the sympathy was as genuine as if the object had been more deserving.

Night was falling as Daubiton paced the deck. One by one the passengers had gone below. One lady remained in the stern, leaning over the rail, gazing sadly over the sea. Daubiton could just make out her outlines in the dusk.

As he drew near her on one of his rounds a heartrending groan startled his ears. He looked wistfully at the graceful figure shrouded in its long garment. He could make out the small head bent over the foaming water in exquisite feminine grace. If he could only help her!

Back and forth he paced. She was evidently suffering from the worst form of seasickness. It was sad to think of her all alone with no one to comfort her. Daubiton debated. Perhaps she preferred to be left alone.

The boat suddenly gave a roll and plunged wildly. There was a shrill shriek, followed by a terrible groan. Daubiton could stand it no longer. He went to her and spoke respectfully, "Can I do anything for you?"

There was no answer.

"She seems unconscious," he said to himself and laid his hand gently on her shoulder. Then he started. It was no lady. It was a fender, and the groans were made by the chains which led from the rudder to the steering house.

Mother Love Defined.

What is material instinct? Is it a tangible something or is it love, the desire to protect? This wonderful mother love—what would it not do? Suns rise and set just for baby. Conversation on other subjects is tabooed in the house where a new monarch reigns. The four walls of the home are suddenly glorified with the presence of the little newcomer; the ambition of both father and mother reaches its zenith. Pleasurable pastimes we were wont to indulge in are forgotten; pursuits that filled our life, music, art, literature, things that were part of us, associated with our very name—where have they gone? All laid aside as of no moment now; in the future perhaps when "baby" is not so dependent on our every thought we will again feel their charm. Just now they might as well never have been, so completely do we give ourselves to this new life.

This is maternal instinct.—Mrs. Arnoldi in Uncle Sam's Magazine.

Moral Support.

"You think well of Miss Scadds?"
"Well, I'm conspiring to marry her."
"It takes two to make a conspiracy."
"I have help."
"Her mother?"
"No, herself."

WOMAN WAS NOT SUICIDE

Bayfield, July 23.—That she came to her death from causes unknown to them, but that she did not commit suicide, was the verdict of the jury empanelled by Coroner Dr. Shaw of Clinton to enquire into the death of Mrs. W. J. Burns of this village, who was found dead in her house with a stocking knotted around her throat on Saturday last.

The jury convened here yesterday afternoon and after hearing the medical evidence produced by Crown Attorney Seagar of Goderich, which went to show that there was no evidence of death by strangulation, brought in the above verdict.

The crown attorney declares that the mystery of Mrs. Burns' death will never be solved. In the meantime a daughter, who is demented, will be placed in an asylum.

ARMOR PLATE STANDS TEST

London, July 23.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Harold A. Richardson of London, Ont., who has been here two years in connection with an improved process for the manufacture of armor plate, seen by the Canadian Associated Press at the Hyde Park Hotel, said he had scored a great success in the tests of his plate by the naval authorities, which culminated on Saturday at Whale Island. A six-inch plate was fired at from a distance of 120 feet by a 9.2 inch gun, with armor-piercing capped shells, which was a severe test. No impression was made on the plate, though the impact shattered the shell into a thousand fragments.

FARMER RUNS DOWN AN AUTO

Springfield, Mass., July 23.—The order of events as depicted in comic weeklies was reversed by a farmer on a load of hay, who ran down a touring car in Main street, near Bridge street. The chauffeur drove the automobile part way on the sidewalk in a vain attempt to escape the load of hay. The farmer was greatly incensed when stopped by a policeman, who demanded his name.

"Never heard of such doin's in my town," he said testily. "Ain't a load of hay big enough for any machine to see coming and ain't it entitled to either side of the road?"

FISHERY CASE MAY BE POSTPONED

Ottawa, July 23.—Contrary to general expectations the fisheries dispute between Newfoundland and the United States will not be referred to at The Hague conference this year, but will probably be referred to next year.

Meanwhile Hon. A. B. Aylesworth and J. S. Ewart, K.C., are in London preparing Canada's case along with Sir Robert B. Finley, the distinguished Scottish lawyer.

Mr. Aylesworth will proceed to Vienna in a few weeks, where he will consult with an ear specialist regarding his deafness, which occasioned him much discontent during last session of Parliament. He will return to Canada in October.

USED BABES AS SHIELDS

New York, July 23.—A pitched battle was fought at pier No. 8, Brooklyn, yesterday, between immigration inspectors and a band of 24 gypsies, who were being deported to South America.

Enraged at the immigration commission's decision, after they claimed to have established that they possessed $1,500 in cash, the wanderers refused to board the steamer Verdi, which was to take them back to Buenos Ayres.

In the heat of the melee several children of the band were injured because their parents, who carried them, used them as shields, and in some cases pushed the little bodies against the inspectors, who were trying to drive them from a tug on to the steamer. One little girl was still unconscious when the vessel sailed.

The band was finally driven on to the dock, where a reinforcement of longshoremen got them aboard the Verdi.

STREET CAR RAN INTO G.T.R. GATES

Rails Were Slippery and Car Could Not be Stopped in Time

Street car No. 16, ran into the railway gates on Charlotte street last evening, but fortunately very little damage was done. The car was going towards the west and the gates were down at the time as an engine was shunting close by. When near the gates the brakemen on the street car applied the brakes but was unable to stop his car on account of the track being slippery as a result of the rain falling at the time. A couple of bolts on the gates were broken, but supposing there had been a freight or passenger train passing at the time. What then?

PRICES OF BEEF HIDES ARE HIGH

The present high price of beef hides is said to be the highest that has prevailed for several years. Ten cents is the prevailing price while seven and eight cents was the price for the same month last year. ## SOCIALIST ASKED TO TAKE PLACE OF CLEMENCEAU

Brilliant Frenchman Will Probably Consent to Form a Ministry, but Many Believe He Cannot Survive Widespread Enmity.

Paris, July 23.—President Fallieres last night asked Aristide Briand, Minister of Justice and Worship, to form a new Cabinet to succeed the Clemenceau Ministry, which resigned Tuesday night.

M. Briand, brilliant scholar and avowed Socialist and architect of the final chapters of the separation law, was summoned to the Elysee Palace and asked to reconstruct the Clemenceau Cabinet.

M. Briand promised his answer today. The shifting of some of the portfolios and the retention of all the Ministers except Picquart, Picard and Millies-Lacroix, Ministers of War, the Navy, and Colonies respectively, is now anticipated.

Considerable opposition to M. Briand has developed, especially among the more conservative Senators and Radicals, who dominate the party of the Republican majority, on the ground of the selection of a Socialist at the head of the Government would be equivalent to proclaiming the bankruptcy of the Radicals. Predictions are freely made in some quarters to-day that M. Briand would fail in his efforts to form a Ministry which can command a majority.

Should M. Briand succeed in forming a Cabinet, as his friends believe he will, the tendencies of the new Ministry will be distinctly more socialistic than those of the outgoing Cabinet. M. Briand is opposed to the dissolution of the revolutionary general federation of labor, which M. Clemenceau favored, and M. Barthou, Minister of Public Works, and M. Viviani, Minister of Labor, have championed socialistic doctrines.

A Briand Cabinet would be exceedingly distasteful to the moneyed classes. The Conservatives, however, believe that the Briand Cabinet will be short-lived.

The cost of repairing the break in the Soo canal will cost $50,000.

Several buildings, valued at $25,000, were destroyed by fire in Montreal.

The body of an Armenian was found in a trunk in a room at Lynn, Mass.

The Half Moon, a replica of the caravel in which Henry Hudson sailed up the river which bears his name, reached New York from Holland yesterday.

It is probable that the Joint Conference Committee on the tariff at Washington will place a duty of $1.25 per thousand on lumber and $3 per ton on print paper.

Mayor Sam Stevely of London left for Medicine Hat yesterday and in honor of the event his friends were present at the depot in force. He was given a phony diamond ring, a gold brick and various articles of ornament and use.

DRIVER AND LITTLE BOY WERE INJURED

Serious Runaway Accident in Ashburnham Yesterday Afternoon—Milling Company's Waggon Overturned and Occupants Were Pinned Under it—Both Severly Hurt.

A runaway, attended with rather serious results, took place on Roger street, Ashburnham, near Nicholls Oval, yesterday afternoon at about 3 30 o'clock, when a delivery team of the Central Milling Co ran away. The driver, Mat. McMahon, and Charlie Hewson, the 7-year-old son of John H. Hewson, 544 Rogers street, were both hurt by being thrown out of the rig.

The pole of the wagon jarred against one of the team's neck, and the horse became frightened and commenced to kick. It kicked over the pole, and with its leg pulling against the pole and the other horse straining to get away, the pole snapped and tilted forward to the ground. The wagon was overturned and both occupants were thrown out and pinned under it. Mr. McMahon had his leg injured, his left arm and hand severely hurt, and received a nasty abrasion on the face. The boy's scalp was cut and he had a rib broken as well as being injured internally. He was taken to his home and his physician, Dr. Frederick, stated that while the lad was pretty badly injured, his condition was not serious. The horses had only gone a few yards when the wagon was overturned.

The team broke clear of the rig and dashed around the lock and over to Hunter street. They were caught near the Maple Leaf hotel.

The accident was not in any way due to any negligence on the part of the driver, who is thoroughly reliable and careful. He is not in the habit of taking young boys with him on his trips, but the little fellow wanted to see his father, who is the head miller at the Central mill.

HASTINGS COUNTY GIRL IS CURED AT ST. ANNE DE BEAUPRE

Kemp of this city a few days ago received a medal of honor for services performed on the Wilderness battlefields, May 6, 1864, when he was a mere lad of 20 years, a member of Co. F, Fifth Michigan Volunteers. He dashed into the ranks of the enemy, capturing the flag of the 31st North Carolina, tearing it from the staff which the colors-bearer held too tightly to be wrenched away.

In some way the letter from his colonel commending his bravery was mislaid and was only found a few days ago.

INTERCOLONIAL PAYS DIVIDEND

Ottawa, July 23.—The gross earnings of the Intercolonial Railway for April and May were $1,469,000. The June returns are not complete.

At the Railway Department yesterday it was stated that as a result of the policy of retrenchment adopted by the commissions, the working expenses are well within the revenue and if the present net revenue is maintained the railway ought to show a surplus of three-quarters of a million at the end of the fiscal year.

ECUMENICAL COUNCIL TO MEET IN TORONTO

The conference here will be the fourth, the first having been held in London, the second in Washington and the third in London.

J., July 23.—Conscience-stricken because he had failed to pay a bill for funeral expenses for a relative, contracted ten years ago, Frank Quick of this city went to the home of Thomas Crawford, a former undertaker, yesterday and settled. Mission Boat Wrecked.

Vancouver, B.C., July 23.—The Methodist mission boat Udal struck a rock early Wednesday morning near the entrance to the Portland Canal, and foundered in 100 feet of water.

SAYS MINES ARE UNSAFE

Glace Bay, July 23.—There is scarcely a ripple on the surface here yesterday to indicate any change in the situation, although the company reports a much larger output from the collieries.

Rumor says that conditions in the mine are growing dangerous. Skilled men have more than they can attend to and the great pressure is to get out coal regardless of the care of the mine. One man left No. 2 and said he would not stay in under present conditions as he recognized them unsafe.

GLOBE GIRDLING FOR BIG PURSE

New York, July 23.—H. A. Greenlee, a veteran of the Boer war, who says he is the sole survivor of a party of four young Australians who set out from New South Wales on June 1, 1905, to compete for a purse of $75,000 in a five-year walk around the world, arrived at the city hall Wednesday night. Thus far, he says, he has completed 33,000 miles of his devious journey, having averaged nearly 25 miles a day since leaving Australia. Of his three companions, two were killed by savages in Africa, and the third died of fever in Colorado.

A PAGEANT FOR RUSSIA'S CZAR

London, July 23.—The summer of 1909 will be remembered as a season of naval pageantry.

Last month the greatest assemblage of war craft in the history of the British navy took place off Portsmouth. This week the same ships entered the Thames and the public was able to see the largest fleet that ever anchored so near London.

On Saturday the ships will gather at Portsmouth, where, on July 31, they will be reviewed by the King, and on the following Monday, the Emperor of Russia will have an opportunity to see them when his yacht comes to Cowes for the meeting with the King.

THE JAIL AS A LABOR BUREAU

Winnipeg Prisoners Freed if They Work on Farms

Winnipeg, July 23.—Daily the fear of a scarcity of farm labor this summer grows apace with favorable news from the agricultural districts. At the present time there are four hundred applications on file with the Provincial Government, and nearly seven hundred with the Dominion immigration officers, asking for men, but neither can supply any. The C.P.R. is at present endeavoring to arrange excursions from the east, but reports received indicate that men there are also scarce. When the excursions are en route this year every effort will be made to prevent a recurrence of the rowdyism of last year, and if necessary a special constable will be placed on each car. Yesterday Magistrate Daly decided to try an experiment. Hearing of the scarcity of men, he released all short-term prisoners on condition that they get employment.

General Grain Agent Atcheson of the C.P.R., who has just returned from a tour of inspection of the crops, says the grain is at about the same stage of development as in other years, and especially in Manitoba the harvest will be about the same time as last year. He does not look for more than an average crop, which would mean a yield of about a hundred million bushels of wheat.

EXPORTING RAW MATERIAL

Mr. Dan Mann of Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann, the railway builders and transportation specialists, lays it down that the export of raw material should be unhampered. This opinion is a natural one for a man whose business it is to provide something for his railways to carry. We had enough of that theory, however, some years ago, when our logs were being towed across Georgian Bay and our mills there were lying idle and becoming covered with a mantle of moss. So soon as an export duty or its equivalent was put upon logs the Georgian Bay district became a scene of activity. Mills sprang up into life again, and large new ones were erected. The woods were thronged with "lumber-jacks" and resounded with the echoes of active effort. To comply with Mr. Mann's requirements would be to lay the pall of silence or the hand of death upon the mills, and all that the manufacture of logs into lumber means there. It would provide more freight, possibly, for the transporters, since logs are bulkier than the finished product, but in all these branches of industry of which the lumbering is but an example, the blow to Canada would be severe. By means of the N. P. the principle of home-development and stubborn patriotism was introduced into Canada for the first time, hence the other meaning of the words National Policy. It was a policy truly national and from the date of its adoption Canada, as a country, has become a budding nation, the home of a coming world people. It, however, we continue to spend all our savings, and if we mortgage our credit into the bargain in the building of railways, that others would have built for the mere privilege of building them, without asking for a bonus or using up the credit which we need for other things, we shall have an opportunity to repent at leisure while the financiers betake themselves, as they are already doing, to new fields in Mexico and Brazil.

AN IMPORTANT ADMISSION

The decrease in the rural population of the Province of Ontario is reported by an official of the local government, is traceable to the same causes that have depopulated the farming districts of the New England States. These are the attractions of the West for farmers' sons, desirous of making independent homes for themselves, and the drift citywards of those disinclined to life in the country. In New England immigrants from Europe, hungry for land and inured to severe toil, have gladly availed themselves of the opportunities offered them by deserted farms, and are gradually spreading over the land, taking the places left vacant by the earlier inhabitants. This is not the case in Ontario, nor in any of the eastern provinces. Our immigrants, as a rule, rush on to the west, except the Jews, who largely congregate in the cities, Montreal especially, as the greatest manufacturing and trading centre in the Dominion. With us it is the French-Canadian overflow that spreads over the lands from which the native young brain and muscle have departed. These will probably with as largely forestall foreign elements, and soon make good any decadence in numbers. New Ontario is not included in the reported decline, for the population there is growing rapidly and largely, and helps to account for the decrease in the older settled parts of the province. Nor is the less extensive cultivation of wheat to be taken as a sign of decadence in Ontario, that being the natural result of the greater production of that grain in the Prairie province. Land is too valuable to be long idle. Dairying and more intensive farming will take the place of grain-growing. The need of higher farming on worn-out lands will, however, preclude ignorant and slipshod methods and will keep the control of the land in the hands of the well-to-do and intelligent.—The Witness.

STILL ANOTHER EMPIRE

BRITISH EAST AFRICA IS SETTLER'S LAND OF PROMISE.

Col. Owen Thomas Writes of Britain's Little Known Possession on the East Coast of the Dark Continent —Slaver and Missionary Has Opened Up the Land, But Traveling Is Difficult.

An Oriental proverb has it that seekers after Heaven not infrequently miss Paradise, says Col. Owen Thomas in The Standard of Empire. Whether the statement be sound theology or no I will not surmise, but at least the sentiment seems appropriate when white settlement in Africa is the subject under discussion, for in that great continent many goals have lured the Englishman, many El Dorados have shown for him a fleeting panorama. South Africa, North Africa, and the poisonous West, the mysterious Central districts—attractive by the very uncertainty in which distance and silence have alike wrapped their wealth—each in its turn has called across the seas to the British pioneer, and has reaped its harvest in conquered nature, extended Empire, and narrow graves.

No man who regards Oversea Settlement as I regard it regrets the lives laid down by these earthly Heaven seekers; it was, and is, and will be part of the history-making of our people, but I do marvel sometimes that so few have marked our little Paradise away to the east, where the Indian Ocean laps a wide new land of infinite promise.

And now to lift very lightly and quickly a corner of the curtain that veils the real British East Africa from the comprehension of the Britons of the Empire! At the outset of European visitation the whole East Coast of Africa seems to have been mainly regarded as means to an end. The first Portuguese governor of Mombasa was appointed in 1592, and the era of Portuguese control may be said to have continued till 1729. Considering the duration of this occupation, the tangible results were remarkably few. Moslem rule followed, and lasted with various ups and downs into the lifetime of the present generation, when the exploration of Central Africa and the activities of Christian missionaries on the one hand and slave dealers on the other began to direct attention to this great country lying between the Indian Ocean and the big lakes. The partition of East Africa and the opening of the whole area dates from the grant of a charter of incorporation to a German company in 1885. Three years later the Imperial British East Africa Company was likewise established by Royal Charter, and history began in the Empire sense. The first rail of the so-called Uganda Railway (of which not one yard is in Uganda) was laid in 1895, the Protectorate having meanwhile been established, and its 584 miles reached completion at the end of 1901. Already receipts far outweigh expenditure, though it must be some, perhaps many, years before the capital expenditure is written off.

These few words about the railway may suggest a country of modern convenience in travel, but that is still, and will long be, an unrealized dream. The main line runs from Mombasa to Lake Victoria Nyanza, traversing in its course each successive belt of the Protectorate, but immediately the traveler or settler gets away from that one iron road he falls back upon safari as in days of yore. "Safari," let it be understood, is the Swahili expression for the traveling camp life amid primeval forests and along untrodden stretches of pathless wilds, peopled only by the whispering memories of primitive man. For British East Africa is still the Paradise of the big game tracker, and on safari, away from ordinary routes, lions and leopards, elephants and rhinoceros, buffalo and wilderbeast, hippopotamus and crocodile, giraffe and zebra, and a host of other animals haunt the stranger's wanderings.

It would be impossible for any writer to convey to the homelander, the smoke of whose neighbor's chimney is rarely out of sight, a convincing impression of that weird experience, the first safari. Presently, however, the wanderer, whatever his particular idiosyncrasy, must happen on what appeals to him to be the pick of the earth; to one man, perhaps, the wonderful sweep of the enormous grazing areas in the Highlands, to another the ravines of the great Rift Valley, the wonderful agricultural districts of the Highland settlements, the big game areas of Ukamba, or the extraordinary rich flats and valleys of the tropical coast belt. Somewhere the settler with an eye for land can hardly fail to mark the man-hungry country which cries to him, individually, for settlement. For the predominant feature of British East Africa is its remarkable variety and the scope it affords every kind of land settler. There are, of course, unhealthy districts for whites, and there are considerable areas where it would not be wise to take a young family, even though a healthy man could, with reasonable precautions, do well enough. On the other hand, the slopes of the Shimba Hills could provide the planter of tropical products with a home for wife and children within reach of his work on the coastland, while away in the Highlands, where the bulk of British settlement has taken place, the children are as rosy, strong, and full of spirits as their English cousins.

British East Africa is not as yet the country for the man with no capital beyond his manhood—great as that asset is when the possessor has the good fortune to be British. The difficulty for the man without capital of reaching his market practically excludes him for the present.

Makes the Glassware Fairly Sparkle

Mirrors and glassware are hard to clean with ordinary soap. The oily matter often leaves streaks and spots that are hard to remove.

But with Taylor's Borax Soap the result is wonderful. The surface is left without a single streak—it glitters and sparkles as though it were diamond.

And your work is only half as hard. For this soap reduces rubbing to a minimum—it works almost like magic.

Taylor's Soap

Borax is the most powerful cleanser in the world. It does wonders that are almost unbelievable until you once see the results for yourself. When you spend an hour cleaning the bath room, the tub, the wash bowl and the mirrors, you have wasted just half an hour. You would have done less than half the rubbing and finished in half the time with Taylor's Borax Soap.

For this soap does more than any other soap you have ever known. It loosens every bit of dirt instantly, it destroys every possible germ and leaves everything both clean and sweet. Hard water often hardens the hands—it leaves them red and rough. But this delightful borax soap softens the water and so softens the hands—it leaves them whiter and daintier than ever before.

We use only the finest of cocoanut oil in this soap. We go more than 12,000 miles to the isle of Ceylon just to be sure this oil is pure and fresh. Then we boil it doubly long and run thousands of gallons of pure water through it to remove every impurity. It is the cleanest and purest of soaps.

It requires twenty-one days to make a single cake. The labor of more than 200 persons is needed.

Yet this soap costs no more than the ordinary. We make millions and millions of cakes every year and are thus able to buy at the lowest of prices.

By KATHERINE CECIL THURSTON,

Copyright, 1903, 1904, by Harper & Brothers

Loder's face lighted up. "I can imagine it," he said, with an unusual touch of warmth.

Lakeley watched him intently for a moment. Then with a quick action he leaned forward and rested his elbows on the desk.

"It's going to be something more than imagination for you, Chilcote," he said impressively. "It's going to be solid earnest!" He spoke rapidly and with rather more than his usual shrewd decisiveness; then he paused to see the effect of his announcement.

Loder was still studying the flaring poster. At the other's words he turned sharply. Something in Lakeley's voice, something in his manner, arrested him. A tinge of color crossed his face.

"Reality?" he said. "What do you mean?"

For a further space his companion watched him, then with a rapid movement he tilted back his chair.

"Yes," he said. "Yes; old Fraide's instincts are never far out. He's quite right. You're the man!"

Lakeley still scrutinized him with an air of brisk satisfaction; then with a gesture of finality he tossed his cigar away.

"My dear chap," he said, "there's going to be a breach somewhere—and Fraide says you're the man to step in and fill it! You see, five years ago, when things looked lively on the gulf and the Bundar Abbas business came to light, you did some promising work, and a reputation like that sticks to a man even when he turns slacker! I won't deny that you've slacked abominably," he added as Loder made an uneasy movement, "but slacking has different effects. Some men run to seed, others mature. I had almost put you down on the black list, but I've altered my mind in the last two months."

Again Loder stirred in his seat. A host of emotions were stirring in his mind. Every word wrung from Lakeley was another stimulus to pride, another subtle tribute to the curious force of personality.

"Well?" he said. "Well?"

Lakeley smiled. "We all know that Sefborough's ministry is—well, top-heavy," he said. "Sefborough is building his card house just a story too high. It's a toss up what'll upset the balance. It might be the army, of course, or it might be education, but it might quite as well be a matter of foreign policy!"

They looked at each other in comprehensive silence.

"You know as well as I that it's not the question of whether Russia comes into Persia, but the question of whether Russia goes out of Persia when these Hazaras are subdued! I'll lay you what you like, Chilcote, that within one week we hear that the risings are suppressed, but that Russia, instead of retiring, has advanced those tempting twenty miles and comfortably ensconced herself at Meshed—as she ensconced herself on the island of Ashurada." Lakeley's nervous, energetic figure was braced, his light blue eyes brightened by the intensity of his interest.

"If this news comes before the Easter recess," he went on, "the first nail can be hammered in on the motion for adjournment. And if the right man does it in the right way I'll lay my life 'twill be a nail in Sefborough's coffin."

Loder sat very still. Overwhelming possibilities had suddenly opened before him. In a moment the unreality of the past months had become real; a tangible justification of himself and his imposture was suddenly made possible. In the stress of understanding he, too, leaned forward, and, resting his elbows on the desk, took his face between his hands.

For a space Lakeley made no remark. To him man and man's moods came second in interest to his paper and his party politics. That Chilcote should be conscious of the glories he had opened up seemed only natural; that he should show that consciousness in a becoming gravity seemed only right. For some seconds he made no attempt to disturb him, but at last his own irrepressible activity made silence unendurable. He caught up his pencil and tapped impatiently on the desk.

"Chilcote," he said quickly and with a gleam of sudden anxiety, "you're not by any chance doubtful of yourself?"

At sound of his voice Loder lifted his face. It was quite pale again, but the energy and resolution that had come into it when Lakeley first spoke were still to be seen.

"No, Lakeley," he said very slowly, "it's not the sort of moment in which a man doubts himself."

CHAPTER XIX.

AND so it came to pass that Loder was freed from one responsibility to undertake another. From the morning of March 27, when Lakeley had expounded the political programme in the offices of the St. George's Gazette, to the afternoon of April 1 he found himself a central figure in the whirlpool of activity that formed itself in Conservative circles.

With the acumen for which he was noted, Lakeley had touched the keystone of the situation on that morning, and succeeding events, each fraught with its own importance, had established the precision of his forecast.

Minutely watchful of Russia's attitude, Fraide quietly organised his forces and strengthened his position with a statesmanlike grasp of opportunity, and to Loder the attributes displayed by his leader during those trying days formed an endless and absorbing study. Setting the thought of Chilcote aside, ignoring his own position and the risks he daily ran, he had fully yielded to the glamour of the moment and in the first freedom of a loose rein he had given unreservedly all that he possessed of activity, capacity and determination to the cause that had claimed him.

Singularly privileged in a constant personal contact with Fraide, he learned many valuable lessons of tact and organisation in those five vital days during which the tactics of a whole party hung upon one item of news from a country thousands of miles away. For should Russia subdue the insurgent Hazaras and, laden with the honors of the peacemaker, retire across the frontier, then the political arena would remain undisturbed; but should the all important movement predicted by Lakeley become an accepted fact before parliament rose for the Easter recess, then the first blow in the fight that would rage during the succeeding session must inevitably be struck. In the meantime it was Fraide's difficult position to wait and watch and yet preserve his dignity.

It was early in the afternoon of March 29 that Loder, in response to a long standing invitation, lunched quietly with the Fraides. Being delayed by some communications from Wark, he was a few minutes late in keeping his appointment, and on being shown into the drawing room found the little group of three that was to make up the party already assembled—Fraide, Lady Sarah—and Eve. As he entered the room they ceased to speak, and all three turned in his direction.

In the first moment he had a vague impression of responding suitably to Lady Sarah's cordial greeting, but he knew that immediately and unconsciously his eyes turned to Eve, while a quick sense of surprise and satisfaction passed through him at sight of her. For an instant he wondered how she would mark his avoidance of her since their last eventful interview; then instantly he blamed himself for the passing doubt. For, before all things, he knew her to be a woman of the world.

He took Fraide's outstretched hand, and again he looked toward Eve, waiting for her to speak.

She met his glance, but said nothing. Instead of speaking she smiled at him—a smile that was far more reassuring than any words, a smile that in a single second conveyed forgiveness, approbation and a warm, almost tender sense of sympathy and comprehension. The remembrance of that smile stayed with him long after they were seated at table and far into the future the remembrance of the lunch itself, with its pleasant private sense of satisfaction, was destined to return to him in retrospective moments. The delightful atmosphere of the Fraides' home life had always been a wonder and an enigma to him, but on this day he seemed to grasp its meaning by a new light as he watched Eve often under its influence and felt himself drawn imperceptibly from the position of a speculative outsider to that of an intimate. It was a fresh side to the complex, fascinating life of which Fraide was the master spirit.

These reflections had grown agreeably familiar to his mind. The talk, momentarily diverted into social channels, was quietly drifting back to the inevitable question of the "situation" that in private moments was never far from their lips, when the event that was to mark and separate that day from those that had preceded it was unceremoniously thrust upon them.

Without announcement or apology, the door was suddenly flung open and Lakeley entered the room.

His face was brimming with excitement, and his eyes flashed. In the first haste of the entry he failed to see that there were ladies in the room and, crossing instantly to Fraide, laid an open telegram before him. "This is official, sir," he said. Then at last he glanced round the table.

"Lady Sarah!" he exclaimed. "Can you forgive me? But I'd have given a hundred pounds to be the first with this!" He glanced back at Fraide.

Lady Sarah rose and stretched out her hand. "Mr. Lakeley," she said, "I more than understand!" There was a thrill in her warm, cordial voice, and her eyes also turned toward her husband.

Of the whole party Fraide alone was perfectly calm. He sat very still, his small, thin figure erect and dignified, as his eyes scanned the message that meant so much.

Eve, who had sprung from her seat and passed round the table at sound of Lakeley's news, was leaning over his shoulder reading the telegram with him. At the last word she lifted her head, her face flushed with excitement.

"How splendid it must be to be a man!" she exclaimed, and without premeditation her eyes and Loder's met.

In this manner came the news from Persia and with it Loder's definite call. In the momentary stress of action it was impossible that any thought of Chilcote could obtrude itself. Events had followed each other too rapidly, decisive action had been too much thrust upon him, to allow of hesitation, and it was in this spirit, under this vigorous pressure, that he made his attack upon the government on the day that followed Fraide's luncheon party.

That indefinable attentiveness, that alert sensation of impending storm, that is so strong an index of the parliamentary atmosphere was very keen on that memorable 1st of April. It was obvious in the crowded benches on both sides of the house, in the oneness of purpose that insensibly made itself felt through the ranks of the opposition and found definite expression in Fraide's stiff figure and tightly shut lips, in the unmistakable uneasiness that lay upon the ministerial benches.

But notwithstanding these indications of battle the early portion of the proceedings was unmarked by excitement, being tinged with the purposeless lack of vitality that had of late marked all affairs of the Sefborough ministry, and it was not until the adjournment of the house for the Easter recess had at last been moved that the spirit of activity hovering in the air descended and galvanized the assembly into life. It was then, amid a stir of interest, that Loder slowly rose.

Many curious incidents have marked the speechmaking annals of the house of commons, but it is doubtful whether it has ever been the lot of a member to hear his own voice raised for the first time on a subject of vital interest to his party, having been denied all initial assistance of minor questions asked or unimportant amendments made. Of all those gathered together in the great building on that day, only one man appreciated the difficulty of Loder's position, and that man was Loder himself.

He rose slowly and stood silent for a couple of seconds, his body braced, his fingers touching the sheaf of notes that lay in front of him. To the waiting house the silence was effective. It might mean overassurance or it might mean a failure of nerve at a critical moment. Either possibility had a tinge of piquancy. Moved by the same impulse, fifty pairs of eyes turned upon him with new interest, but up in the ladies' gallery Eve clasped her hands in sudden apprehension, and Fraide, sitting stiffly in his seat, turned and shot one swift glance at the man on whom, against prudence and precedent, he had pinned his faith. The glance was swift, but very searching, and with a characteristic movement of his wiry shoulders he resumed his position and his usual grave, attentive attitude. At the same moment Loder lifted his head and began to speak.

Here at the outset his inexperience met him. His voice, pitched too low, only reached those directly near him. It was a moment of great strain. Eve, listening intently, drew a long breath of suspense and let her fingers drop apart. The skeptical, watchful eyes that faced him, line upon line, seemed to flash and brighten with critical interest. Only Fraide made no change of expression. He sat placid, serious, attentive, with the shadow of a smile behind his eyes.

Again Loder paused, but this time the pause was shorter. The ordeal he had dreaded and waited for was passed, and he saw his way clearly. With the old movement of the shoulders he straightened himself and once more began to speak. This time his voice rang quietly true and commanding across the floor of the house.

No first step can be really great. It must of necessity possess more of prophecy than of achievement. Nevertheless it is by the first step that a man marks the value not only of his cause, but of himself. Following broadly on the lines that tradition has laid down for the Conservative orator, Loder disguised rather than displayed the vein of strong, persuasive eloquence that was his natural gift. The occasion that might possibly justify such a display of individuality might lie with the future, but it had no application to the present. For the moment his duty was to voice his party sentiments with as much lucidity, as much logic and as much calm conviction as lay within his capacity.

Standing quietly in Chilcote's place, he was conscious with a deep sense of gravity of the peculiarity of his position, and perhaps it was this unconscious and unstudied seriousness that lent him the tone of weight and judgment so essential to the cause he had in hand. It has always been difficult to arouse the interest of the house on matters of British policy in Persia. Once aroused it may, it is true, reach fever heat with remarkable rapidity, but the introductory stages offer that worst danger to the earnest speaker—the dread of an apathetic audience. But from this consideration Loder, by his sharp consciousness of personal difficulties, was given immunity.

Pitching his voice in that quietly masterful tone that beyond all others compels attention, he took up his subject and dealt with it with dispassionate force. With great skill he touched on the steady southward advance of Russia into Persian territory from the distant days when, by a curious irony of fate, Russian and British enterprise combined to make entry into the country under the sanction of the grand duke of Moscovy to the present hour, when this great power of Russia—long since alienated by interests and desires from her former co-operator—had taken a step which in the eyes of every thinking man must possess a deep significance.

With his usual quiet persistence he pointed out the peculiar position of Meshed in the distant province of Khorassan, its vast distance from the Persian gulf, round which British interests and influence center, and the consequently alarming position of hundreds of traders who, in the security of British sovereignty, are fighting their way upward from India, from Afghanistan, even from England herself.

Following up his point, he dilated on these subjects of the British crown who, cut off from adequate assistance, can only turn in personal or commercial peril to the protective power of the nearest consulate. Then, quietly demanding the attention of his hearers, he marshaled fact after fact to demonstrate the isolation and inadequacy of a consulate so situated; the all but arbitrary power of Russia, who in her new occupation of Meshed had only two considerations to withhold her from open aggression—the knowledge of England as a very considerable, but also a very distant, power; the knowledge of Persia as an imminent, but wholly impotent, factor in the case.

Having stated his opinions, he reverted to the motive of his speech—his desire to put forward a strong protest against the adjournment of the house without an assurance from the government that immediate measures would be taken to safeguard British interests in Meshed and throughout the province of Khorassan.

TUMOR OF YEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winnipeg, Man.—"Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth in the uterus. The doctors said it was a tumor, and could not be removed, as it would cause instant death. They found that other organs were affected and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in. After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 284 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba.

GENERAL ELECTRIC WAS STRONG ONE

Stock Advanced 12 to 5-8 the High Point of the Year

Canadian General Electric blossomed into rather unusual prominence this morning, and the buying advanced the stock to 120 3-8, the high point of the year. The prospective erection of a rival for the Canada Foundry Company on an Ashbridge's Bay site has been without bearish effect so far on General Electric. The stock is scarce here, and what there is of it has probably been bought a good deal higher up, so that it might take a very considerable advance to bring it on the market.

In the afternoon the stock sold up 3 points further, to 123, closing 123 3-4 bid.

POLICE CASES AT HAVELOCK

Havelock, July 22.—On Tuesday, afternoon before Magistrates Joyce and Mathison, Albert Curtis, of Belmont, was tried on two charges, one for assault and one for abusive language, preferred by Robt. Geo. Rutherford, of town. The quarrel occurred at Spencer's mill on the 13th inst., and was said to have been quite strenuous in spots. Curtis was fined $2 and costs or $9.75, for the first charge and the second was dismissed. A local case also came up for adjustment. The principals are east-end residents of town, and the alleged stone-throwing by the youngsters of one of the parties led to the cause of all the publicity. Because his windows were broken by the stones a citizen attempted to remonstrate with the mother of the small boys, and he is said to have met with a warm reception, literally and figuratively. The case was dismissed, each paying their own costs.

DAIRY EDUCATION

Some Valuable Information Furnished at Canadian National Exhibition

The educational features in connection with the Dairy Department of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, promise to be of unusual interest this year, not only to farmers, but to consumers of milk in cities and towns as well. The demonstration work and lectures in the Dairy Amphitheatre will be under the immediate charge of Mr. George A. Putnam, Director of the Dairy Instruction for the Province, and the Dominion department will also furnish a man to give some definite instruction along the cow-testing line.

The proper care and handling of milk will be one of the subjects dealt with, and it will be accompanied by demonstrations of milk testing as well as charts showing the value of Cow-Testing Associations.

Dr. Roberts, of Waukesha, Wis., an expert on diseases of live stock, and especially tuberculosis, will also be engaged for one or more lectures on the latter subject.

THE POWER QUESTION

The directors and managing director of the Central Ontario Power Co., otherwise known as the owners of the Burleigh Falls power met the City Council in committee of the whole last night at the city hall. The question whether Peterborough is to look about for power or not has advanced a stage. It will not be long, probably, before the property-owners will have a chance of saying what they think about it. As for the Review, we believe that the same intelligent and progressive policy which has characterized the town in the past should characterize it in the future, for it is upon a strong, steady, forward-policy that the life of this, as of other municipalities, depends. Speaking broadly, nothing distinctly new was put before the committee last night, but what was said was said by the full representative body of the company's directors, including their counsel, Mr. McLaughlin, K.C., and with what has gone before we now know where the company stands. It remains only to find out where the city stands.

There are those who say that the Burleigh and Buckhorn powers—and these powers ought always to be considered together—are sure to pass through Peterborough, and that we can get whatever we want of it without difficulty, and at a proportionately less expense than more distant communities. But is this true? Is power in private hands as likely, on any supposition, to be as cheap as power in the city's hands—and control? Is the prospect of friction with a company a desirable possibility? The whole power of Toronto cannot compel Mr. Fleming to go round a corner with his street cars, when he does not wish to do so. It is, we conclude, therefore, pre-eminently desirable that we should have our own power, if we are to go into the power business at all.

Experts' reports will show it the properties are what they are represented to be. Our belief is that Peterborough should own all the available water-powers within easy reach. It is the power policy for Peterborough that will make Peterborough. The increase in population will not materially reduce the tax-rate. It never does. It is the municipal ownership of public utilities that does it, as in the never-to-be-forgotten case of Guelph, which just now is crying out for power. It expects to get it, and to pay for it, over $20 per h.p. The price we would be able to deliver it at would be below this, and below anything any other municipality has to offer. Is it not reasonable, therefore, to say that the city should know all about the question as soon as possible, for if it ought to be brought to a head at all there is no excuse for procrastination which has proved before this to be the thief of prospects, as well as of time.

The Review will do what it can from time to time to keep the people abreast of the question, giving both sides of it, but in the meantime we are to be put down as distinctly sympathetic. It looks to be a good thing for Peterborough.

GYPSY TANGLE IN OTTAWA LOOKS TO BE A BAD ONE

Ottawa, July 22.—The differences between the gypsies of Hull and those settled in Ottawa came no nearer solution this morning, in all cases in all cases, in both courts—and there were twenty accused—remands being granted for one day.

At 9 a.m. Recorder A. Desjardins reviewed the ten men and four women who were arrested on Tuesday as vagrants. Mr. Louis Cousineau in their behalf made an application for a remand, as necessary witnesses were in jail in Ottawa. The remand was granted.

Two hours later, in magistrate's court, Mr. Cousineau put forward the same plea in asking for a remand in the case of Eli Stokes, John Stokes, Mrs. Miguel Alexis and Mrs. Eli Stokes, who were variously accused of offences ranging from assault to robbery. Eli Stokes and John Stokes, who are cousins, were arraigned before Magistrate Goyette on a charge of kidnapping the little girl, Katrina Alexis, from the Hull camp. Then the whole four were charged with stealing a gold bracelet, containing three diamonds, a plain gold bracelet, a silver bracelet, two gold rings and a gold chain valued at $150 from the person of Katrina Alexis. Eli Stokes, who was further charged with abusive language to Peter Sterrio in accusing him of stealing $100, and lastly, John Stokes was charged with insulting the wife of Peter Sterrio. To all charges the accused, through their lawyers, Messrs. A. Desjardins and L. A. Leduc, pleaded not guilty. The application of Mr. Cousineau for a remand met with strong opposition from the legal advisers on the other side. They said it was not fair to the accused to leave these charges hanging over their heads, and that they were all prepared to proceed with their defence.

Magistrate Goyette held that there was good ground for the application and granted a remand for one day. The cases will be called at 2 p.m. to-morrow.

ANOTHER ARREST.

Detective Ryan last night Sterio John, a member of the Hull gypsy band, who, it is alleged, was present when Mrs. Stokes was stabbed and her husband robbed of $200 on Monday night last at the Bulgarian camp on the Richmond road. The Stokes people are unable to say whether John took part in the stabbing, but assert that he actually handled the $200. The Mexican gypsy queen was at the police court this morning on behalf of John, but he was remanded without bail until Monday next, when the three other gypsies charged with the same offence will be placed on trial.

The police assert that there is fully $35,000 in gold in possession of the Hull band, while the Bulgarians have, it is said, about $8,000 with them. The search for the alleged stabbers of Mrs. Stokes will be kept up by the police.

MR. A. E. YOUNG TO SPEAK TONIGHT

"Thy Sins be Forgiven Thee" Was Subject of Last Evenings Discourse

"Thy sins be forgiven thee," was the subject of Rev. Mr. Brown's discourse at the evangelistic meeting last night. The speaker clearly explained that Christ had the power and was always ready and willing to forgive sins if we only would do as He wished us to, and his plea to the large number present was that each and everyone would decide to follow the Master.

Mr. G. W. Mulligan, of the Gospel Hall, and Mr. Spratt, of Mark street Methodist church rendered appreciative solos during the service.

To-night the speaker will be Mr. A. E Young, and Mr. W. J. Whelen will be the leader.

Y. M. C. A. WILL HAVE MEETINGS ON SUNDAY

The committee in charge of the evangelistic meetings have given the tent to the Y.M.C.A. for Sunday and the Association will hold two meetings one at four o'clock and the other at seven. There will be special singing and special speakers. The meetings are for men only.

ONTARIO BANK LOT

The plan of the lots to be sold on the ground on Saturday, July 24th, is planned on the Lock street frontage. The plan is about 6 feet square and clearly shows the lots. There is also a big plan in the window of Mr. Might, the land broker. Mr. Might will be in his office at night from 8 to 9 p.m., to meet intending purchasers. The house and barn will be sold at the auction and promptly re-

WATER COMMISSIONERS' VISIT TO CHATHAM AND ST. THOMAS

Interesting Interview With Mr. T. F. Matthews—The Waterworks Systems Employed in the Towns Visited—General and Technical Information of Much Interest and Value.

The Water Commissioners, accompanied by Mr. Henderson, superintendent, and Mr. Armstrong, secretary, visited Chatham and St. Thomas with a view of finding out what they could regarding the system of water filtration in both of those cities.

An interview of interest on the commissioners' visit was given the Review this morning by Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Board.

Chatham was the first point visited. This city has a population of about 11,500. The water-works system was originally put in by a private company, and purchased by the city some years ago. It is operated, and controlled by three commissioners—two of whom are elected by the people, the the Mayor of the city being the third. On arrival we went to the City Hall, which is a splendid building in the centre of the city, and owned jointly by the city and county. The City Clerk, Mr. Merritt, was exceedingly obliging, giving us considerable information, and he went out with us to the Pumping Station. The water supply is obtained from the river—pumped first into the settling basin, 1,900 feet long by about 200 feet wide, and from 15 feet to 18 feet deep. The water in the River is very highly colored, but a large portion of the suspended matter is deposited in this basin. The water is pumped again from the basin through horizontal pressure filters to the city. The filters are round cylinders, similar in appearance to steam boilers, about 9 feet in diameter, and 16 feet long. The water enters in at the top, and is forced through small openings distributed over the bottom into the mains for city use. There is a loss in pressure of from three (3) to eight (8) lbs. per square inch in the operation—depending on the water consumption and the conditions of the filters. The filtering material used here is sea sand brought from Jersey City, the cylinder being two-thirds filled with the sand, then about one foot of coke on the top of it. Alum is used as a coagulant being forced into the water at every stroke of the pumps. This is extracted in the filter. The pumps are operated by steam—the fuel being natural gas at a cost of 10c. per thousand cubic feet. Since the adoption of natural gas, the amount spent for fuel has been reduced 50 per cent. To provide an extra supply in case of fire there is a large stand pipe, and an additional pumping well. Close to the pumping plant is the city street lighting plant. Here they have engines also operated by natural gas with a producer gas plant in case the natural gas supply fails. The city engineer, under the direction of the Water Commissioners, has charge of the Water Works. Chatham excels Peterborough in its municipal building, and the condition of its principal streets. Fourteen miles of these streets are paved — the main streets with vitrified brick, and the residence streets with bitulithic and concrete. Most of the roadways on the residential streets are but 20 or 24 feet wide Where the streets themselves are 100 feet wide. There are very many beautiful residences, but, as the water service, to which is connected a lawn, bath or closet, is supplied through water meter, the lawns are not as green as those in Peterborough. The water rate for houses with these conveniences and connections is 20c. per thousand gallons, less 12 1-2 per cent. for prompt payment.

St. Thomas.—We arrived at St. Thomas on Wednesday evening, and in the morning we were taken charge of by Mr. George K. Crocker, Chairman of the Board of Water Commissioners, Mr. James A. Bell, City Engineer, and Lieut.-Col. McLachlin, Analytical Chemist, and driven out to the Pumping Station about a mile outside of the city. The pumping here is also done by steam—the total capacity of the pumps being nine million gallons for twenty-four hours. The source of supply is Kettle Creek and artesian wells. Just at present they are having some difficulty with their water supply — there being a slight odor connected with it, which is said to be from Algae, a vegetable growth formed where the water from the wells is exposed to the air, or comes in contact with the creek water, so just now the creek water is being used exclusively, being pumped directly through the filters into the city mains. The system of filtration here is the same as at Chatham, but much more expensive, crushed quartz being used as a filtering material. There are two batteries of three filters each, having a total capacity of three million gallons of filtered water per day. The plant here is kept in perfect order, and reflects great credit on the city engineer and those in charge. The fuel used is hard and soft coal screenings. We were particularly interested in the laboratory of Lt.-Col. McLachlin at the city buildings. He has a complete outfit for testing water, Milk, etc., and during 1908 he made one hundred and two (102) bacterial examinations of the city water, and, although considerable creek water is used, the colon bacillus was absent in every test made of the filtered water. The testing apparatus was provided by the Water Commissioners, and Lieut.-Col. McLachlin is paid a small sum per week to keep up the tests. He also does very considerable microscopical work for the doctors of the city. St. Thomas is decidedly a railroad city. The population is 14,500. It is the headquarters in Canada for the N. Y. C. lines (M.C.R.) and six other railways pass through it. The main business street is very wide, and paved with brick for about one and a half miles. Many other streets are also paved. The city building is very fine indeed. The city offices are located in the same building, the council chamber being so large that it is now being used to hold church services while a Methodist church is being rebuilt. It seats about 400, besides the council. The city engineer, Mr. James A. Bell, has charge, under the commissioners, of the water works, in addition to his other numerous duties, and he appears to be extremely capable. We are indebted to the three gentlemen named above for very courteous treatment, and much valuable information.

On the whole I am pleased that we took even this hurried trip, but whether the system as used in these places is just what is required for Peterborough the commissioners are not now prepared to say. We hope to make an examination of the newly installed ozonization plant in Lindsay, and also to go into the matter of slow sand filtration, but the commissioners are unanimous in the idea that after the present work is completed of building the new dam and increasing the pumping supply, the matter of efficient and proper filtration must be taken up.

MR. McILROY WILL SING; INTERESTING PROGRAMME

Mr. W. McIlroy, baritone soloist, who is always very cordially received by Peterborough audiences, will sing "Love's Old Sweet Song" at the concert of the 57th band at Victoria Park this evening. The appearance of the popular vocalist on the programme should be the means of drawing an exceptionally large crowd.

The programme is—
March—The Moose.
Overture—Zampa.
Soldiers' Chorus—Faust.
Vocal Solo—Love's Old, Sweet Song W. McIlroy.
Double Number—Sweet and Low, and Whistler and His Dog.
Euphonium Solo—Variations on American airs—Bandsman Cronk.
Medley—Remick's Hits, No. 3.
Mazurka—Boulognaise.
March—El Capitan.

TWO TEAMS WILL GET JARRED TO-MORROW; WHICH ONES?

It would not be advisable for any fan affected with heart trouble to take in the City League games to-morrow on the Oval, as they are sure to be the most exciting yet played in the league. The Strathconas, the now celebrated aggregation of blow-ups, under the leadership of Messrs Shaw and Metherel, will tackle the West Ends for the third time this season. Each team has won from the other, and as to-morrow's game will be the rubber, both will do their best to win. The Straths will have the same nine which put the T.A.S. away last Saturday, and if all reports are true, the West Enders, under their new management, will be stronger than in any previous game. The Strathconas will, as usual, have their aerial wings with them, and should they get too much of a lead, will pull off some first-class aviation stunts under the direction of Manager Metherel, who will direct operations from the bench.

It will require fans with good, strong nerves to remain and watch the progress of the second game between the Park St. team and the T.A.S. The latter nine will be weakened considerably by the absence of several star players, but nevertheless are confident that they can put the lid on the Baptists. Should the abstainers lose, both teams will be tied for first place, and the Southenders are going up to the Oval with the intention of tieing the league, and then win out and capture the championship.

The spectators will be doing a favor to the teams by keeping a good distance away from the lines, which will give the infielders a chance to capture high fouls and keep the games fast and scrappy throughout.

LINES ON SPORT

It is reported that Cobalt will challenge for the Stanley Cup this coming season, and as the natives up there have shown that they can produce the coin, a strong team could be secured.

---

Cartnell, who has made such a great showing in England, will return to his home in the States and will run at the Seattle, Wash., Exposition.

---

Aurelio Herrera, the Mexican, is to return to the ring. September 17th he will meet Chick Hilson in California. Herrera possessed a wicked punch and at one time was looked upon as a lightweight championship possibility, but was not over careful of himself. It will be interesting to note how his long absence from the ring will affect his fighting ability.

---

The applause does not always come for the feature play of the day. Battles in baseball are not lost and won mostly by plays of which the audience knows little or nothing.

---

Cobb will always be regarded as one of the brainiest players who ever wore shoe leather. Tyrus is regarded as the best base runner that ever touched a sack, and he can field an outfield position the way few other men ever did.

---

Shortstop Foster, of Jersey City has made more runs than any other player in the league. This includes Kid Mabling, of Toronto.

---

Christy Mathewson is thirty-three years of age, and has been with the New York club for eleven seasons.

---

Bruce Ridpath, a former Lakefield boy, but lately of Toronto and Cobalt, where he has won fame as a puck chaser, has opened a sporting goods store on Yonge street, Toronto.

---

Dr. Adkins, the Oriole twirler, was recently presented with a son, making three in all. The telegram which notified him, read "The bases are full."

---

Hans Homer and Svanberg will meet in a race in Toronto a week from to-morrow.

---

Only one game was played in the Eastern League yesterday. Montreal defeated Newark in ten innings, 1—0.

---

Jack Johnson has the idea he can run, and accordingly has expressed his intention of running Tommy Longboat for five miles.

---

Stirling baseball club would like to arrange a game with one of the local teams and have written to the secretary of the T.A.S. Club, asking him to let the fact be known. They will not offer any guarantee, but will give the visiting team fifty per cent of the gross receipts. Any club wishing to accept the offer can make arrangements with Mr. Fred Clarke, Stirling, Ont.

T. A. S. TO PLAY IN HASTINGS

Will Play a Picked Team of That Village Next Wednesday

The T.A.S.A.C. senior league baseball nine will go to Hastings on Wednesday with the C.M.B.A. Excursion and play a picked team from the city league of that burg. The abstainers will take down their strongest team and although Hastings boasts of having an aggregation of star performers, who have done creditable work this season, the local boys should give a good account of themselves.

BOWMANVILLE TO PLAY LOCALS

Big Excursion to the City on August 2nd—Visitors Will Bring Strong Team

An excursion from Bowmanville and other points along the line, will come to this city on Monday, August 2nd, and the baseball team of Bowmanville will accompany the excursionists to play a game with a nine picked from the local City League at Riverside Park. This will no doubt be cheerful news for the fans who witnessed the Barrie-Peterborough game, and who have been hoping that another such game would be secured. The visitors will bring a fast team, and a lively contest should result.

CRICKET

London, Eng., July 22.—The English eleven to meet Australia will be selected from MacLaren, Spooner, Warner, Hutchings, Carr, Tyldesley, Lilley, Sharp, Thompson, Rhodes, Hirst, Barnes and Blythe.

TURF

In the entries of the 2.18 class at the races at Delorimer Park to-day are Patterson, Jones and Storey and Peterborough, and Holland Boy, W. J. Cox, Peterborough.

NOTES OF THE DAY

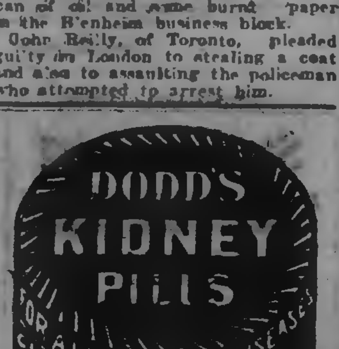
Alfred Hall, restaurant keeper, Port Stanley, was charged with selling liquor on Sunday. This is the first case resulting from the charges made by the Rev. George Gilmour, of Fingal.

An investigation is on foot in Chatham as the result of finding a can of oil and some burnt paper in the Blenheim business block.

John Reilly, of Toronto, pleaded guilty in London to stealing a coat and also to assaulting the policeman who attempted to arrest him.



DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

HOW UNASSISTED TRIPLE PLAY WAS PULLED OFF

The unassisted triple play made by Neal Ball, of Cleveland, during the game with Boston on Monday is the first pulled off in the major leagues and the seventh in the history of baseball.

It was in the first game of a double-header that he made the record. The stage was set for his play. Wagner was on second base, Stahl on first and McConnell at bat. Two strikes and three balls had been called on McConnell. The runners started as "Cy" Young pitched the next ball, which must either be a ball or a strike.

McConnell met the ball fairly and drove it on a line toward centre. Ball ran over toward second and got the ball by a flying leap. He took two steps forward and touched second, forcing Wagner, who was on his way to third. Then Ball looked up to see "Jake" Stahl charging toward him. Neal ran up the line and tagged "Jake" and his triple play was unassisted.

Ball also got a home run and a two-base hit in this game. He ended his work by a successful attempt to steal home.

WILL JEFFRIES AND JOHNSON EVER COME TOGETHER? DOESN'T LOOK LIKE IT

The chief question in sporting circles at the present time is will Jeffries ever meet Johnson. The opinion of the majority of the close followers is that the match will never take place.

Jeff, they claim, never wanted to meet the black champion. Not that he fears him, but because it will mean too much work to get fine enough for the encounter, and it is the general opinion anyway that the boilermaker has had enough of the ring business to do him for the rest of his life. As to the possibility of the former champion being able to get fit, there is a very wide diversion of opinion.

Anyway, one thing is certain, and that is that the general clamor for Jeff to come back and reclaim the honors for the white race has proved an exceptionally good opening for the big fellow to clean up a lot of money by his sparring exhibitions with Sam Berger, his partner at arms. By the time the tour is over he will have accumulated a small gold mine.

In the meantime Stanley Ketchel is working hard in preparation for his fight with Johnson in October, and it is the popular impression that Jeff expects the Michigan Assassin to dispose of the colored man, and in case he does the white race will be saved the trouble of strenuous training for a championship fight.

When the fight between Ketchel and Johnson was first mentioned the cowpuncher pugilist was looked upon as a nimpossibility, but his recent bouts notably his match with Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, in which he knocked out the clever Quaker in such quick order, has won him the respect and admiration of the ring devotees.

When the pair enters the ring Ketchel will likely be at even odds in the betting, although there is small likelihood of him being the favorite over the champion. A victory for the white man would be one of the most popular wins in the history of the game, for Johnson is the most unpopular man who ever held the title, not on account of the fact that he is black, for many colored fighters have been popular ideals, notably Joe Gans, George Dixon and Joe Walcot; but chiefly because he shows the qualities of an ordinary tough, and is big headed, inconsiderate and domineering.

FRED SIMPSON BLACKLISTS THE MARATHON GRINDS

"No more Marathon races for me," said Fred Simpson to the Review to-day when a reporter saw him at the Crystal this afternoon.

The Red Thunderbolt thinks that a 15 mile jaunt involves enough exertion and provides keener sport for the spectators than the arduous travelling over the 26 mile course. Fred is of the opinion that the running game will be good this fall and winter and thinks that the runners will fall into line for the middle distances rather than the long grinds.

"My next race," he said, "will probably be with Hans Holmer about Aug 15th. The distance suggested is fifteen miles. After that I expect to meet Abbie Wood in a race of the same length in Montreal.

The Indian's future plans further than that have not been definitely formed, but he is looking forward to a big season.

BLACKLISTERS, ROWDIES AND DOG TRADERS IN COURT

And Contributed $26.80 into the City Treasury This Morning—The Way of the Transgressor is Hard Indeed.

Roland Carton, who hails from Lakefield, was fined $2.00 for being found under the influence of liquor yesterday.

It turned out that the defendant is a blacklister, but as Lakefield is in East Peterborough, and License Inspector Williams, of Havelock, served the notices, nothing more was done in regard to the case.

THE BEST LAID PLANS, etc.

The question of ownership in regard to a tag was settled this morning, and Roland Butcher was fined $2.00, with costs, amounting in all to $4.00. Butcher stated he purchased the dog from Harry Brault, and when he received the animal it had a tag and collar.

Brault, on the other hand, said the tag belonged to his own canine, and he had the receipt for it.

The Magistrate was of the opinion that it was a put up job to cheat the city, and decided that, as Butcher had the dog and Brault had secured the tag in the first place he would put the fine on Butcher. As a parting shot at Butcher as he left the court, the Chief remarked, "Be sure your sins will find you out."

A NEW ONE.

A blacklister had a novel story to tell when asked where he secured his liquor, but was relieved of $14.45 just the same.

He was intoxicated on July 17th after being blacklisted in May, but stated this morning, but stated this morning that the liquor was the last of a supply that he had laid in before being served with the notice.

MUST BEHAVE IN PARKS.

Two young lads who got the idea that the Oval was being taken care of for their special benefit, and that they could do as they pleased with the benches placed here, were convinced by the Magistrate that such was not the case, and now rowdyism will be permitted. The chief offender was compelled to go down in his pocket for $5.75, while his pal was discharged.

According to the evidence of Mr Walter Kitney, park constable, the defendants were members of a gang who had caused his trouble all summer by their unruly actions. Last Monday night his attention was drawn to the performances of the two defendants, who were endeavoring to get a fall on one of the benches by standing it on its end. He put them out of the grounds and when reinforced by several other companions, they began to hurl epithets at him of an uncomplimentary nature.

Both boys went into the box and endeavored to place the blame on several others. They were partly successful, but were unfortunate enough to state that they themselves had a hand in the standing of the seat on its end.

The Magistrate did not spare either of the defendants in his denunciation against the practice of disbehavior in the city parks. "I will make an example of every offender who comes before me, as these place must be protected, remarked His Worship.

GOOD PROGRESS ON WORK ON THE NEW CLUB PREMISES

The work of transforming the old Bank of Montreal building into premises for the Peterborough Club is progressing splendidly, and the work on the contract of Ald. Johnston has been completed, but he has his men employed now laying hardwood floors and performing some other operations.

Mr. R. Carton has some paintings at work, and the interior of the building will be attractive and finished in good taste.

It is expected that the new club building will be occupied by September first.

JUVENILE LODGE WAS ENTERTAINED

Juvenile Lodge, No. 321, L. O. L., Downer's Corners, were entertained to a supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dowley, Downer's Corners, last night. About twenty were in attendance and an enjoyable time was spent. Selections by the piccolo band were a feature of the evening.

At the conclusion a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. [illegible] Dowler. It was moved by Norman Law[illegible] Tom Doughty.

Earl Grey, the Governor-General, who is now in England, has been telling the British press of the importance of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and The Daily Mail and other leading English journals are urging British tradesmen to take advantage of the Exhibition as a means of showing their wares to the Canadian public.

"Make it a Million" is the motto of the Canadian National Fair, Toronto, this year, and they are raking the world for exhibits and attractions that will make a million people pass between the turnstiles between Aug[illegible] 13th.

BOSWELL'S ANECDOTES OF SHADY CHARACTERS

Contributed to the Stygian Gazette by James Boswell and Culled Therefrom by John Kendrick Bangs.

PART III.

CAESAR'S SARCASM.

"I BELIEVE you two old Romans have met before," said Mme. Recamier, as Julius Caesar and Cassius encountered each other at one of her five o'clock teas.

"No, Madame," said Caesar, fixing a cold and steely glance on Cassius. "The last time we met we met behind. If he had had the nerve to come around in front it would have been what Rudyard Kipling calls 'another story.'"

Cassius slunk miserably away, and when last seen was trying to reduce his leanness over the chicken salad end of the supper table.

Guinevere's Defense.

"PERSONALLY, my dear Guinevere," said Queen Elizabeth to that unfortunate lady, "I like you very much, but officially I cannot afford to propose you for membership in our Woman's Club, as you have asked me to do, because of your unhappy matrimonial record. We are all judged by the company we keep, and you will readily understand how it would affect my position here if I were to identify myself with a movement for your social rehabilitation without showing some justification for your behavior."

"There was plenty of justification," sobbed Guinevere.

"Did King Arthur treat you badly?" asked Elizabeth.

"In most things, no," replied Guinevere. "But when he asked me to mend the holes in his armor I had to draw the line. I was a first class embroiderer, but no blacksmith."

Taking a Rest.

"HAS Johnson said anything bright lately?" asked Shakespeare of Artemus Ward as they sat in the club corridor.

"No," said Ward. "Boswell sprained his wrist the other day, and it hasn't been worth while."

Napoleon's Reason.

BONAPARTE and Caesar were discussing their respective campaigns, when Caesar observed:—

"In studying your mistakes, my dear Bonaparte, it has always seemed to me that you failed to take one trick by not capturing Louis the Eighteenth and cutting his head off."

"That was impossible, as you will see if you will study Louis," returned the great Corsican.

"Why so?" asked Caesar.

"He never had any head to furnish me with the raw material," said Bonaparte.

The True Version.

ALL of a sudden the handwriting appeared on the wall. Belshazzar blinked stupidly at it.

"What does it say?" he asked, hoarsely. "This light hurts my eyes, and I can't make it out."

"It reads, 'Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin,'" said the attendant.

"Eenty-meenty what?" cried Belshazzar.

The phrase was repeated.

"What does that mean?" quavered the Monarch.

"It is volapuk for 'Look out for the locomotive,'" replied the Court Interpreter.

"Who in thunder wrote it there?" demanded Belshazzar.

"That I cannot say, Sire," returned the Grand Chamberlain, nervously.

"Then call in the handwriting experts and find out!" roared the now thoroughly aroused Potentate. "And when you've got the malefactor located put him in jail on grass and cod liver oil for six months. No man shall scribble up the walls of my palace and go unpunished."

Homer's Mistake.

"WHERE'S old Pop Homer?" asked Byron, as he glanced around the Poets' Corner and observed that the good gray poet was missing. I haven't seen him for several weeks."

"He's in jail," said Bobbie Burns. "Judge Blackstone sent him up for thirty days for assaulting Ananias."

"Ananias?" ejaculated Byron. "What on earth ever induced him to assault Ananias?"

"Oh, somebody told him Ananias was a blooming lyre and he smote him.

"Force of habit, I guess," said Byron.

Noah's Joke.

"I SHOULD very much like to know, my dear Noah," said Dr. Johnson at the meeting of the Nature Fakirs' Association, "why when you went off on that zoological cruise, of which my friend Moses has written so attractively, you did not take a pterodactyl or two along. Were they too mischievous?"

"Not at all," returned Noah. "But what with the hens in the hatchway, the steers in the steerage and the elephants' trunks in the hold we hadn't room for creatures of their tonnage on board."

Here the Patriarch winked at his son Ham, who giggled so loud and continuously that Dr. Johnson threatened to have him made into a sandwich if he didn't shut up.

Goliath's Extraordinary Request.

THE great giant was observed entering the palatial residence of Colonel Midas, on the corner of Bond street and Easy avenue, and great curiosity was shown to know what could be his mission. Later the full particulars came out.

"Colonel Midas," said Goliath, "is it true that everything you touch turns to gold immediately?"

"Yes, confound it! That's the reason I never shake hands with anybody," returned Midas.

"Well, sir, if that is the case, I will agree to larrup anybody in all Cimmeria that you don't like if you will do me a favor," said the giant.

"Name it," returned Midas.

"I want you to touch Napoleon Bonaparte and turn him into gold," said Goliath, eagerly.

"Napoleon Bonaparte turned to gold! What on earth for?" cried Midas.

"I have always felt that he would make a dandy little watch charm," explained Goliath, "and I'm the man with the right kind of a vest to show it off well."

As to Methuselah.

METHUSELAH was sauntering gayly up Main street, in the city of Cimmeria, when he was joined by Diogenes and Aaron Burr.

"Howdy, Grandpa!" said Diogenes. "How do you find yourself this morning?"

"Hadn't lost myself this morning, consequently Q. E. D.," laughed the old gentleman.

"You are a precocious old boy for your age," observed Burr. "Don't you ever feel old?"

"Never," returned Methuselah. "Why should I with the recurring periods of childhood which are the inevitable attributes of age?"

"Ah," said Diogenes, "then you admit that you are in your second childhood, do you?"

"Second childhood!" retorted Methuselah scornfully. "Why, my dear fellow, I'm in my ninety-second childhood!"

THE WAY AROUND.

"DEAREST, why don't you smoke one of those cigars that mother gave you for Christmas? Here it is after New Year's now, and you haven't opened the box!"

"Martha, dear, you know I have sworn off, and besides I have been eating so many things with Toodlums here that I"——

"I know; but always before, you—you have begun again."

"Why, Martha, how dare you! You must know that I am very strict about such things."

"But mother will be asking how you liked her little gift."

"Oh, you can tell her that I liked it"——

"But I shan't—it would be dreadful to tell such a thing. I believe, Alfred, that you are purposely slighting mother's present. Three years ago you would not have done this. Oh, there's the bell—and I know it's mother. Now, will you, or will you not smoke one of her cigars?"

"Oh, then, bring me the box, and meet your mother, and when you two come in I will be puffing away like a hoisting engine. Thank you. Now run to the door. Come here, Toodlums; bounce right up. O, Toodlums, it's the nicest thing in the world to swear off and then be able to begin again with a clear conscience! Bouncy, bouncy boy!"

WHY THE BED CREAKED.

"MARIA'R," said Mr. Jenkins, as he pushed the bed against the wall, "Maria'r, didn't I tell you a week ago to oil those castors? They creak something awful."

"I know you did, James. But there isn't a drop of castor oil in the house."

DIDN'T MEET THE FEUDS.

"DID you run up against any of the feuds of Tennessee while you were in the South?"

"The Feuds? Let's see! Don't think I met any of them, and I mingled in some of the best families, too."

I WISH THAT—

CALLERS who "just drop in to say 'how-de-do'" wouldn't keep on saying it till half-past eleven at night.

Somebody would invent noiseless rollers for ash cans so that seven o'clock in the morning wouldn't sound like a brass foundry in full blast. Why can't the cans be rolled out the area the night before, anyway?"

The janitor wouldn't sit on the front stoop in his shirt sleeves in summer and disappear altogether in winter.

The people next door would buy some new phonograph records.

The radiator would be a regulator, so that the tuning board of the piano wouldn't be cracked by the heat and the other side of the room as cold as charity.

The cultivation of toothless dogs would become fashionable or else my friends would leave their pets at home when they call. My lace curtains and pillow cushions are sights.

Outsiders would appreciate that even those who live in flat houses like sometimes to sit down to a meal by themselves.

The iceman wouldn't send up his hat on the dumbwaiter. Of course, I recognize the delicacy of the hint for a tip, but I also remember the many five cent pieces of ice I've been paying ten cents for all year.

My husband wouldn't insist on my serving lobster a la Newburg to our card party friends when all they give us when we play at their houses is frankfurters.

Mrs. FLATDWELLER.

GETTING TO THE POINT.

PARKE—I want to get hold of that architect of yours. Where can I find him?

Lane—How do I know? My house isn't finished yet.

REPLENISHING THE LARDER.

"WHICH do you prefer, musical comedy or tragedy?"

"What's the difference?"

THE BRIDE.

By Ellis O. Jones.

Mother dear, come mend me where
Dame Nature's wont to fail.
I need thy human fingers deft
To stop mere man's assail.

The wedding brougham awaits outside,
The hour waxes late,
And here I am too short and fat;
We must these faults abate.

My heels are far too near the ground,
My head too far from sky.
Oh, how could Mother Nature view
With such imperfect eye?

My hips are sadly out of tune
With all the rest: my waist
Is high and big and short; my bust,
Too low, must be incased.

My hair is dark—it should be light;
My cheeks, now wan and pale,
Should be a creamy pink; my nose
Shines like a sunlit sail.

My arms are much too thin; my hands
Are much too long and thick;
Likewise my feet. The wedding guests
Assemble; please be quick.

Fly to the harness chest and bring
My switch, coiffure and rat;
Peroxide bring and curling rod;
Aigrette—I'll wear no hat.

Bring corset, pads and cotton bat,
Powder, pencil, paint,
Lotion and puff; we must remove
All trace of nature's taint.

My leathern stilts, with pointed toes,
Are in the shoe bag, dear;
My long armed gloves, with fingers short,
Are in the chiffonier.

Bring laces, ribbons, hooks and eyes,
Fasteners, clasps and pins.
Hark! the organ's peal, the cer-
Emony soon begins.

Come, mother dear, be quick; 'tis time.
Tho' we have done our best
We've not hid every blemish, but
The veil will do the rest.

* * * * *

So when God fails mere man performs
And remedies the blunder.
And, therefore, whate'er man has joined
Let no god put asunder.

GETTING TO THE POINT.

"NOW, sir," began the prosecutor, as he proceeded to badger the unfortunate witness, "I trust I shall have no difficulty in inducing you to speak up."

"I hope not, sir," shouted the witness at the top of his voice.

"How dare you address me in that way?" demanded the lawyer.

"Because I can't speak any louder, sir!"

"Have you been drinking?"

"Yes, sir."

"I should infer so from your conduct. What have you been drinking?"

"Coffee, sir," hoarsely vociferated the witness.

"Something stronger than coffee. Don't look at me like that; look at the jury. Did you have something in your coffee?"

"Yes, sir."

"Ah! Now we are coming to the truth. What was it?"

"Milk!" howled the witness.

"Now, sir," he continued, turning again to the witness, "look at me! What besides milk did you take in your coffee this morning?"

The witness collected his forces, drew a deep breath and bellowed:—

"Sugar! An' nuthin' else!"

THE AUTUMN DANCE.

By Horace Dodd Gastit.

They said it was an Autumn Dance—
I do not know, perhaps, perchance.

I know I went clad in my best—
My evening clothes fresh from the chest,

Where all the summertime they lay
From hungry moths tucked safe away.

'Twas then I heard a maiden tall
Inquire, "Is this a Camphor Ball?"

"BOBBIE, do you mean to say that you played truant from school to-day? And this, of all days, is the one in which you have your nature class."

"Yes'm."

"What did you do it for?"

"I wanted to go out into the woods."

THE JOYS OF SWEARING OFF.

The Idiot Discourses on the Great New Year's Habit Dear to Americans.

"HAPPY New Year, gentlemen," said the Idiot, as he glanced over the breakfast table on New Year's morning and promptly secured a first lien on two hot muffins and a platterful of steaming buckwheat cakes and a quarter interest in the visible supply of butter. "I hope you have all given due thought to the matter of your reforms, the season for which has arrived."

"Nothing doing here," replied the Lawyer, who sat between the Poet and the Bibliomaniac, on the other side of the table. "I have made it a practice for years to lead such a life that I have nothing to reform."

"So?" said the Idiot. "Well, I'd keep mum about it if I were you. It's the fellow who realizes his own moral perfection that we have to look out for these days. If you really have nothing to swear off this bright morning, my advice to you is to hustle around and try to beg, borrow or steal some amiable weakness."

"Oh, I don't feel the necessity," said the Lawyer, dryly. "All I really need to hustle for in this world seems to be my share of the buckwheat cakes."

"You'll find out some time," said the Idiot. "The man who corners the virtue market, Mr. Brief, has a hard row to hoe. I'm really sorry for you, old man. By this intemperate cultivation of the habit of extreme piety you lose one of the greatest joys of this delightful festival."

"Which is what?" queried Mr. Brief.

"Swearing off," replied the Idiot. "You lose that genial glow that immediately follows the resolve to be a better man. "Why do I smoke cigarettes? Why do I"——

"I never knew why anybody smoked cigarettes," put in the Bibliomaniac, beating the Idiot to the last fishball.

"I do it," said the Idiot, amiably, "for the mere pleasure of resolving on New Year's morn to do without them forevermore. To tell the truth, I hate 'em, but there is an undeniable thrill of satisfaction that comes into my spirit on the first of each succeeding January, when as I dress in the morning I say to myself, 'Never again, my boy! No more coffin nails for you, little bright eyes! Henceforth you and the Persian Deity meet as strangers."

"Seems to me I have heard those words before," laughed the Doctor. "Didn't you swear off cigarettes last New Year's?"

"You bet I did," returned the Idiot. "Your memory has not played you false, O Aesculapius. Right here in this very presence on the first day of January did I forever eschew the weed."

"You're a consistent little Idiot, are you not?" said the Bibliomaniac.

"Yes, I am not," replied the Idiot. "Consistency is the one unpawnable jewel in the crown of my Idiocy."

"Well, I don't see it," said the Lawyer. "Here you are smoking cigarettes up to last night, although you tell us you swore them off a year ago. Where's the consistency in that?"

"Don't see how I could be any more consistent than I am shown on the testimony to be," retorted the Idiot. "What do you mean by consistency, sir?"

"Consistency," began the Lawyer, "consists in a state of permanence, a state of compatibility and harmony. A consistent man is he who—ah—who—ah"——

"You mean who is, not who are, I presume?" interpolated the Idiot.

"Yes, sir; that's what I do mean," retored the Lawyer, warmly. "You will please not interrupt. As I was saying, the consistent man is he who—ah—is—ah"——

"What are you trying to do, conjugate a verb?" demanded the Idiot. "If you are, you've left out 'am.'"

"Of course," said the Lawyer, with extreme dignity, "if you are unwilling to behave like a gentleman and let me finish what I was saying there is no more to be said."

"I apologize," said the Idiot, meekly. "I only wanted to find out what language you proposed to use in explaining your definition of the word 'consistency.' Certaintly such an expression as 'a man who are' is not English—at least, not consistently good English. I don't believe that even in Esperanto a singular gentleman would be allowed to consort with a plural verb, thereby committing syntactical bigamy, if I may so express it; but now that I am getting on to your style I think I can understand."

"The consistent man," resumed the Lawyer, "is he who lays down a course of action and pursues it relentlessly to the end. Consistency involves persistency—see?"

"Now you are shouting!" cried the Idiot, gleefully. "It is the very persistency of my cigarette resolve that clears me of your charge of inconsistency. In 1903 I first swore off cigarettes. In 1904 I did it again. In 1905 I admit a lapse from the integrity of my course, for in that year I swore off smoking a clay pipe at five o'clock teas, but in 1906, like the prodigal son, I came galloping back to the fold and resumed my habit of giving up cigarettes, and every New Year's since it has been the same. And every year from now on I propose to do the same, and yet you say I am not consistent. If swearing off cigarettes for four or five years' running isn't consistent, I don't know what is."

"Oh well," said Mr. Brief, impatiently, "if you are going to keep a pet vice just as you would a horse to ride on special occasions I have nothing more to say."

"That's the idea," said the Idiot. "I don't know of any better use for vices, do you? There are people in this world who keep their vices for immoral purposes, but my plan is far and away the better one. A vice with a purpose, say I. The chaps who take their vices and ride them to death become hopeless in time. But this patent scheme of mine to regard them merely as instruments of periodic uplift ends only in good. I regard cigarettes as the greatest moral agents in my life. I smoke them merely to give them up. If, like you, I had no vices at all I should miss entirely one of the chief uses of this annual recurrence of the swearing off period. It is a tonic to the soul, sir."

"I don't miss the tonic," grinned the Lawyer.

"Neither does the bank burglar who never tasted the joys of reform," persisted the Idiot.

"Well, I'm sorry, Mr. Idiot," said the Lawyer, sadly, "but I don't see what I can do. Having no bad habits how can I reform, unless you can lend me a vice or two that you don't need to tide me over until I can go outside and acquire a few of my own?"

"That's a good suggestion," said the Idiot. "I am always willing to help a fellow being in distress out of my surplus store of things. I have a fine line of goods to place at your disposal, sir, and you can take your choice. How about cocktails before breakfast?"

"That wouldn't be any sacrifice for me," said the Lawyer. "I don't like them even after breakfast."

"How would you like to give up bullying the office boy? That's one of the meanest I've got in stock," resumed the Idiot.

"I want one that will last a week," replied Mr. Brief. "If I don't bully my office boy he won't earn his salary, and if he doesn't earn his salary I'll have to bounce him."

"I see," said the Idiot. "How would you like to borrow my habit of using strong language to express my opinion of the general inefficiency of street railway management in this country?"

"That isn't a vice; it is a safety valve," said the Lawyer. "If we didn't do that we'd explode, and think how unpleasant it would make travelling on the street cars with people exploding on all sides of us! Haven't you got something that would be suitable for a man in my profession?"

"Well, there's lying," said the Idiot. "If you would promise to swear it off right away I might lend you that."

"Done!" said Mr. Brief. "For the ensuing twelve months I shall adhere strictly to the straight and narrow path of veracity."

"Good!" said the Idiot, rising. "I am glad that instead of being a hopeless paragon you are in a fair way to become a promising sinner."

"All the same, brother," said the Lawyer, "how comes it that with all these other vices on hand you content yourself with swearing off anything so venial as cigarette smoking?"

"It is simplicity itself, my dear sir," returned the Idiot. "I am not addicted to these other ones, but merely keep them in stock for use in emergency cases like the present. There is never any telling when you may be called on to render first aid to the perfect, and it behooves us always to be ready."

"And you are quite sure that you will not need it," insisted Mr. Brief.

"Not as much as you will in your business," said the Idiot, with a gracious smile, as he went out.

GYPSY BANDS FLAUNT WEALTH AT THE CAPITAL

Ottawa, July 22.—Gypsies still continue under the limelight in Hull. The two bands only appear upon the streets in carriages or automobiles, and thus evade any possible warrant for their arrest upon the charge of "loitering." About twenty of them are now in custody.

The wildest rumours are afloat as to the amount of money in possession of the gypsies, but the Hull police claim that it will aggregate at least $40,000. How they got it, or why they are spending it so freely in order to stay in the locality, is inexplicable, but there is no question but that the gypsies are staying in Hull at an expense, including legal fees, of not less than $500 per day. It is understood that the numerous vehicles in which they drive about the city are costing the gypsies $10 per hour.

MAY USE ROADBED OF OLD COBOURG-PETERBORO' LINE

The following is from the Railway and Marine World;—A. E. Going has been making a survey of the company's lines between Midland and Cobourg, Ont., with a view of securing a route which will avoid the present heavy grades. The route between Midland and Millbrook has been laid out, and Mr. Going is preparing for completing the work. One route proposed between Millbrook and Cobourg is to run over the old Harwood and Rice Lake route which the G.T.R. owns, but which is not in use for about four miles north of Cobourg, then proceed across country, touching Plainville and on to Millbrook.

CITY TO SECURE A REPORT ON BURLEIGH FALLS POWER

Council Decides to Have Report From Mr. R. B. Rogers—Central Ontario Power Company Reduce Their Offer From $125,000 to $120,000, to be Paid in Four Per Cent. Bonds in Two Payments—Lively Meeting of Council.

The Central Ontario Power Company have made their final offer to the city regarding Burleigh Falls power. They have reduced the figure $5,000 from that first made, and have given a definite statement of the plan for payment by the city.

To put it in a nutshell, their offer is as follows: The price is $120,000, to be paid in bonds of the city of Peterborough, bearing interest at four per cent., the payment to be made in two instalments of $60,000 each, the first on October 1st next, and the second at the end of three years. The bonds for the first instalment will commence to bear interest on October 1st, but no interest will have to be paid on the second instalment till the end of the three years.

The above was the proposition that the company made to the City Council in committee of the whole last night, and their Mr. R. J. McLaughlin said it was final.

The council passed a resolution authorizing the Power Committee to secure a report on Burleigh Falls power from R. B. Rogers, C.E., Mr. Rogers to be paid $600 for same.

The company have given the city a further option of one month, and Mr. McLaughlin stated that it would be extended if the city meant business and wished to submit the matter to the ratepayers.

For two and a half hours last night the aldermen wrestled with the power question and the decision arrived at was reached after a long discussion in which the proposition was looked at in its many phases. Ald. Buller came out plainly against the proposition, until the company reduced their price to what he calls a reasonable figure.

He was opposed to spending a cent for an engineer's report until the price was reduced.

Ald. Morgan told Ald. Buller that he (Ald. Buller) had no idea what Burleigh Falls power was worth and that the aldermen could not act intelligently until they had a report from a competent engineer.

There was some talk of sending the proposition back to the Power Committee but it did not result in anything.

Mayor Rush was in the chair and all the aldermen were present except Ald. Hicks. The Central Ontario Power Co. were represented by Mr. J. A. Culverwell, managing director; Dr. Adams, vice-president; Mr. R. S. Hudson, general manager Canadian Permanent Mortgage Co., Col. Harry Ward, ex-M.P., and Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, the solicitor of the company.

After Mayor Rush had explained why the meeting was called, Mr. Culverwell addressed the Council. He said that the directors of the Central Ontario Power Company had met in Toronto on Wednesday night and had decided to make a new proposition to Peterborough. He referred to the interest he had taken in the development of Peterborough and alluded to the growth of the city during the past few years. Of late, however, not so much was being heard about Peterborough and new industries were not numerous. The reason was that there was a shortage of electric power. There was no reason why the rapid growth should not be kept up. Nature had done much for Peterborough and there was plenty of electric power at her very door. It was going to waste every day in the year.

Regarding the proposition before the Council, Mr. Culverwell said that Oshawa and Bowmanville wanted Burleigh Falls power. It could be delivered at these towns at a low rate but Peterborough was the natural market. Burleigh power could be laid down at Peterborough at $7.60 per horse-power at the transformer station.

Mr. Culverwell referred to the report of Mr. McCallum, C.E., City Engineer, of Hamilton, on Burleigh Falls power and said that the estimates of Mr. McCallum were exceedingly conservative.

The company wanted the Council to to take some definite action at once as the season was advancing and if Peterborough did not want the power the company had other places in view.

Mayor Rush said the Council had came to the conclusion that the company's price $125,000, would not be suitable to the ratepayers. There was no use considering the proposition at that figure.

Mr. R. J. McLaughlin said when he had come before the Council three months ago $125,000 was the lowest figure he could get them to quote. Another meeting had been held, however, and he was authorised to make a new proposition. The amount might seem large, but he was satisfied that the ratepayers of Peterborough would support the proposition if it was clearly understood by them.

Peterborough had a great many people—busy people—who were engrossed in their own affairs, and they would have to be educated before they would see the the matter in the correct light.

Mr. McLaughlin then outlined the new offer of the company as given above. He considered the offer a reasonable one. The mode in which payment was to be made he looked upon as a very favorable one to the city. The fact that interest on the bonds on half the amount would not become operative until the end of three years, would be a big saving to the city. By the end of three years the city would be deriving a large amount of revenue from the sale of power, and as a result the purchase of Burleigh Falls power would not result in increased taxation.

He considered $120,000 in four per cent. bonds was a small price when the value of the power was considered. There was 2,700 horse power at Burleigh without the use of the reservoir. The reservoir would add 1,600 to 1,800 horse power more. The reservoir would result in the conservation of the water at night, when only a small amount of power was being used, and would give a much greater flow during the day.

The Government, Mr. McLaughlin said, was preparing to build a new dam at Burleigh Falls, and were constantly building dams in the back country to conserve the waters. This meant a steady flow at Burleigh all the year round. It would not be necessary for the city to build a dam. This was a big item. All the city would have to do would be to build a power house, instal the machinery and construct the transmission lines.

Mr. McLaughlin then gave some interesting information as to what Orillia is doing in the line of power development.

The last dam Orillia built cost that town $75,000 to develop 1,500 or 1,600 horse power. The first two dams that had been built had to be replaced. Orillia was selling power at $16 per horse power, and the people were being given a low flat rate for electric lighting, and a revenue of $5,000 per year was being derived from the street lighting plant. There was no reason why Peterborough should not do better than that.

Peterborough would not take $300,000 for the Burleigh Falls power if it owned it, Mr. McLaughlin said.

Mr. McLaughlin pointed out the advisability of developing a large instead of a small power. The Burleigh Falls scheme was a big undertaking, but it meant cheap power for the city and increased growth and prosperity. With Burleigh power Peterborough could outbid every other place in Canada in securing industries. Guelph was making a great bid for industries. A vigorous advertising campaign had been commenced, and advertising would do a lot. With Burleigh power and advertising Peterborough would forge to the front rapidly. Providence had been munificent to Peterborough in the matter of natural resources. Why were they going to waste? Human energy was all that was needed to bring these great resources into use. Delay in grappling with the power question might result in a power monopoly, which was something that should be guarded against on all sides.

If the city owned Burleigh Falls there would be no danger of a monopoly.

Mr. Hudson, a director of the Central Ontario Power Company, said he supposed it went without saying that every alderman was interested in the development of Peterborough. Cheap power was one of the best things to advance the interests of a place like Peterborough. Was Burleigh Falls power at $7.60 per horse power a real thing or a myth. Four engineers said it was a real thing, and the speaker believed that they were correct. He could not understand how any alderman would let the opportunity pass. It was a business proposition. If Burleigh power could be had at even $10 or $12 per h.p. Peterborough could not afford to be without it.

Dr. Adams the vice-president of the company, said Burleigh Falls power spoke for itself. The engineer's reports were there and the opportunity to secure the power reasonably was before the city.

Col. Henry A. Ward, ex-M.P., said if the engineers' figures were correct Peterborough would be making a big mistake not to accept the company's offer. He was a shareholder in the company and had faith in Burleigh Falls. He believed the power estimated was there.

Ald. Bradburn asked Mr. McLaughlin if $120,000 was the company's lowest price.

"Yes, that is final," said Mr. McLaughlin.

Mr. McLaughlin read from the agreement of the city of Toronto with the Hydro-Electric Commission. Niagara power was delivered at the sub-station at Toronto at $18.10 per h.p. for 10,000 horse power. Hamilton paid $17.80 for 1,500 h.p., and the other cities and towns that had Niagara power were, without one or two exceptions, paying more than Toronto.

Ald. Buller said that $125,000 was an exorbitant price. He wanted to refer the matter back to the Power Committee.

Ald. Bradburn said there was no use referring the matter to the committee. The council should deal with it.

Ald. Morrow, discussing the question, asked if the company would guarantee that the power could be laid down at Peterborough for $7.60 per horse power. He thought it would be well for the city to have an engineer report upon the project. If there was not the power at Burleigh that the company said there was they should reduce their price accordingly.

Ald. Morgan said the city should secure a report from Mr. R. B. Rogers, who knew every foot of the lakes and the river.

"I object to Mr. Rogers," said Mr. Culverwell.

"That rests with the city," said Ald. Morrow.

Mr. D. W. Dumble, who was present, said it would be hard to get the ratepayers to pay $120,000 for Burleigh Falls power when they knew it did not cost the owners only a fraction of that.

It was pointed out that the cost to those who owned it had nothing to do with the matter.

Ald. Turner made a plea for getting down to business at once. The city had let three months slip away already and it was time action should be taken one way or the other.

The discussion ran off into side issues. Mr. Dumble asked how much power there was at Buckhorn.

Mr. Culverwell said Buckhorn was not for sale and there was no use discussing it.

Mr. A. P. Poussette also discussed the question. He believed that the estimated power was at Burleigh.

After some further discussion the deputation withdrew and the aldermen took up the question.

Ald. Bradburn wanted to know if the company would give the city a further option.

Mr. McLaughlin said he was not authorized to hold the matter open any longer.

"We might as well go home, then," said Ald. Morrow.

The directors of the company held a meeting in a room outside and decided to offer a one month's option.

The aldermen argued for a longer time, but the company directors were firm.

Ald. Morgan moved that the council engage Mr. R. B. Rogers to make a report on Burleigh Falls power.

Ald. McIntyre seconded the motion.

Ald. Buller, seconded by Ald. Bradburn, moved in amendment, that the matter be referred back to the Power Committee with power to engage an engineer.

Ald. Morrow moved that the matter be referred to the Committee of the Whole Council, but subsequently withdrew his motion.

The Buller-Bradburn amendment was lost, and the original motion carried, Aldermen Buller, Bradburn, Phelan and Morrow voting against it.

BRIAND IS NEW PREMIER OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC

Post of Under-Secretary of Posts and Telegraphs, in Which M. Simyan Made so Much Trouble With Labor Men, is Suppressed.

Paris, July 24.—After a day of conferences Aristide Briand succeeded in forming a new French Ministry, and officially announced the success of his endeavors to President Fallieres at 10 o'clock last night. The new Cabinet is made up as follows:

Premier and Minister of the Interior and of Public Worship—M. Briand.

Minister of Justice—M. Barthou.

Minister of Foreign Affairs — M. Pichon.

Minister of Finance—Georges Cochery.

Minister of Education—M. Doumergue.

Minister of Public Works, Posts and Telegraphs—M. Millerand.

Minister of Commerce—Jean Dupuy.

Minister of Agriculture—M. Ruan.

Minister of Colonies—M. Trouillot.

Minister of Labor—M. Viviani.

The portfolios of War and the Navy will be filled to-day. These have been offered respectively to Gen. Brun and Admiral Roue de la Payrene, and both are expected to accept.

The post of Under-Secretary of Posts and Telegraphs, which was held by M. Simyan, whose resignation was demanded during the recent strike of postmen and telegraphers by the Socialists, will be suppressed. An Under-Secretaryship of Finance will be created and the office given to Rene Renoult. M. Dujardin-Beaumetz will remain as Under Secretary of Public Works, Instruction and Beauxarts.

M. Briand had considerable difficulty in appeasing the appetites aroused by the fall of the Cabinet and only satisfied the Radicals, who charged him with being a Socialist, by the statement, "I intend to complete the work of the Clemenceau Cabinet and carry out the wishes of the President and form a Republican Cabinet committed to Republican policies."

NO AGREEMENT REACHED YET

It is Hoped, However, That United States Tariff May be Settled To-day

Washington, July 24.—While no agreement was reached by the tariff conferees yesterday on coal, lumber, hides, oil, iron ore, the cotton schedule or wood pulp and print paper, it was said last night, by the conferees after an adjournment for the day that the prospects of settling these big questions to-day were excellent.

Should the conference complete its work to-day, it would be impossible to report it before Tuesday as the House, which agreed to the conference on the tariff bill and therefore, under rules must receive it before the Senate, adjourned yesterday until Tuesday.

Heroic measures were put into operation yesterday in an effort to compose differences existing between the Senate and the House on the tariff bill and to carry out President Taft's program for a reduction of duties on raw materials.

All except the actual conferees were excluded from the chamber and it was agreed that discussions leading up to a settlement of any of the subjects familiarly termed "national issues," should be regarded as confidential.

As the question of hides is giving the committee more trouble than any other of the schedules that have claimed the attention of the conference, it was discussed first.

After adjournment, Senators Lodge and Crane, and Representative McCall of Massachusetts had a long consultation with Senator Aldrich. It is not known what understanding, if any, was reached, but it would surprise very few outside of the conference chamber if an agreement is reached to-day substantially reducing the duties on hides and all leather goods.

THIRD STAGE OF KING'S PRIZE COMPETITION TO-DAY

Huggins, McGinnes, Blackburn, Freeborn, Morris, Smith and Stack all Have Chances to Bring Coveted Trophy Home—Other Prizes Won.

Bisley Camp, July 24.—Staff-Sergt. Stack of Truro, N.S., in the shoot-off for a place in the King's Prize, third stage, was successful in winning one of the two places, which were competed for by 28 others.

The total score in the third stage over the three ranges is 150—ten shots at each range. Sergt. Stack can equal last year's winning score of 325 by making 140 out of the possible 150 in this stage.

There are now the following seven Canadians in this final stage, which is shot off to-day: Sergt.-Major Huggins of Hamilton, Corpl. McGinnes of Edmonton, Lieut. Morris of Bowmanville, Sergt. W. A. Smith of Ottawa, Sergt. Blackburn of Winnipeg, Sergt. Freeborn of Hamilton and Sergt. Stack of Truro.

This is the present standing:

| | 1st. Stage. | 2nd. Stage. | Ttl. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Sgt.-Maj. Huggins | 99 | 91 | 190 |
| Corpl. McGinnes | 96 | 94 | 190 |
| Sergt. Blackburn | 95 | 94 | 189 |
| Col.-Sergt. Freeborn | 99 | 89 | 188 |
| Lieut. Morris | 100 | 88 | 188 |
| Sergt. Smith | 95 | 91 | 186 |
| Staff-Sergt. Stack | 95 | 90 | 185 |

The third stage, open to the 100 competitors making the highest places in the first and second stages combined, is at 800, 900 and 1,000 yards (aggregate), ten shots at each distance. The places of all competitors in the second and third stages will be decided by the aggregate of the scores made by them in all the stages in which they fire.

It is interesting to note that the man making the highest score in the first and second stages of the King's Prize has not yet managed to win the great trophy. Canada still has a good chance to lift it.

The highest score yet made in this competition, that of 325, made by Pte. J. Gray of the 5th Scottish Rifles last year, can be equalled by either Sergt.-Major Huggins of the 13th, Hamilton, or Corpl. D. McGinnes of Edmonton, if they make only 135 out of 155 at the 800, 900 and 1,000 yard ranges of the third stage. To equal this score, also, Sergt. Blackburn of Winnipeg must make 136, and Col.-Sergt. Freeborn of Hamilton and Lieut. Morris of Bowmanville 137 each, out of 155.

Lieut. Mortimer was first in the "Range Prizes," competition at 500 yards in the first stage of the King's Prize, and won a rifle presented by the Birmingham Small Arms Co. and $25. Sergt. Russell was second, winning a rifle and $25; Staff-Sergt. Bayles, 4th, $5; Corpl. Albert Sprinks, 26th, $5.

In the "Range Prizes," at 600 yards in the King's Prize, Staff-Sergt. Mitchell was 18th, winning $5; Sergt.-Major Huggins, 19th, $5; Col.-Sergt. Freeborn, 31st, $5.

In the King's Prize list those who failed to get into the third stage rank are as follows: Sergt. Russell, 106th; Major Jones, 141st; Sergt.-Major Creighton, 166th; Corpl. A. Sprinks, 194th; Sergt. Kelly, 200th, and Pte. H. D. Gougeon, 230th.

Russell, Jones and Creighton win $20; Sprinks, Kelly and Gougeon, $15.

In the Corporation of the City of London, open only to Indian and colonial volunteers, Col.-Sergt. Freeborn was 2nd, winning $75; Staff-Sergt. Mitchell, 4th, $50; Sergt-Sergt. Richardson, 5th, $37.50; Lieut. Smith, 6th, $37.50; Corpl. McGinnes, 7th, $25; Sergt. Smith, 8th, $25; Sergt.-Major Huggins, 10th, $25; Lieut. Morris, 12th, $25.

Lieut. Smith is second in the Elkington Cup competition, winning $10; Sergt. Smith, 40th, also won $10.

The Elkington prizes are awarded to the competitors whose respective scores in the Secretary of State for War, Duke of Cambridge, Imperial Tobacco, make up the highest aggregates.

WEST TORONTO BUSINESS MAN GIVES SOME VIEWS

One of the officials prominent in the Business Men's Association of West Toronto, under the auspices of which an excursion was conducted here the other day, had a mild complaint to air to the Review. He was of the opinion that the civic officials of Peterborough didn't show enough interest in the visitors, and mentioned Fire Chief Howard as the only civic official who showed a spirit of hospitality and friendly concern. The chief was at the Oval when the sports were being held, and threw open the fire hall and explained the manipulation of things there to the callers.

Berlin has been the place to which the excursion has been held for the past two years, and the civic officials and prominent citizens received the guests, showed them around town, gave them an opportunity of seeing and having explained its advantages, asked them back again, and otherwise made the excursionists welcome and at home.

The gentleman who complained somewhat of the reception of the visitors, said he did not wish to say anything unnecessarily disagreeable, but seemed to feel somewhat hurt on account of what he termed unexpected negligence

A clipping from the Berlin News Record of recent date was given the reporter, and it spoke of the numerous excursions of large size that would visit the western town this year. The West Toronto man thought that Berlin was deservedly a popular excursion town

GYPSIES CAN STAY AS LONG AS THEY PLEASE

Have Been in Canada Four Years—Appear in Court at Ottawa

Ottawa, July 23.—The band of Mexican gypsies that during the past ten days has enlivened the life of Hull, will, from present indications, remain in the city indefinitely. When several members of the band appeared before Recorder Desjardins this morning, their counsel, Mr. J. L. Cousineau, showed that they were naturalized Canadians

The recorder reserved judgment until Tuesday. Mr. Cousineau stated this morning that if the decision was adverse an appeal could be made that would prevent immediate action in compelling the gypsies to leave the city. Stephen George, chief of the band, acted as interpreter, and gave evidence in regard to the pursuits of his band.

The evidence in connection with the naturalization of the gypsies brought out the fact that four years ago in Hull the members of the band had taken out papers giving them entry to the citizenship of the country. Since that time they had been travelling from place to place, and are still in possession of the rights conferred by naturalization.

It was shown that the band supported itself by work in metalware, and by various bargains transacted in the places at which they camped.

Mr. Cousineau, in argument, contended that the gypsies had not been causing disturbance in Hull, that every time any of the band appeared on the streets a large number of boys at once collected, and consequently difficulty sometimes developed.

EPIDEMIC IS RAGING

She is in a dangerous position and it is feared she will break up before she can be floated.

TORONTO BANK CLERK IS ARRESTED IN VANCOUVER

Former Ledger-keeper of the Bank of Montreal Branch Wanted in Several Cities in Canada and States, is Caught Trying to Cash a Big Check.

Toronto, July 24.—After a holiday extending from March 9 last, John Alfred Graham Anderson, former ledger-keeper of the Bank of Montreal, Portland and Queen street branch of this city, was yesterday landed by the police at the Hotel Vancouver, in Vancouver. He was caught while attempting to cash a check for $1,900. The "accepted" stamp of the Bank of Montreal, which was the chief instrument in his forging, has not been found. He is wanted here and in many cities in the United States and Europe for forgeries upon which he secured amounts which run into several thousand dollars. He attempted to pass a check at the hotel in Vancouver and was reported to the bank. Detective Murray will leave immediately to bring him here for trial.

Anderson, who had been employed in the bank for a number of years and was widely and favorably known, being the son of a well-to-do doctor at Newcastle, Ont., left the bank in March, saying that he was tired and wanted a holiday. He said that he intended to travel and was given a send-off by his friends. When he went he took with him the stamp with which he marked checks "accepted." This has been his great asset in his series of swindles. "Accepted" checks upon reputable banks are easy to cash the world over.

Shortly after his disappearance the worthless checks began to arrive, yet it was not for some time that he was suspected. It would appear that he cut down into the States and thence crossed the ocean. In April checks were cashed for $15 at the Dominion Bank, Windsor, and the National Bank, Detroit.

Others come in from the New Denison Hotel, Indianapolis, Ind., April 16, for $35; from J. L. Brandis & Son, Omaha, Neb., for $450; from Chicago, for $200; from Los Angeles, Cal., for $300; from San Francisco, where he made his biggest haul of $750; from Burlington, Va., where he secured $15 from the Y.M.C.A.; in Boston, from the Bank of Nova Scotia, he secured $15. Then from Paris, France, came a check through the Bank of France for $250.

In Canada, he cashed checks at the Royal Bank, Montreal, for $15; at the Quebec Bank, Pembroke, $15; at the Imperial and Commerce Banks, Galt, for $25 and $15 respectively, and also at Gananoque and Toronto.

He is known to have been at Gananoque a few days ago and must have been taken in Vancouver shortly after arriving there.

FIVE YEARS FOR LABOR LEADER

New York, July 24.—Cornelius P. Shea, the former president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, who was found guilty on Wednesday of attempting to murder Alice Walsh, a former Chicago waitress with whom he had lived, was sentenced yesterday to not less than five nor more than twenty-five years in prison.

"Your services for humanity are urged in your behalf," said the court, "because you have been active in the affairs of organized labor. There is a prejudice against organized labor, because such men as you dominate it with your brutal methods and your coarse, offensive personality, and a part of the community has come to look upon organized labor as being composed of brutes and securing their victories by brutal methods. But that is all wrong, I believe I am helping the cause of organized labor by ridding it of one such as you, and sending you to state prison."

ALLEGED ROBBERS ARE ARRAIGNED

Ottawa, July 24.—Howard C. Conrad and Charles A. Wood were arraigned in the Police Court yesterday morning on a charge of stealing a tray of diamonds from MacMillan's store.

They have been positively identified by the clerks as two of the men who were in the store at the time of the robbery.

The third man, James Maward, alias Howard, is still under surveillance in the cells. He has not recovered from his morphine debauch, but has already given out statements which seem to positively identify him as being one of the gang. The fourth man, who escaped, leaving a watermelon behind him on the train, is supposed to have the goods on his person, and every effort will be made to locate him. He is believed to be either in Montreal or Toronto.

BIG TELEPHONE MERGER WAS PUT THROUGH

Pittsburg, July 24.—Absolute control of the Central District & Printing Telegraph Co., the local Bell Telephone concern, is to pass into the hands of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

A NICE CONFESSION

Chicago, July 21.—(Montreal Star Telegraphic Service.)—The bulls were disappointed because of the cool and favorable weather in the North-West and the favorable outlook for a record crop. They expected that with hot winds there would be rust damage and a sensational price upturn. The Minneapolis flour output increased 65,150 barrels for the week to 259,950 barrels, against 230,630 barrels for the corresponding period a year ago. Private cables report the Australian crop prospects as ideal.

J. F. PRITCHARD.

The above signed extract from the Chicago news service of the Star ought to open the eyes of the farmer and of the public, if anything is needed in that direction, to the wretched infamy of grain and stock-gambling. The "jugglers with other men's lives" have the boldness to put on record their desire that crops should be short so that they may "make" on a rising market. No doubt they will do all they can to bring about the desired result. Such is the "quality of mercy" the poor have to look for from the institutions of an alleged Christian nation. It applies to Canada as well. The complications of legitimate trade and commerce are a severe enough strain upon the efforts and everyday life of the mass of the people without adding to that strain the disgusting greed of those who would sell the bodies and souls of the toilers, that they themselves might ride in expensive conveyances and celebrate a Bacchanalian holiday. The man who makes his fortune out of the fluctuations of the money, stock or grain markets, makes his money out of the toiling masses who, in the last analysis, have to pay for it—for somebody has to do the paying. Such fortunes represent the slave traffic through which the young and old and all toilers and producers alike are forced to yield up the huge margin of unearned profit. A cent of rise in money or in flour means that a million little mouths must go without bread. To cause it for a purpose is a crime.

The man who makes a fortune in fair trading or out of great industries that give work to the unemployed, risking his capital the while, is a man to admire and to applaud, but the man who boasts that "he made a hundred thousand in this or that stock yesterday," simply by boiling or beating the cost of life to the people, should be treated as a common and intolerable nuisance. He serves no purpose that could not readily be dispensed with to the great advantage of the peace, prosperity and happiness of the great body of the people who suffer most by manipulations of the "market."

THE BLACK-LIST

The black-list is a list of those to whom it is illegal to give drink. The mother, father, wife, son, daughter or employer and the Magistrate himself alone have the power of requiring the inspector to add a name to the list, to notify the liquor-sellers and to furnish them with means of identification. The punishment for violation of the ordinance is severe. It is applicable to both the seller and the blacklister himself and to any person who gives, or procures liquor to be given to a blacklister. The punishment of the blacklister for getting and drinking liquor is a fine, imprisonment or both. He is compelled to say where he got the liquor also. The punishment usually proves a deterrent in the first instance. If not it is repeated and experience has shown that even the worst and most determined cases give up the drinking business in disgust and ultimately return to sobriety and an industrious life.

The blacklist is an invention of about two years ago. At least its adoption in Ontario dates from two years ago. It is the best solution so far of a difficult problem and it seems to be effective.

The man who has decided to lead the whiskey life gets into such a heap of personal inconvenience and discomfort that he finds it affords greater enjoyment and satisfaction to keep out of the hands of the law than to spend his time and money striving to acquire booze.

A MISTAKEN IDEA

A correspondent of the Toronto World asks if Canada has a right to keep out foreign goods, why hasn't Great Britain. The answer is easy. She has. But the question asked shows that the writer has mistaken the meaning and purpose of Protection. (We are not in favour of a prohibitory tariff, but of a protective tariff, and a protective tariff is one WHICH PUTS ALL NATIONS ON AN EQUAL FOOTING. It is an instrument to preserve the conditions of existence and industrial level. A country where an artisan or workingman lives in a better way must go under sooner or later to the country that compels its workers to live in a worse or cheaper way. Free trade is like water. It is trade that is bound to find its natural level. Protected trade is trade that has been put by artificial means upon a competitive level with F. T. and if it does not conform to the theoretical argument in favour of F. T. nevertheless prevents one country from getting an unfair advantage over another by what is known as jug-handled free-trade.

On the theoretical basis of argument, without more, F. T. is unassailable, but then when conditions are different in different countries they naturally alter conditions of trade. The further idea that F. T. is best because the consumer gets his wherewithal cheapest is right up to or down to a certain point, and that point is where remunerative work ceases and goes to the other man.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The passage-at-arms between Clemenceau and Delcasse, which led to the downfall of the French Government, makes it look as if unpreparedness, not preparedness, was the best way to prevent war. If France had been prepared she would have declared war, Clemenceau said, over the Algeciras incident.

Magnificent main streets, miles of paved roadways and other things too numerous to mention, seem to have given our water-commissioners a very good opinion of some of our sister cities like St. Thomas and Chatham. It is said that we are not so up-to-date in some respects as we think we are. It is just as well, no doubt, to find this out.

The best tea can be utterly spoiled by exposure to contaminating influences, as bulk teas so often are. The sealed lead packets of the "Salada" Tea Company give you tea fresh and fragrant from the gardens to the teacup.

CELEBRATED THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

Parents of Peterborough Lady Have Been Wedded Fifty Years

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Timmins, Midland avenue, was the scene of an enjoyable event on Wednesday of last week when a number of intimate friends and relatives gathered to extend congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Timmins, the bride and groom of half a century ago.

On the fifteenth day of July, 1859, Thomas Timmins and Martha Johnston were united in marriage at Manvers, Durham, by Rev. D. D. Roistane. The bride was supported by Sarah Fallis, and the groom by Christopher Chittick, who also entered into a marriage contract some time later, and are now living at Lindsay.

Following their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Timmins settled in Janetville, where they lived for about 22 years, when they removed to Midland where they have lived almost continuously since with the exception of nine years spent in Lindsay and Peterborough. In all eight children were born to them, four boys and four girls, five of whom are still alive—Mrs. Pethick, of Peterborough; Robert J., of Calgary, for years furniture dealer and undertaker in Midland; Miss Lilly, at home; H. Stanley, in Winnipeg, and Mrs. Lane, of Verigen, Sask., all of whom were in attendance at this anniversary with the exception of R.J., of Calgary.

During their long life Mr. and Mrs. Timmins have been blessed with fairly good health, which is one of the greatest of God's good gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Timmins have reached the allotted span of life, but are still smart and active, and from appearances will doubtless pass the four score mark before the call comes to step up higher.—Lindsay Post.

BE A CHARMING WOMAN

You never saw a beautiful woman who didn't have beautiful hair. The charms of a beautiful woman lie in her hair. Many women do not realize the attractions they possess because they do not give proper attention to the care of the hair.

The women of the "400" are famed for their beauty, not because their facial features are superior to those of other women, but because they know how to keep young by supplying vigor, lustre, and strength to the hair.

Up to a few years ago Parisian Sage could hardly be obtained in America. But now this delightful hair restorer can be had in every town in America. W. Madill, druggist, Peterborough, sells it for 50 cents a bottle, and he guarantees it to grow beautiful luxuriant hair; to turn dull, lifeless hair into lustrous hair; to stop falling hair, to stop itching of the scalp. Understand, W. Madill will give you your money back if it fails.

—THE— Masquerader

By KATHERINE CECIL THURSTON,
Author of "The Circle," Etc.

Copyright, 1905, 1906, by Harper & Brothers

The immediate outcome of Loder's speech was all that his party had desired. The effect on the house had been marked, and when, no satisfactory response coming to his demand, he had in still more resolute and insistent terms called for a division on the motion for adjournment, the result had been an appreciable fall in the government majority.

To Loder himself the realization that he had at last vindicated and justified himself by individual action had a peculiar effect. His position had been altered in one remarkable particular. Before this day he alone had known himself to be strong; now the knowledge was shared by others and he was human enough to be susceptible to the change.

The first appreciation of it came immediately after the excitement of the division, when Fraide, singling him out, took his arm and pressed it affectionately.

"My dear Chilcote," he said, "we are all proud of you!" Then, looking up into his face, he added, in a graver tone, "but keep your mind upon the future; never be blinded by the present, however bright it seems."

At the touch of his hand, at the spontaneous approval of his first words, Loder's pride thrilled, and in a vehement rush of ambition his senses answered to the praise. Then, as Fraide in all unconsciousness, added his second sentence, the hot glow of feeling suddenly chilled.

In a sweep of intuitive reaction the meaning and the danger of his falsely real position extinguished his excitement and turned his triumph cold. With an involuntary gesture he withdrew his arm.

"You're very good, sir," he said. "And you're very right. We never should forget that there is—a future."

The old man glanced up, surprised by the tone.

"Quite so, Chilcote," he said kindly "But we only advise those in whom we believe to look toward it. Shall we find my wife? I know she will want to bear you home with us."

But Loder's joy in himself and his achievement had dropped from him He shrank suddenly from Lady Sarah's congratulations and Eve's warm, silent approbation.

"Thanks, sir," he said, "but I don't feel fit for society. A touch of my nerves, I suppose." He laughed shortly. "But do you mind saying to Eve that I hope I have satisfied her?" He added this as if in half reluctant after thought.

Then, with a short pressure of Fraide's hand, he turned, evading the many groups that waited to claim him, and passed out of the house alone.

Hailing a cab, he drove to Grosvenor square. All the exaltation of an hour ago had turned to ashes. His excitement had found its culmination in a sense of futility and premonition.

He met no one in the hall or on the stairs of Chilcote's house, and on entering the study he found that also deserted.

Greening had been among the most absorbed of those who listened to his speech. Passing at once into the room, he crossed as if by instinct to the desk, and there halted. On the top of some unopened letters lay the significant yellow envelope of a telegram; the telegram that in an unformed, subconscious way had sprung to his expectation on the moment of Fraide's congratulation.

Very quietly he picked it up, opened and read it, and, with the automatic caution that had become habitual, carried it across the room and dropped it in the fire. This done, he returned to the desk, read the letters that awaited Chilcote, and, scribbling the necessary notes upon the margins, left them in readiness for Greening. Then, moving with the same quiet suppression, he passed from the room, down the stairs and out into the street by the way he had come.

CHAPTER XX.

On the fifth day after the momentous 1st of April on which he had recalled Loder and resumed his own life Chilcote left his house and walked toward Bond street. Though the morning was clear and the air almost warm for the time of year, he was buttoned into a long overcoat and was wearing a muffler and a pair of doeskin gloves. As he passed along the street he kept close to the house fronts to avoid the sun that was everywhere stirring the winter bound town like a suffusion of young blood through old veins. He avoided the warmth because in this instance warmth meant light, but as he moved he shivered slightly from time to time with the haunting, permeating cold that of late had become his persistent shadow.

He was ill at ease as he hurried forward. With each succeeding day of the old life the new annoyances, the new obligations, became more hampering. Before his compact with Loder this old life had been a net about his feet. Now the meshes seemed to have narrowed, the net itself to have spread till it smothered his whole being. His own household, his own rooms even, offered no sanctuary. The presence of another personality tinged the atmosphere. It was preposterous, but it was undeniable. The lay figure that he had set in his place had proved to be flesh and blood, had usurped his life, his position, his very personality, by sheer right of strength. As he walked along Bond street in the first sunshine of the year, jostled by the well dressed crowd, he felt a pariah.

He revolted at the new order of things, but the revolt was a silent one—the iron of expediency had entered into his soul. He dared not jeopardize Loder's position because he dared not dispense with Loder. The door that guarded his vice drew him more resistlessly with every indulgence, and Loder's was the voice that called the "open sesame."

He walked on aimlessly. He had been but five days at home, and already the quiet, grass grown court of Clifford's inn, the bare staircase, the comfortless privacy of Loder's rooms, seemed a haven of refuge. The speed with which this hunger had returned frightened him.

He walked forward rapidly and without encountering a check. Then suddenly the spell was broken. From the slowly moving, brilliantly dressed throng of people some one called him by his name, and, turning, he saw Lillian Astrupp.

She was stepping from the door of a jeweler's, and as he turned she paused, holding out her hand.

"The very person I would have wished to see!" she exclaimed. "Where have you been these hundred years? I've heard of nobody but you since you've turned politician and ceased to be a mere member of parliament." She laughed softly. The laugh suited the light spring air, as she herself suited the pleasant, superficial scene.

He took her hand and held it, while his eyes traveled from her delicate face to her pale cloth gown, from her soft furs to the bunch of roses fastened in her muff. The sight of her was a curious relief. Her cool, slim fingers were so casual, yet so clinging; her voice and her presence were so redolent of easy, artificial things.

"How well you look!" he said involuntarily.

Again she laughed. "That's my prerogative," she responded lightly. "But I was serious in being glad to see you. Sarcastic people are always so intuitive. I'm looking for some one with intuition."

Chilcote glanced up. "Extravagant again?" he said dryly.

Chilcote laughed quickly. "I understand. You've changed your minister of finance. I'm wanted in some other direction."

This time her reproach was expressed by a glance. "You are always wanted," she said.

The words seemed to rouse him again to the shadowy self distrust that the sight of her had lifted.

"It's—it's delightful to meet you like this," he began, "and I wish the meeting wasn't momentary. But I'm—I'm rather pressed for time. You must let me come round one afternoon—or evening, when you're alone." He fumbled for a moment with the collar of his coat and glanced furtively upward toward Oxford street.

But again Lillian smiled, this time to herself. If she understood anything on earth, it was Chilcote and his moods.

"If one may be careless of anything, Jack," she said lightly, "surely it's of time. I can imagine being pressed for anything else in the world. If it's an appointment you're worrying about, a motor goes ever so much faster than a cab." She looked at him tentatively, her head slightly on one side, her muff raised till the roses and some of the soft fur touched her cheek.

She looked very charming and very persuasive as Chilcote glanced back. Again she seemed to represent a respite—something graceful and subtle in a world of oppressive obligations. His eyes strayed from her figure to the smart motor car drawn up beside the curb.

She saw the glance. "Ever so much quicker," she insinuated. And, smiling again, she stepped forward from the door of the shop. After a second's indecision Chilcote followed her.

The waiting car had three seats, one in front for the chauffeur, two vis-a-vis at the back, offering pleasant possibilities of a tete-a-tete.

"The park—and drive slowly," Lillian ordered as she stepped inside, motioning Chilcote to the seat opposite.

They moved up Bond street smoothly and rapidly. Lillian was absorbed in the passing traffic until the Marble arch was reached; then, as they glided through the big gates, she looked across at her companion. He had turned up the collar of his coat, though the wind was scarcely perceptible, and buried himself in it to the ears.

"It is extraordinary!" she exclaimed suddenly as her eyes rested on his face. It was seldom that she felt drawn to exclamation. She was usually too indolent to show surprise. But now the feeling was called forth before she was aware.

Chilcote looked up. "What's extraordinary?" he said sensitively.

She leaned forward for an instant and touched his hand.

"Bear!" she said teasingly. "Did I rub your fur the wrong way?" Then, seeing his expression, she tactfully changed her tone. "I'll explain. It was the same thing that struck me the night of Blanche's party—when you looked at me over Leonard Kaine's head. You remember?" She glanced away from him across the park to where the grass was already showing greener.

"Oh, yes," he said hastily; "yes." He wished now that he had questioned Loder more closely on the proceedings of that party. It seemed to him on looking back that Loder had mentioned nothing on the day of their last exchange but the political complications that absorbed his mind.

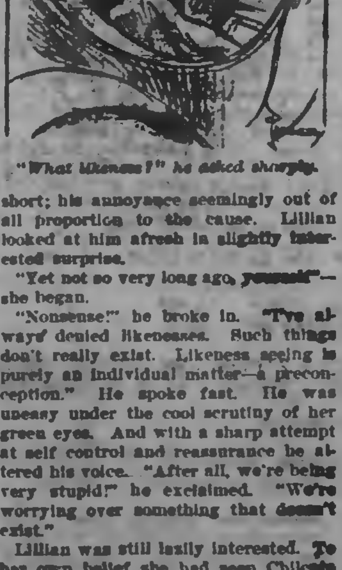
"I couldn't explain then," Lillian went on. "I couldn't explain before a crowd of people that it wasn't your dark head showing over Leonard's red one that surprised me, but the most wonderful, the most extraordinary likeness"— She paused.

The car was moving slower. There was a delight in the easy motion through the fresh, early air. But Chilcote's uneasiness had been aroused. He no longer felt soothed.

"What likeness?" he asked sharply.

She turned to him easily. "Oh, a likeness I have noticed before," she said. "A likeness that always seemed strange, but that suddenly became incredible at Blanche's party."

He moved quickly. "Likenesses are an illusion," he said, "a mere imagination of the brain!" His manner was short; his annoyance seemingly out of all proportion to the cause. Lillian looked at him afresh in slightly interested surprise.



"What likeness?" he asked sharply.

"Yet not so very long ago, yourself"— she began.

"Nonsense!" he broke in. "I've always denied likenesses. Such things don't really exist. Likeness seeing is purely an individual matter—a preconception." He spoke fast. He was uneasy under the cool scrutiny of her green eyes. And with a sharp attempt at self control and reassurance he altered his voice. "After all, we're being very stupid!" he exclaimed. "We're worrying over something that doesn't exist."

Lillian was still lazily interested. To her own belief she had seen Chilcote last on the night of her sister's reception. Then she had been too preoccupied to notice either his manner or his health, though superficially it had lingered in her mind that he had seemed unusually reliant, unusually well on that night. A remembrance of the impression came to her now as she studied his face, upon which imperceptibly and yet relentlessly his vice was setting its mark, in the dull restlessness of eye, the unhealthy sallowness of skin.

Some shred of her thought, some suggestion of the comparison running through her mind, must have shown in her face, for Chilcote altered his position with a touch of uneasiness. He glanced away across the long sweep of tan covered drive stretching between the trees. Then he glanced furtively back.

"By the way," he said quickly, "you wanted me for something?" The memory of her earlier suggestion came as a sudden boon.

She lifted her muff again and smelled her roses thoughtfully. "Oh, it was nothing, really," she said. "You sarcastic people give very shrewd suggestions sometimes, and I've been rather wanting a suggestion on an—an adventure that I've had." She looked down at her flowers with a charmingly attentive air.

But Chilcote's restlessness had increased. Looking up, she suddenly caught the expression, and her own face changed.

"My dear Jack," she said softly, "what a bore I am! Let's forget tedious things and enjoy ourselves." She leaned toward him caressingly with an air of concern and reproach.

The action was not without effect. Her soothing voice, her smile, her almost affectionate gesture, each carried weight. With a swift return of assurance he responded to her tone.

"Right!" he said. "Right! We will enjoy ourselves!" He laughed quickly and again with a conscious movement lifted his hand to his muffler.

"Then we'll postpone the advice?" Lillian laughed too.

"Yes. Right! We'll postpone it." The word pleased him, and he caught at it. "We won't bother about it now, but we won't shelve it altogether. We'll postpone it."

"Exactly." She settled herself more comfortably. "You'll dine with me one night—and we can talk it out then. I see so little of you nowadays," she added in a lower voice.

"My dear girl, you're unfair!" Chilcote's spirits had risen. He spoke rapidly, almost pleasantly. "It isn't I who keep away. It's the stupid affairs of the world that keep me. I'd be with you every hour of the twelve if I had my way."

She looked up at the bare trees. Her expression was a delightful mixture of amusement, satisfaction and skepticism. "Then you will dine?" she said at last.

"Certainly." His reaction to high spirits carried him forward.

"Now nice? Shall we fix a day?"

"A day? Yes; yes—if you like." He hesitated for an instant, then again the impulse of the previous moment dominated his other feeling. "Yes," he said quickly; "yes. After all, why not fix it now?" With a sudden inclination toward amiability he opened his overcoat, thrust his hand into an inner pocket and drew out his engagement book—the same long, narrow book fitted with two pencils that Loder had scanned so interestedly on his first morning at Grosvenor square. He opened it, turning the pages rapidly. "What day shall it be? Thursday's full—and Friday—and Saturday. What a bore!" He still talked fast.

Chilcote jerked the book, then laughed, with a touch of embarrassment. "Oh, the crosses! Merely to remind me that certain appointments must be kept. You know my beastly memory! But what about the day? Shall we fix the day?" His voice was in control, but mentally her trivial question had disturbed and jarred him. "What day shall we say?" he repeated. "Monday in next week?"

Lillian glanced up, with a faint exclamation of disappointment. "How horribly far away!" She spoke with engaging petulance and, leaning forward afresh, drew the book from Chilcote's hand. "What about tomorrow?" she exclaimed, turning back a page. "Why not tomorrow? I knew I saw a blank space."

"Tomorrow! Oh, I—I"— He stopped.

"Jack!" Her voice dropped. It was true that she desired Chilcote's opinion on her adventure, for Chilcote's opinion on men and manners had a certain bitter shrewdness, but the exercise of her own power added a point to the desire. If the matter had ended with the gain or loss of a tete-a-tete with him, it is probable that, whatever its utility, she would not have pressed it, but the underlying motive was the stronger. Chilcote had been a satellite for years, and it was unpleasant that any satellite should drop away into space.

"Jack!" she said again in a lower and still more effective tone, and, lifting her muff, she buried her face in her flowers. "I suppose I shall have to dine and go to a music hall with Leonard—or stay at home by myself," she murmured, looking out across the trees.

Again Chilcote glanced over the long, tan strewn ride. They had made the full circuit of the park.

"It's tiresome being by oneself," she murmured.

For awhile he was irresponsive; then slowly his eyes returned to her face. He watched her for a second, and, leaning quickly toward her, he took his book and scribbled something in the vacant space.

"Dear Jack!" she said. "How very sweet of you!" Then, as he held the book toward her, her face fell. "Dine 33 Cadogan gardens, 8 o'c.; talk with L.," she read. "Why, you've forgotten the essential thing!"

Dangerous and Painful Operation Avoided by Taking "Fruit-a-tives."

Guelph, Ont., Aug. 6, 1908.

I suffered for many months with dreadful Stomach Trouble, with vomiting and constant pain, and I could retain practically nothing.

My doctor stated that I must go to the hospital and undergo an operation of scraping the stomach and be fed by the bowels for weeks. All the medicine the doctor gave me I vomited at once. I was dreadfully alarmed, but I dreaded an operation and had refused.

I had heard of "Fruit-a-tives" and the great success they were having in all Stomach Troubles, and I decided to try them. To my surprise, the "Fruit-a-tives" not only remained on the stomach, but they also checked the vomiting. I immediately began to improve, and in three days the pain was easier and I was decidedly better. I continued to take "Fruit-a-tives" and they completely cured me.

KELSEY
Zig-Zag Heat Tubes

Make the KELSEY WARM AIR GENERATOR the most powerful apparatus.

¶ The "Kelsey" warms fresh air by the best method; warms large volumes of air properly and forces to exposed or distant rooms; has double the weight and heating surfaces of the ordinary furnace, and utilizes all the heat to much better advantage; does not heat the cellar or waste heat up the chimney.

¶ The "Kelsey" does not warm the same air over and over like steam or hot water systems with radiators; costs less to install, and for management and repairs; and is more efficient, healthful and economical.

¶ These are a few of the reasons why the Kelsey Fresh Air System has been installed in so many of the finest class of City and Country Homes, Churches and Schools, and why it is being specified in preference to other systems.

EXCELLENT APPOINTMENT FOR PETERBOROUGH MAN

Mr. J. A. Tully Appointed General Manager for Western Canada for the Oddfellows Relief Association—Will Reside in Calgary.

Mr. J. A. Tully, who for the past four years has been travelling representative for Canada for the Oddfellows' Relief Association, has been appointed general manager of the association for the western part of the Dominion. His appointment follows a change in the policy of the association made at the annual meeting held in Kingston this week. Representatives were present from all over Canada, and it was decided to divide the Dominion into two districts, eastern and western, and to have a general manager for each. The dividing line is at Winnipeg. Mr. Tully's district lies between Winnipeg and the Pacific Coast, and comprises the provinces of Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia. His headquarters will be at Calgary, and he will have four representatives under him in each province, in addition to the local workers of each lodge.

Mr. Tully's new position, which means greater remuneration and increased prestige in the association, is a reward for the excellent work he has done. He has made four trips to the west as travelling representative of the Relief Association, and the western men were so pleased with himself and his work that when the time came for the appointment of a general manager for the western district, they insisted on having Mr. Tully. And the association was not loath to make the appointment.

Mr. Tully will leave for the west next week. He will attend the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Alberta at Edmonton on August 10th, and from there will go to Vancouver, and thence to the meeting of the Sovereign Grand Lodge of America, which opens at Seattle on September 10th. From Seattle he will return to the Canadian West by way of the Crow's Nest Pass, and will spend some time in this territory before returning to Peterborough in about four months.

Mr. Tully's departure will be regretted by the citizens of Peterborough, especially by the Oddfellows, among whom he was exceedingly popular.

THE ORIENTAL MUSHROOM GARDEN YIELDS A BIG ONE

The mushroom found in the Oriental yard this morning doesn't lay claim to the world's heavyweight championship, but it is safe to say that it is one of the largest specimens of its kind ever mined in these parts. Mr. Ralph Chambers, who is in the employ of the hotel, was gathering mushrooms in the yard this morning about eight o'clock, and among several average-sized ones he located the giant, which certainly is a Jumbo of its variety.

It is eight inches by six, root measurements, and weighs an even pound all but one ounce. The canopy of the mushroom is about the same size as a side show tent, and it resembles a mammoth fungus from the setting of a fairy play. It has a stem on it like the leg of a young calf, and is in every respect a prize growth.

To definitely settle the mushroom's silent claim to being the real thing, it was shown to Mr. W. A. Edwards, of the Crystal, who pronounced it the genuine article. Mr. Edwards has the name of being an authority on mushrooms, both in the matter of expert inspection and table consumption.

It is the intention of the Oriental chef to souply the mushroom for the Sunday dinner.

SPLENDID PROGRAMME IS ARRANGED FOR CONVENTION

Of House Painters' and Decorators' Association, Which Will be Held Here Next Week—Will be Large Number of Delegates.

In speaking of the approaching convention of the Master House-Painters and Decorators of Canada, the Painter and Decorator has the following to say:

This is the last call for the Peterborough convention. Before the next issue of the Painter and Decorator, the convention of the Canadian Association of Master House Painters and Decorators will be an event of the past.

It is up to the master painters of Canada to make the coming convention at Peterborough on July 27th, 28th and 29th the largest and most successful in the history of the Association.

This can only be done by the members taking a special interest and arranging to be present in large numbers, prepared to enter enthusiastically into the discussion, thereby making the various sessions not only lively and entertaining but likewise instructive and inspiring.

This gathering should mean much to the craft throughout the Dominion. Already the beneficial effects of these conventions have been most marked. The trade has been placed on a higher plane and general conditions have been greatly improved whereever local associations have been organized.

The Executive Committee have arranged a splendid programme, which should attract every practical opportunity and are placed in capable hands. Here is the programme:

The convention will not be tied down hard and fast to business only but many very pleasant social features are being arranged. Amongst these perhaps the most delightful will be a trip through the Kawartha Lakes, which takes place on the last day of the convention. The scenery of this district is second to none on the continent, in the world for that matter, being a continuous panorama of facinating delight.

Then in addition to all the other special features there will be the opportunity of meeting two of the fore most leaders of the painting craft of this generation, Mr. John Dewar, of Pittsburg, Pa., ex-president of the International Association, and Mr. W. E. Wall, of Boston, Mass., late secretary-treasurer of the International Association. Mr. Dewar is an able and entertaining speaker, to whom it is a pleasure to listen, while Mr. Wall is well known to every master painter who has been in attendance at the annual conventions as one of the most capable and brilliant speakers on all subjects relative to the painting profession.

ONE MONTH IN GAOL AT HARD LABOR FOR RAYMOND

Found Guilty of Having Caused Damage to House on Edinburgh St.—Admitted Taking Boards Off Shed.

One month at hard labor in the county gaol was the punishment meted out to Harry Raymond at the police court this morning, the magistrate adding that although he could sentence him to five years, it would mean if he did so that his wife and family would suffer as a consequence, and this was not his wish.

Raymond was charged with causing damage to a house on Edinburgh street during the time he occupied part of it as a tenant, and the evidence furnished proved to the magistrate's mind that he was guilty.

The agent who transacts the business in connection with the property of the owner, gave similar evidence to that furnished by him in the case in which Charles Clarke was charged with a similar offence, and fined this week. The only new statements he made were that Raymond had rented part of the house on January 14th, and left some time in March without paying the full amount of rent.

Thos. Martin, who stated in the previous case that the defendant had accomplished most of the damage to the house, was next called, but did not respond, and it was learned that he had skipped.

James Thompson said he boarded with Clarke. Defendant had taken some of the boards off the shed and used them for fuel. In regard to the other damages to the premises, he could not say who was the offender.

E. W. Wescott stated that he also boarded with Raymond, and gave evidence as the last witness.

Charles Clarke stated that both he and Raymond had taken boards off the shed, but afterwards he—Clarke—replaced them. He could not say what defendant had done with the boards.

The wife of the last witness said she saw Raymond take the boards off the shed, and one day she heard a noise in the attic, but did not know who the person was that was up there.

Raymond, in his own defence, stated that he was out of fuel at the time he first occupied the house, and as his wife was sick, thought he had a right to take the boards. The cellar joists, mentioned as being taken by him were there when he left; and he had not done any damage to the cellar. He gave Clarke fifty cents to defray the cost of the lumber used in replacing the four boards taken by him.

"Did you not say in court the other day that Wescott took the cellar joists?" asked the chief.

"No," replied the defendant, "I don't remember doing so."

"Martin said you took them," said the chief.

"I didn't," replied Raymond.

"Martin said that because of a spite he has against me for giving evidence against him at the time he was charged with stealing a watch," he continued.

The wedding of Miss Jennie Wilhelmina (Jean) Eyres and Mr. John J. Rusk was solemnized in the presence of a few relatives at high noon today at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Wm. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. H. Coon, pastor of Mark St. Methodist church, after which a dainty wedding breakfast was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Rusk left by the 1.40 train for a trip through the Thousand Islands and down the St. Lawrence. On returning they will spend a week in Peterborough before leaving for their home in Gainsboro, Saskatchewan. The bride's going-away gown was olive green broadcloth with hat to match.

The bride, although having been residing in the west for a number of years, is well known in this city, and her many friends will join in extending hearty congratulations.

RURAL MAIL DELIVERY

Ennismore has got the plum. Rural mail and parcel delivery has been established between Peterborough and Ennismore, and if the Smithtown farmers along the route behave themselves and don't "act ugly," they will be attended to as the mail flies by. This magnificent fulfilment of pre-election pledges to Peterborough county is about what was expected.

In keeping with this display of enlightenment and enterprise it is possible that a boom will be run across Bald Lake for the people of North Harvey to get across to Bobcaygeon on. A bridge had been promised them.

The profit on the mail-boxes at the farmers' gates will no doubt pay the extra cost of the Ennismore daily service for one year, and if after that it doesn't "pay," it will no doubt be discontinued. We may be sure of that. Where it is not established until the farmers demand it, it will be discontinued unless the demand continues, and possibly even then. If Warsaw people look alive they may be placed on a level with Ennismore. This is the era of expansion, of borrowing money by the million, but not for the Ontario farmer. Farms near Moosejaw bring as much as farms in Smith.

The enormous "development" of finding out places where subsidized railways with political favourites in them can run in the west, continues from day to day. The Ontario farmer may take unto himself the wings of the morning, and go to the west, but if he doesn't he will remain at home to listen to the sinking sound as the value of his farm goes down. But then we must be just. Rural Mail and Parcel Delivery has been inaugurated between Peterborough and Bridge—no, Ennismore. Such is the progress of this gigantic age! It is only fair that there should be a banquet over this. Soup and soft sawder, praises and plaster, booming and beer go wonderfully well together. How well it would look to have the farmers of North Monaghan raising high their glasses in ecstatic admiration of the "man who did," and then the usual "friends" from town could be on hand also. Pledges must be fulfilled, even if only pledges in beer. But thirteen is an unlucky number, and the thirteen farmers in Smith who, if they "buy their boxes from the government at $3.00 apiece," are to have the service will have to take care lest they get left.

Why should the farmers be compelled to buy $3.00 letter-boxes from the Laurier Government? What business has the government to say what a man shall receive his letters in? But then the rake-off may pay for the service, we must not forget that. The Review has been crying out for a fulfilment of a promise, but when we asked for bread we did not mean a brick.

OBITUARY

JOHN JAMES RUSSELL.

The subject of this brief sketch was born in Peterborough on August 30th, 1864, being the eldest son of Mr. Wm. Russell.

He was united in marriage to Miss Thirza Ward, daughter of the late George Ward, the ceremony taking place at Peterborough, on March 9th, 1887. They resided in Millbrook almost continuously since their marriage.

His death took place on July 10th, after a short but very painful illness, cancer of the liver being the cause.

Besides his wife, one son, Fred, survives him, while three children predeceased him. His mother also passed to the great beyond some years ago.

Deceased was a staunch Conservative, a member of the Home Circle and Orange Order. He was most highly respected by a large circle of friends, and his untimely demise is mourned by the whole community.

His father, three brothers, Harry, of Cobourg; Robert, of Bethany; Levi, of Millbrook, and four sisters, Mrs. Henderson, of Pontypool; Mrs. J. Ward, of Carmel; Mrs. D. Fisher, and Mrs. Ed. McCorry, of Millbrook, also survive him.

The funeral on the morning of the twelfth inst. was very largely attended, the brethren of L.O.L. No 79, attending in a body.

The services at the house were conducted by Rev. Wm. Johnston, and at St. Thomas' church, and the grave by Rev. Messrs. Fennel and Rickard. The remains were interred in the 9th Line cemetery.—Millbrook Mirror.

ADIN VICTOR WATERMAN.

The death occurred last night of Adin Victor Waterman, aged five years and four months, son of Mr. Mrs. Edward G. Waterman. Deceased had been ailing for some time from an attack of pneumonia. He was a particular bright young lad, the friends and acquaintances of his parents will sympathise with them in their bereavement.

The remains were taken to Campbellford at noon and interment will take place there.

ONTARIO BANK LOT

The plan of the lots to be sold on the ground on Saturday, July 24th, is planned on the Lock street frontage. The plan is about 6 feet square and clearly shows the lots. There is also a big plan in the window of Mr. Might, the land broker. Mr. Might will be in his office at night from 8 to 9 p.m., to meet intending purchasers. The house and barn will be sold at the auction and promptly removed.

Arthur Savage was seriously injured at the locomotive works, Kingston. His arm was caught in a drill and broken.

PETERBOROUGH MENTIONED IN NEW HOCKEY LEAGUE

Brockville, July 23. — Negotiations are in progress between promoters of hockey in Belleville and Brockville to organize an independent league, comprising teams from Peterborough, Brockville, Belleville, Kingston, Port Hope and Picton. The idea would be to make an eastern and western section, Belleville, Kingston and Brockville comprising one and the remaining clubs the other. The league would have no connection whatever with the O.H.A.

The above proposition ought to appeal favorably to local promoters of the winter sport. Port Hope, Picton and Peterborough would make a good district, and the travelling expenses of the clubs would not be large. It is a well known fact that a strong league and a good team has always been supported in this city, and although the interest has lessened considerably during the past couple of seasons, a move in the right direction would resurrect the sport again to the high mark reached when this city were represented by one of the fastest sevens in the province.

LINES ON SPORT

Things are breaking badly for the Forest team for which Dick Gray is pitching, says the Lindsay Warder, but it is not Gray's fault. From a Forest newspaper, the Free Press, it is learned that the local twirler is more than doing his share.

The Free Press does not give a very lucid account of the game beyond mentioning that the Forest team "has been up against it pretty hard." However the summarized score states that Gray struck out seventeen men in a game with Port Huron, in which Forest was defeated 8—3, allowed three passes, and hit one man. Eight hits, however, were made off his delivery, and Forest made six errors. In one game against Arkona the Forest fielders managed to accumulate 14 errors, which would lose a game if Matthewson were to pitch for them. Gray struck out nine men in this game. In the afternoon game with Arkona Gray fanned fourteen of the enemy, but still his team lost. Thus forty men were struck out in three games, which is going at a lively clip for a pitcher.

The Peterborough Bowling Club Alleys will open on Monday for the season. They have been put in fine shape, and the trundling game should flourish here once more.

The annual games for the Howden trophy will be held on Labor Day. Pretty near time the athlets should commence to get in shape.

Gunner Moir was knocked out in the second round of what was to have been a twenty-round contest last night by Young Johnson, of America. The fight took place in Southern Wales.

Krause got his yesterday at the hands of Chicago, when he was forced to retire from the rubber in the first, after the White Sox had secured three runs. Philadelphia was shut out, 3—0.

Dr. Burton and Scott, of Barrie will oppose Yeb Flaherty and Cinnamon in the game to-day.

Summers, of Detroit, has pitched 27 innings without allowing a single run.

John L. Sullivan says that Jeffries will never be able to fight again and that cigarettes are responsible.

"Please, sir," said the office boy to his employer, "I want to get off to-day to go to my grandmother's funeral."

"I think you had better stay here," said the hard-hearted boss. "They won't miss you. The last time she was buried there were 30,000 people at the funeral."

FLAHERTY AND CINNAMON HAVE GONE TO COBALT

Says the Lindsay Warder:—

"Yebbie" Flaherty dropped into town to-day from Peterborough and will go to Haileybury with Bill Cinnamon to pitch for that town in a game to-morrow. Flaherty claims he is in tip top condition and says his arm is as strong and effective as ever it was. Several years ago "Yebbie" was one of the best amateur twirlers in the province and was famed for his speed and the cunning of the curves he could attach to a pitched ball. Then he went to Galt and strained the muscles of his arm pitching a game for the Galt Canadian League team against a nine from Toronto.

However, if "Yebbie" has even a shade of his old time form on hand he should furnish a nice line of goods for Haileybury to-morrow.

Haileybury wired for the local battery, Cinnamon and Gray, at first, but Gray is in Forest and Bill hunted up an old Midland league score book and cogitated for a half hour over the records of the pitchers. He thought of Burton, the Barrie youngster, who is winning games and fame in their northern wildernesses, but the Barrie boy is pitching for Cobalt. Then "Cim," wired for Flaherty and "Yebbie" jumped at the offer.

"Just watch us two to-morrow," says Wm. G.

HARRIERS WILL HOLD A MEET

Victoria Harriers Will Run off List of Events on Civic Holiday

The Victoria Harrier Club will hold a meet here on Civic Holiday, when a big programme of events will be run off. The place where the meet will be held has not been decided upon, but will be announced early next week.

BASEBALL MATCH WILL BE FEATURE

Of the Printers' Picnic to be Held at Idyl Wyld on Civic Holiday

The committee in charge of the Printers' picnic to be held at Idyl Wyld on civic holiday, August 9th, promise a delightful outing. There will be an interesting programme of sports, one of the features of which will be the annual baseball match between the Review and Examiner. Both teams will be worse than ever this year, so the contest should be pretty nearly as bad as the jokes that once appeared in the "Swing of the Hammer" Column.

The steamer Otonabee has been chartered to carry the excursionists.

Drummers Day.

Drummers' Day at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, promises a number of more than usually interesting features. Principal among them will be a five-mile Marathon, open to duly qualified drummers, and a demonstration of indoor fire-escapes, for which a prize of $100 is offered by the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada.

W. J. White, Dominion Immigration Inspector in the U.S., predicts an influx of 75,000 American immigrants into Canada this year.

PROMINENT PETERBORO MAN IN BIG STRIKE ON GILLIES LT.

The World to-day contains a full account of the recent phenomenal strike of silver on the Gillies limit. It will be remembered that much of this limit was sold at public auction to the highest bidders on two occasions recently. Mr. Waldman, of Montreal; Mr. James Kendrey, of Peterborough, and a prominent Toronto man went in together and bought 92 acres in several parcels. They decided on immediate development, and Mr. Waldman installed a large force of men. The strike is an uncovered vein of large size and great richness. It is said to be one of the great finds of the whole Cobalt district. As the sum paid for the lands were comparatively trifling, the profit promises to be large.

WINDSTORM DEMOLISHED BUILDINGS IN DUMMER

The township of Dummer was swept by a severe windstorm on Thursday of last week and considerable damage was done. The heaviest loser was Mr. Wm. Clydesdale, who lives east of Cottesloe. The wind tore the roof off a large new barn and almost completely demolished the driving shed and henhouse, which were under the same roof. The building was sixty feet long and only twelve feet of it was left standing. A large part of Mr. Clydesdale's farm machinery was in the driving shed and it was badly broken. The loss all told will be over a thousand dollars.

SHIPMENT OF FORD CARS ARRIVED THIS MORNING

The local agents of the Ford automobiles, Messrs. Drummond and Duffus, received a shipment of three cars this morning from Walkerville, Ontario, where the Canadian factory is in operation. The machines were ordered by Dr. Halliday, T. A. Finlay and A. L. F. Hall, and is an evidence of the popularity of this car. Mr. Fox, manager of the Toronto branch and general salesman for centre and eastern Ontario, came down for the day, and is renewing acquaintances. It was intended that the new purchasers and their friends should enjoy a spin around the country and return in time for luncheon, but the wet weather prevented this programme being carried out.

The 1909 model T. Ford car is claimed to be the equal of any car at twice the price. A feature of its mechanism is that storage battery or dry cells are used as the electricity is generated by fly wheels. The sales for this season show an increase over last year of 27 per cent., and the Canadian factory is kept busy turning out enough machines to meet the demands.

Those in the district owning Ford cars of 1909 model are: Messrs. H. E. Sherin, A. T. Butcher, J. A. McConnell, Dr. Halliday, A. L. F. Hall, Drummond & Duffus, A. O. Mulholland, and T. A. Finlay.

FELL OFF LOAD OF SHINGLES WHEELS PASSED OVER CHEST

Mr. Larry Kelly, of Indian River, was severely injured near Warsaw this morning. Mr. Kelly, is in the employ of Mr. Andrew Shearer, of Indian River, when he fell off the waggon and the wheels passed over his chest.

He was removed to the home of Mr. Richard Tedford and medical assistance was summoned. The Review learned of the accident just before going to press, and it was at too late an hour to obtain full particulars of it or ascertain to what extent the injured man was hurt.

MOUNT JULIAN POPULAR RESORT

Delightful View From the Mountain—Those Who are There

Special to the Review.

Mount Julian, July 23.—Mt. Julian is second to none among the present summer resorts for beauty, popularity and convenience, and has besides the added distinction of being the first of the number on Stoney Lake.

The name Mount Julian was given to the beautiful mountain lying to the west, and has since been applied to the summer resort, and then to the post office. The view from the mountain of the lake and island cannot be equalled or surpassed on the Kawartha Lakes, and when on the steamer coming in one cannot but admire the beauty of the gentle landscape. Amongst the conveniences of Mt. Julian are the telephone connection and its regular boat service, as the daily mail makes it imperative for steamers to call, while all tourist supplies can be obtained at its general store. The present hotel was built in 1871 by the late Oliver Church, for Mr. A. Bertrand, and an addition made to it by Mr. Chas. Armstrong in 1899, followed by cottages erected by the present owner, Mr. Wm. Thompson, in 1903.

The season in June this year began well as a great number of guests were entertained, and since the first of July the following are among the number who have registered:—Mr. W. Lapp, W. E. Blake, Fred P. Maddox, E. McKay, J. J. Wallace, P. H. Armstrong, A. McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. McGill, and Miss Brice, all of Toronto; J. C. Oatway, F. C. Pierce, G. Van Howson, of Rochester; N. A. Black, of Pittsburg; Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Jolly, of Chicago; E. Manthriner, J. Blake, F. Carter, Harold Grundy, John Grundy, of New York; Mr. Dean, Lindsay; Mrs. Giles Stone and Miss Frances Stone, of Peterborough.

ALMOST FREE RIDE FOR A FRUIT SELLER

The Italian fruit seller came very nearly getting a free ride to Peterborough this morning on the steamer Otonabee. He was delivering fruit to the boat, and while he was on board with his last bunch of bananas the boat slipped her moorings and started off. Fortunately the craft had to turn around and the fruit man excitedly explained his position to the engineer on board, who backed the boat up enough to let the fruit seller off. Needless to say, the banana man was glad when he reached the wharf.—Lindsay Post.

NOTES OF THE DAY

An Order-in-Council has been issued for Ottawa, warning the chief spending departments in the government to limit their expenditures to the sums in appropriation.

Rev. Mr. Croushore, proprietor of the Clarence street soap works, Brantford, was fined $200 and ordered to discontinue business pending the works in the residential part of the city without a license.

THE NOVEMBER WEATHER NOT APPRECIATED

The weather man is being admonished to-day to cut out the November stuff he is handing out in the atmospherical line. There is a little too much of the rain to be agreeable the cold wind makes it very unpleasant.

The farmers say the rain is not doing the country any harm and are wearing broad smiles.

Albert Beaudry, 24 years of age, was sentenced at Montreal to one year in prison for obtaining $4 by false pretence.

ALDERMAN PHELAN GIVES FULL EXPLANATION OF 3 BY-LAWS

The Smith Street Bridge, Street Extension and Filliug in of Water Front—Will be Voted on by Property Owners on Thursday, July 29th.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly give me space to make some explanations regarding the by-laws to be voted upon on Thursday next, as we wish the ratepayers to understand the matters submitted to them as fully as possible, so that in voting they may have full information and exercise their judgment in voting.

THE SMITH STREET BRIDGE.

The by-law to provide for building a new bridge over the river at Smith St. authorizes the borrowing of $32,500 for that purpose. The ratepayers, I think, all understand the location of the bridge, and the need for it, to provide for the traffic to and from the north-east part of the city and to and from the part of the country which lies in that direction. The present wooden bridge cannot be longer used, as it has been repaired time and again to make it last as long as it has.

The bridge now proposed will be of reinforced concrete with 18 feet roadway and sidewalks. The Board of Works also had a plan prepared for a bridge with steel superstructure, and prices for the steel were obtained, when it was found that the steel bridge would cost within $2,500 as much as the concrete bridge. It is believed that the concrete bridge is preferable because; —. The cost of maintenance will be practically nothing, while the exposed steel work would require painting at least once in two years at a cost of $400 to $450, and frequent adjustment of rods owing to the variation in temperature. 2. At least 82 per cent. of the cost of the concrete bridge will be distributed in the city and vicinity in wages and material and give employment to a large number of men, whereas in the case of the steel design only 47 per cent. of the cost would be distributed here and a proportionately smaller bumber of men employed, and 3, the vicinity of the bridge, for which nature has done so much, is worthy of some consideration, and also the fact that there is a public park on each side of the river, and the concrete bridge will present a much more pleasing appearance than the other.

The difference in the cost of the bridge now proposed and the one contemplated in January last is largely made up of a narrowing of the roadway and to the contract entered into for supply of cement for this season being at the most favorable price ever obtained here.

The Council has not only the opinion of the City Engineer regarding the bridge, but also that of Mr. W. J. Francis, now of Montreal. You have published Mr. Francis' report on the plans, in which he says they "'will provide a reinforced concrete structure eminently well suited for the site and first-class in every respect. The structure will be permanent in character and will require practically no maintenance. It will be economical in first cost. The general management and appearance will be pleasing.'" Mr. Francis also says that there is no question as to the strength of the bridge and that as compared with the steel under our conditions the reinforced concrete arches are preferable.

With the opinion of Mr. Hay, who designed the bridge, and that of Mr. Francis, it does not appear that any mistake will be made in authorizing the construction of the bridge.

THE STREET EXTENSION.

This matter goes back several years. The Council several years ago decided that there were several places where that there were several places where in the interests of the city streets should be opened. One was the continuation of George street from Wescott street to Lansdowne avenue, at the Exhibition grounds, and widening it between Lake and Wescott streets, and another the opening of Aylmer st. from Lake street to the King Edward school, south of Romaine street. Hunter street was extended to the lift lock, a spot visited in hundreds by excursionists and citizens, and a short street was opened opposite Barnardo avenue between George and Water streets, making a break in the very long block extending from Smith street to Argyle street and which was needed especially on account of the large school on Barnardo avenue. George street was also extended at the north end. It was opened north of Argyle street, but there was a "blind end," and land was purchased to open it to Hilliard street, thus extending it to the city's property, the Hilliard farm. A small expenditure of $100 was also incurred to extend Bethune street to Aberdeen Avenue. A by-law was submitted which authorized the borrowing of $6,0000 for street extensions, but largely owing to the increase in the value of property which took place and to the cost of grading Hunter street to the lift lock this amount was greatly exceeded. The cost of opening George street south was $4,991.43; Aylmer street, $11,704.82; George street north, $926.28; Hunter street and the lift lock, $2,920.40, which with Barnardo Avenue and Bethune street and interest, etc., made the total $22,685.31. Then $2,310 was received for the sale of some of the land, and $74.36 for earth sold, leaving net $20,300.95 and taking out the $6,000, which was provided, leaves a balance to be provided for of $14,3000 95.

While the city opened Aylmer street from Lake street to the school, property owners in laying out lots opened it through Park Lots one and two. There is still about 220 feet through which it is not opened, and which is needed to give a through street to the boundary, which the council believes should be done. It is also desirable that Benson Avenue, leading to the Normal School, and over which many visitors will go, should be made the regular width, and land for this can be obtained for $500. An amount of $1,200 is placed in the by-laws for these purposes.

FILLING IN WATER FRONT.

Several years ago the city procured from the Ontario Government the water front for a small sum. In 1906 the Dominion Government arranged to do dredging in the river, and arrangements were made with the Government to deliver the material across the Canadian Pacific railway tracks to fill up the city's property. This cost the city nothing, but the material had to be conveyed to the city property and placed upon it. The Council thought that this was an opportunity to get cheap land, which the ratepayers would not want them to miss, but a by-law was not submitted for for two reasons, action had to be taken at once, and no estimate could be formed of the quantity of material that would be dredged and delivered the city, and consequently of what it would cost to spread it. In 1906 $1,508.88 was extended in making this land; in 1907 $2,116.94, in 1908 $533.30 and in 1909 $813.05 making a total of $4,972.17. In the by-law provision is made for borrowing $6,000 for this purpose, so that if the Government does further dredging a further sum may be expended. This is needed because it would be advisable to complete the filling at least as far as King street, to have this large block of land, and to get rid of the water lying there now.

Upon giving consideration to the matters dealt with in the by-laws it would appear that it would be decidedly in the interest of the city that they should be carried.

Yours very truly,
HARRY PHELAN,
Chairman,
Board of Works.

HOW THE GYPSIES WHO WERE HERE SECURED THE WEALTH THEY POSSESS

Where do the gypsies get their wealth?

One often hears this question in Peterborough and it has been hard to secure a satisfactory answer. Those interested will find the desired information in the following despatch from Ottawa;

With shining gold pieces dangling as ornaments from their necks, yellow coins galore to meet the most extravagant demands for bail and enough paper money to rent cabs, hire lawyers and get other things equally expensive, impecunious people of Ottawa and Hull marvel where these gypsies who recently came among them became possessed of all the wealth.

By horse trading? Impossible. It would take years and years to accumulate the riches. By telling fortunes? Absurd. By selling rude copper ware? More absurd.

The only solution is to accept the explanation they offer. Take the Hull band who have over $50,000.

About six years ago these gypsies left Mexico where their home was originally and travelled up along the western slope of the Rocky Mountains. After leaving their land of birth they camped for a year in the foothills of the Rockies where these smoke begrimed filthy creatures seen walking in the streets of Ottawa ran a stock ranch. Not satisfied with this mode of life, they sold their horses and stock packed their tents and piling their urchins into their covered waggons began their march in the direction of Canada.

On their journey to no where they came to California where the whole tribe took contract for a season to harvest the crop on a fruit farm. This was the beginning of their horde of wealth.

CAME TO GOLD.

Travelling farther into the mountains they came to the gold region of California. Here they camped for two years and a half, roaming over the foothills working a mine until it played out then moving to another. They never bothered to stake out a claim. If a white stepped in and "pinched" the mine, the gypsies without a word would fold their tents, harness their horses and move to another one.

During these two years and a half, a reporter was told by a member of the Hull tribe, the band was very successful and struck some very heavy lodes. They lived very cheaply, as a loaf of bread and a mouthful of water is the general meal of an average gypsy, except when he dines at a restaurant. Then he takes anything and everything he can beg.

Their travelling expenses were nil, and success followed them everywhere they went.

It is out of the question for a gypsy to stay in one place any length of time so he keeps on the move travelling a day and resting a day and near a section, camping for a week or so.

In this way they reached Canada. Some of the tribe had been in this country before and telling the others of it thrilled the warm hearts of the otherwise ill-bred creatures and they all decided to have a look at Canada.

NOT MORE THAN A WEEK.

Since reaching Canada they have not camped longer than a week or so in any one place.

While travelling through the more thickly populated districts the gypsies make a fair living out of the manufacture of copper ware. The gypsy children search along the route of march for thrown away copper and iron. This old copper the skilled male members of the tribe put in big fires and burn all the dirt off. While hot they hammer it in a big thick sheet, which makes it more compact and therefore easier to carry, and easier, also to work.

When the coppersmith of the camp wishes to commence work he heats one of these plates of copper and commences to hammer it on a piece of iron made for the purpose. Continual hammering for about two hours beats the copper into the required shape, but a whole day and sometimes longer is required to finish and polish the work. These copper vessels which a gypsy copper-smith can sometimes finish to be really beautiful, generally bring a good price on account of their origin. Then, too, the gypsy repairs old vessels and sells them again. In this way trough continually spending, they are always adding, so that their pile lasts a long time.

The leader of the band said that they had changed all their currency into gold so that no matter in what country they travelled, they would always have money that would be accepted. The gypsy cannot, however, bring himself to depend on paper money. He thinks gold is the surer.

FLIES ACROSS THE CHANNEL AND WINS DAILY MAIL PRIZE

French Aviator Steals a March on His Competitors—M. Bleriot Rises Early in Morning and Crosses From Calais to Dover in Thirty Minutes.

Dover, July 26.—This sleepy old seaport town experienced the keenest thrill known in a generation when a white-winged, bird-like machine with loudly humming motor swept out from the haze obscuring the sea toward the distant French coast, and, circling twice above the high chalky cliffs, a portly and red-moustached man of 37 descended from the saddle, limping on a bandaged foot, which had been burned on his previous overland flight. Immediately two compatriots, who had been waving a big tri-color flag as a signal for the landing place, fell upon him enthusiastically, embracing him, shouting and pounding him on the back. They, with a few soldiers and others who happened by chance to be on the scene, were the only persons to witness the finish of a most remarkable feat. It was M. Bleriot, the first aviator, to cross the English Channel.

Bleriot left Les Baraques, three miles from Calais, about 4.30 a.m. On one of the smallest monoplanes ever used he crossed the channel in a little less than half an hour, twice as swiftly as the fastest sailboat. His speed average more than forty miles an hour, sometimes it approached 60 miles. He kept about 250 feet above the sea level for ten minutes, while about mid-channel, was out of sight of both coasts and the French torpedo-boat destroyers, which followed him, with his wife and friends aboard.

The wind was blowing about twenty miles an hour and the sea was choppy. The aviator was swathed in a single garment of drilling, impervious to the wind, only his face showing. He wore also a cork lifebelt.

By his achievement yesterday Bleriot won the prize of $500 offered by The London Daily Mail for the first flight across the English Channel, and stole a march on his rivals, Hubert Latham and Count de Lambert, both of whom had hoped to make the attempt yesterday.

"I arose at 3 o'clock," he said, "and went to the aeroplane shed. Finding everything in order on the trial spin, I decided to make the flight. The French torpedo-boat destroyer, which was in attendance, was signalled and it put out about four miles. Then I rose in the air and pointed directly to Dover. After ten minutes I was out of sight of land and had left the warship well behind. For a few minutes I could not see either coast nor any boat, I tried to keep at an average height of 250 feet. I might easily have gone higher, but it would have served no purpose. This was about the right height, I thought, to clear the Dover cliffs safely.

"The machine dipped toward the water several times. I put on more petrol once. I estimate that the propellers were going from 1,200 to 1,400 revolutions a minute. The first objects I saw were ships off the English coast; then I observed DeDal and I discovered that the wind, which was southwest, was carrying me thither. I veered to the southward to Dover Castle, and then saw friends flourishing a flag in a valley suitable for landing. I made two circles while lessening the speed, and then dived down, but I came in contact with the ground sooner than I expected. Both the machine and myself were badly shaken.

"A few persons quickly assembled and I was helped out as my injured foot was painful. I am exceedingly glad to be here."

The sailors on the ships in the harbor were the first to discover that Bleriot was approaching. They heard the buzzing of the motor two or three minutes before they could discern the aeroplane. Then what looked like a big white butterfly glided over their heads, as fast as a train of cars and with almost as much noise. It reached the cliff near the grey turrets of Dover Castle, swooped around twice in broad curves and disappeared.

Bleriot is one of the oldest and most popular aviators in France and is the winner of the Osiris prize of $100,000 in conjunction with Gabriel Versin, the aeroplane manufacturer, for their contributions to the progress of aviation. Only Saturday he was decorated with the legion of honor. He is a graduate of the celebrated technical school of France. He became interested in the problem of aviation in 1900.

M. Bleriot returned last evening to Calais aboard the destroyer. He was met by a cheering crowd and escorted to his hotel, where many speeches of congratulation were made by the vice-mayor, M. Berquet, and President Homon of the auto club of Calais. M. Bleriot in response said: "All I can say is that I am radiantly happy at my success."

Spaniards Lose Heavily.

Madrid, July 26.—The general staff Saturday published its report of the casualties in Friday's fighting in front of Melilla. It shows that the Spaniards lost heavily. A colonel and five other officers were killed and a colonel and twelve other officers wounded. The report says 260 soldiers were wounded, but the number of soldiers killed is withheld on the ground that the reports are incomplete.

PICHE SAID TO HAVE CONFESSED

Special to the Review.

Toronto, July 26—It is understood that the arrest of A. McKelvie, at Cobalt, as being concerned in the alleged bribery of John Piche, in the Attorney-General's and Hudson Bay Mining Company, is the direct result of Piche's confession to officers of the Department. When Piche was arrested, after two years' chase, charged with leaving the country to avoid giving evidence for a $25,000 bribe, he was only in custody here two days when he was allowed out on $4,000 bail. It is believed that he told the crown all that happened, and that he knows of an order to protect himself.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

MARRIAGE IMPOSSIBLE

King Edward Frowns on Anglo-Portuguese Match

London, July 26.—A story that became public about a prospective betrothal between Princess Alexandra of Fife and King Manuel of Portugal was something more than mere rumor.

But the idea was very severely discountenanced in court circles. The main difficulty was that the princess would have to enter the Roman Catholic Church, and for all English princess who are what dynastic jurists have called ebenburtig—of unblemished royal blood—that is an unsurmountable obstacle.

King Edward is known to attach great importance to this consideration. The precedent of Queen Victoria of Spain seems at first sight to tell against this argument, but, as a matter of fact, the Battenburgs are not held to the ebenburtig in a strict sense, owing to the morgantic origin of their father. It is the same with the Tecks. Whether, strictly speaking, Princess Alexandra of Fife is ebenburtig may be open to question, for her father does not enjoy that privilege here.

However, the view of the King prevails over the subtlies of jurists. Princess Alexandra is his eldest granddaughter and that suffices for him.

FORTY BUSHELS AN ACRE IN WEST

Winnipeg, July 26.—The Grand Trunk Pacific crop report from Winnipeg to Wainwright, a distance of 660 miles, shows that the grain is in splendid condition. The damage by hail has been very slight.

He leaves a widow and one boy, who was with his father at the time of the accident.

THE BY-LAWS.

To Be Voted on Thursday, July 29th.

Why You Should Vote For the Smith Street Bridge By-law.

1. BECAUSE the old bridge is "Condemned".
2. BECAUSE the northern part of the city cannot exist without this means of communication.
3. BECAUSE the loss in assessable values in one year would pay for the new bridge.
4. BECAUSE the proposed concrete bridge is just as cheap to build and far less expensive thereafter than any other sort of bridge. All but the cement is "Local Industry".

Why You Should Vote For the Street Extension and Filling-in By-law.

1. BECAUSE the money for street extension had to be spent and has been spent. Do you want it on the debenture rate or on next year's rate? If on the debenture rate, vote for the By-law.

Why Vote for the Filling-in?

1. BECAUSE this large strip of land along the C.P.R. spur is worth $20,000.00 to Peterborough. We get it for ten thousand. It will be the future market-place for the wives of our workers. The present market property is too valuable for merely market purposes.

AN ITALIAN DISCOVERED NEW YORK

New York, July 26.—On the strength of their claim that Giovanni de Varrazzano sailed through the Narrows and landed a boatload of men on Manhattan Island in 1524, Italian and French citizens of the United States have secured the incorporation of a Franco-Italian celebration in the Hudson-Fulton proceedings here next September.

Varrazzano was an Italian navigator in the employ of the French Government, and inasmuch as Hudson admittedly did not enter the river which now bears his name until 1609, the Latin-Americans who are pushing Varrazzano's claims convinced the Hudson-Fulton committee that the very least that could be done in justice was to grant them a place in the coming celebration for a glorification of Varrazzano on their own account.

DIAMOND RINGS ARE RECOVERED

Ottawa, July 26.—Hidden in the bathroom of the Ottawa House in Renfrew, Detectives Culver and O'Meara of the local police department Saturday afternoon discovered the missing McMillan diamonds.

The rings, ninety-four in number, were concealed in the woodwork of an old-fashioned boxed-in- bath. The thieves had strung the rings on a length of tape. They removed one of the wood panels and pinned the tape on the underside of the wooden strip running around the edge of the bath.

On Friday afternoon, the prisoners, Woods and Conrad, to the chief and Detective Culver voluntarily confessed that they were the guilty parties and declared that on Saturday they would reveal the whereabouts of the missing diamonds, and announced their willingness to accompany the police to Renfrew. In the bath-room the missing rings were revealed by Woods. Only one was missing and both Conrad and Woods are unable to account for the loss.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Gold is said to be plentiful in the Sturgeon Lake county.

The codling moth has done $1,000,000 damage to the apple crop in Pennsylvania.

Two pedestrians were caught between two street cars at a crossing in Winnipeg and killed.

The Detroit motor boat squadron visited Chatham on Saturday and was tendered a royal reception.

Six persons lost their lives when a Wabash passenger train plunged into the Missouri River near Kansas City.

An explosion occurred on the gasoline yacht Caprice at Kingston, and two men working on it narrowly escaped with their lives.

Canadian delegates to the International Nurses' Conference laid a wreath on the tomb of Queen Victoria at Frogmore on Saturday.

THE DEATH LIST GROWS

New Orleans, July 26.—With definite reports yesterday of thirteen additional deaths as the result of the hurricane in Texas and Louisiana on Wednesday, the death list last night totals 41. Also six previously reported are still unaccounted for.

Despatches yesterday from Angleton, Texas, confirmed the report that Maurice P. Wolfe, his wife, six children and negro servant had been drowned at Christmas Bayou.

While the various towns and cities which suffered damage in the hurricane have reported property losses aggregating in the latest reports over $2,000,000, the absence of crop damage makes impossible anything like a correct measure to the total damage.

CHURCHILL RAISES ROW

"Boy Stateman's" Statement Gets Party Into Trouble

London, July 26.—The budget is proving a far more difficult legislative nut to crack than the American tariff bill.

The measure has been hung up for a fortnight while the Government revises its entire program. Its dilemma is very awkward. It is now an open secret that the House of Lords will reject the land tax proposals if they are sent to it. Many believe that the Cabinet will postpone this scheme until next year and pass the bill without its most contentious features. This, however, would involve a revolt in the Radical end of the Liberal party.

A disgraceful episode last week was the outcome of one of the fire-brand speeches of Winston Churchill, President of the Board of Trade. He declared that if the House of Lords altered the budget in any form the Government would immediately appeal to the country. This utterance by a Cabinet Minister, although intended as a threat, was widely welcomed by the Opposition and the country at large. A question was asked in the House of Commons if the declaration was official. Prime Minister Asquith replied, quoting Mr. Churchill as denying having made such a statement and adding that his words were only a platitudinous affirmation that the country would have to decide the issue if such a constitutional question was raised.

Mr. Churchill's denial is wholly untrue. His 2,000 auditors and a corps of reporters who recorded his words all know that he was correctly reported. Now it is said that Prime Minister Asquith and a majority of the Cabinet are so disgusted by this latest indiscretion of the enfant terrible in politics that his retirement will soon be announced.

DROME FLIGHT AT PETAWAWA

Petawawa, July 26.—Everything is ready at Petawawa Camp for the initial flight of Douglas McCurdy's aerodrome, "Silver Dart," which is scheduled to take place to-day. Rain interfered with the intended test on Saturday and a delay in arrangements will not permit the trials until late in the week.

It is understood that the Militia Department is keeping in close touch with Mr. Baldwin and several officials including Major Maunsell, Dominion director of engineering services, will arrive to witness the first flight.

Douglas McCurdy, the aviator, seems to be well pleased with the ground surface here which will be favorable to the "flying start" required by the Bell 'drome. He is enthusiastic regarding the approaching tests and is hopeful that the "Silver Dart" under his guiding hand, will perform in mid-air as never-before.

KING ALFONSO IS IN DISFAVOR

Madrid, July 26 (via Bayonne).—Owing to the grave situation here, especially the revolutionary propaganda, among the troops, a strict censorship has been established over all telegrams. It is impossible to send anything direct from Madrid. The revolutionary activity has assumed astonishing proportions, characterized by fierce attacks upon King Alfonso for being subject to foreign—that is, English—influences. He has therefore cancelled his projected visit to Cowes, greatly to the disappointment of Queen Ena, who had been building on it for some time. The King's action in punishing his cousin, Don Alfonso Bourbon, for his romantic marriage with Princess Beatrice of Cobourg is actually, also, made a ground of attack.

DROWNING AT ST. CATHARINES

St. Catharines, July 26.—Ralph Gambell, an Englishman about 30 years old, employed on Capt. James Delaney's farm, lost his life while bathing in the waste weir at lock 7, new canal, yesterday morning. Gambell was unable to swim, but had secured a pair of water wings. The wings slipped from beneath his body, becoming entangled in his arms, his head immediately dropping about six inches under the water, as he was found in this way about ten minutes later by Mr. McFarland, lock tender at lock 7. McFarland endeavored to fish the unfortunate man from the water with a grappler but this pierced the inflated wings and Gambell sank, but was soon taken out.

FOURTH WEEK OF COAL STRIKE

Glace Bay, N.S., July 26.—The third week of the great strike has passed and yet public opinion is divided as to results.

Friday and Saturday shipments were reported at 10,000 tons. Out of this 5,600 tons came from the banks.

A large number of men have been brought in from outside. Every department is working hard and coal is being mined and rushed to the shipping pier.

So far no strikers of any consequence have returned to work. A large part of the foreign element have gone away to railway construction.

FRENCH--CANADIAN ARROGANCE

The French-Canadian question has been assuming a more acute phase from day to day. The case reported in another column of the arrest of an English lady and of her trial and commitment wholly in French, is a little too much for British blood to stand. It is not necessary to ask what would have been said if such a trial had occurred in Ontario without an interpreter. The whole thing smacks of the wilds of Siberia. The scene was not improved when the prisoner's two children clung to her skirts in frantic grief, as she was being removed from the dock. She is a Socialist, it seems, and undertook to preach in the streets. She was arrested and tried in French-Canadian. She is to be examined as to her sanity. She will likely be examined in French-Canadian, also, which would be just as consistent, if not more reasonable, than the trial. If this country of Canada is to have its national laws administered in French to "foreigners" from other parts of the King's Dominions, then we must either protest and insist on a change or learn French, and trust to our conquerors. Whatever other parts of Canada are British, Quebec is not, that is sure, for it even repudiates the fundamental requirements of British justice, viz., that a prisoner shall know the charge brought against him, and that he shall have every possible assistance in his defence. The man who suggested that more than one language should be "official" in Canada, was a confusionist, if not worse. What might be suggested as a remedy for a line of cleavage that is both distinct and dangerous? It is a question that cannot be answered too quickly.

THE ETERNAL QUESTION

The Montreal Star bangs the Weekly Sun for hinting that the French-Canadians are not British. This is the first time that we ever heard that they were or wanted to be. They are loyal to Great Britain. Why? Just for the same reason that the Province of Ontario, which once revolted, is loyal. Because they are "let alone." But does anyone suppose that the French-Canadians wish to fuse and really be British. On the other hand, the preservation of their racial unity is their hearts' desire. The English-Canadian does the same, but to a limited extent. He wishes to maintain British predominance, but not racial supremacy. There is not an English-speaking Canadian who would not be proud to wed a French-Canadian girl. But such trust and confidence is spurned. Our compatriots want to remain French-Canadian, not simply Canadian. It may be natural, but it is the anchor of a future hope, which in long years to come, "in the fullness of time" may lead to imperial disintegration and not British imperial unity. That splendid spirit of solidarity which marks the other "colonies" is absent here. It is absent because we disagree, and we disagree because we will not fuse. Racial exclusiveness has before this wrecked many a good prospect, and it will wreck ours if the signs of the times do not change. Where politics accentuate racial differences of any brand we, of course, know that the "race" is for office, not for racial supremacy.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A day of rest for beast as well as for man is being talked of. There seems to be no justification for making any distinction.

---

She—"What paper is that you're reading, George?"

He—"The Apsley June-bug."

She—"No, it isn't, George, it's the Peterborough Examiner."

He—"Is it? I would never have known."

---

The idea that excursions to Peterborough should be met by civic officials, &c., is not a good one. Every means should be afforded visitors for enjoying themselves, but it is very provincial to seek to hamper them by unnecessary attentions. If an excursion asks to be personally conducted that is another thing.

DR. ELIOT GIVES THE PRINCIPLES

Of 20th Century Universal Religion in Lecture to Students

The following is the creed of President Dr. Elliott, of Harvard, for the Century Universal religion, upon which he lectured to the students at Harvard the other day—

Love God and serve your fellowman.

Be good, not for reward hereafter, but for the sake of clean, high, sweet living.

God knows no race or tribe.

No child comes into the world without the love of God.

There is no intermediary necessary between God and mankind. God is nearer to each human soul than any other human soul may be.

The personality of a man or woman —the habits, appearance and actions—are the index of that person's nearness to God, and the sign of that person's authority among men.

Let each soul worship God, with or without traditional ceremonies or formulas, but always in the way which best expresses his sense of the ideal of love and service.

THE AGONY OF INDECISION

Some Women Slaves to the Habit of Vacillation.

I would rather regulate my life by the flip of a penny than suffer the tortures of indecision that I know some women do, says Ruth Cameron in a Pittsburg paper.

"Shall I get straw matting or denim for the new bedroom carpet?"

"Shall I have Mary sweep the front room today and wash the blankets tomorrow or wash the blankets today and clean the front rooms tomorrow?"

"Shall I have roast lamb and asparagus for the special company Sunday, or would it be better to have planked steak?"

Hours and nerves and complexions they wear out swinging the balance back and forth between such weighty questions as these and in the end make no wiser decisions than if they had settled them offhand. Some women make themselves fairly wretched over their wardrobes, such awful opportunity for vacillation they find in choice of material and trimming and make. To others papering and carpeting resolve themselves into a perfect agony of indecision. "I would rather clean that house from top to bottom than pick out a living room carpet again," I heard one woman say the other day. "I do believe I got more tired from tramping around and trying to make up my mind than from all the sweeping and dusting and washing I did." We have just been through the agonies of papering a room in my own home, which perhaps accounts for my warmth on the subject.

It took us two weeks to pick out that paper, and before we ceased wavering between the yellow paper with the poppy border and the pink stripes with the rose border mother almost had to take to her bed.

Indecision is a disease, and, what's more, it is a chronic and a cumulative disease. The more you let yourself be undecided the more undecided you are going to be.

Mental suggestion and mental firmness in following the suggestion is about the only remedy possible.

In the effort to cure myself, for I might as well confess that much of this sermon is directed at my own vacillations, I have formulated three rules.

Perhaps they're worth passing on.

First.—Bring up the arguments slowly and carefully for each side. If they are many and complicated, take a pencil and write them down.

Second.—After having thus gone over the ground make a decision and act upon it at once in some way so that it shall become irrevocable.

Third.—When you begin to feel a tendency to regret your course, to wallow in wails of "it might have been" and to tremble at the consequences that may follow your decision, repeat the following classic stanza:

> The cow is in the hammock,
> The calf is in the lake,
> The baby's in the garbage pail.
> What difference does it make?

HELPS FOR THE HOUSEHOLD.

Squeeze a few drops of lemon in the water in which potatoes are boiled just before they are done and they will not turn black.

If soda is mixed with flour in making ginger cookies with sour milk instead of being dissolved in milk, as is the usual way, they will be lighter.

Paint that sticks to glass can be removed with hot vinegar.

Cleaning pots and pans is the bugbear of the cook. It is hard work at best, and if left until after the dishes are washed it hangs over one as a burden. One easy way is to keep a supply of newspapers in the kitchen, and as soon as a skillet is emptied pour in it a little boiling water, then throw the water out and rub skillet with a large piece of paper. If the frying pan is not clean add a little more water and finally polish until dry with a fresh piece of paper and hang away before other work is attempted.

To keep milk toast from being soggy, as it too frequently is, try serving the boiling, buttered milk in a covered pitcher, passing it with crisp, hot toast. In this way each person can have toast as soft or as crisp as desired.

The housekeeper who wants "the best" does her own marketing, and does it early, before the foodstuffs are picked over or wilted from the hot sun.

More Americans should understand cooking with curry powder. It makes a delicious change for the cooking of meats, rice, eggs and fish. An Anglo-Indian will tell you we know nothing of the use of curries, but that is no reason why we should not learn.

There are fewer reckoning days if housekeepers pay cash. If they persist in running accounts for groceries and other staples they should have a book and see to it that the right price is put down the minute anything is bought.

Director of Reformative Institution.

Dr. Katherine Bement Davis of Bedford, N. Y., is the superintendent of the New York State Reformatory For Women and has been able to do much for the unfortunate women committed to her charge. A thorough collegiate and special training has fitted Dr. Davis for her important work, and she possesses unusual administrative ability. Poise, firmness, judgment, sympathy and good sense are her distinguishing traits.

Regarded generally as one of the expert authorities of the subject of the proper treatment of delinquent women, Dr. Davis is frequently called upon to make addresses before women's clubs and societies.

Dr. Davis' medical skill was put to good service during the recent catastrophe in Messina, where she gave great aid to the suffering and helpless.

Four "greater Dreadnoughts" will probably be ordered by the British government at once.

THE Masquerader

By KATHERINE CECIL THURSTON,

Author of "The Circle," Etc.

Copyright, 1905, 1906, by Harper & Brothers

He looked up. "The essential thing?" She smiled. "The blue cross," she said. "Isn't it worth even a little one?" The tone was very soft. Chilcote yielded.

"You have the blue pencil," he said in sudden response to her mood.

She glanced up in quiet pleasure at her success, and, with a charming affectation of seriousness, marked the engagement with a big cross. At the same moment the car slackened speed, as the chauffeur waited for further orders.

Lillian shut the engagement book and handed it back. "Where can I drop you?" she asked. "At the club?"

The question recalled him to a sense of present things. He thrust the book into his pocket and glanced about him.

They had paused by Hyde park corner. The crowd of horses and carriages had thinned as the hour of lunch drew near, and the wide roadway of the park had an air of added space. The suggested loneliness affected him. The tall trees, still bereft of leaves, and the colossal gateway incomprehensively stirred the sense of mental panic that sometimes seized him in face of vastness of space or of architecture. In one moment Lillian, the appointment he had just made, the manner of its making, all left him. The world was filled with his own personality, his own immediate inclinations.

"Don't bother about me!" he said quickly. "I can get out here. You've been very good. It's been a delightful morning." With a hurried pressure of her fingers he rose and stepped from the car.

Reaching the ground, he paused for a moment and raised his hat; then, without a second glance, he turned and walked rapidly away.

Lillian sat watching him meditatively. She saw him pass through the gateway, saw him hail a hansom; then she remembered the waiting chauffeur.

CHAPTER XXI.

ON the same day that Chilcote had parted with Lillian—but at 3 o'clock in the afternoon—Loder, dressed in Chilcote's clothes and with Chilcote's heavy overcoat slung over his arm, walked from Fleet street to Grosvenor square. He walked steadily, neither slowly nor yet fast. The elation of his last journey over the same ground was tempered by feelings he could not satisfactorily bracket even to himself. There was less of vehement elation and more of matured determination in his gait and bearing than there had been on that night, though the incidents of which they were the outcome were very complex.

On reaching Chilcote's house he passed upstairs, but, still following the routine of his previous return, he did not halt at Chilcote's door, but moved onward toward Eve's sitting room and there paused.

In that pause his numberless irregular thoughts fused into one.

He had the same undefined sense of standing upon sacred ground that had touched him on the previous occasion, but the outcome of the sensation was different. This time he raised his hand almost immediately and tapped on the door.

He waited, but no voice responded to his knock. With a sense of disappointment he knocked again; then, pressing his determination still further, he turned the handle and entered the room.

No private room is without meaning, whether trivial or the reverse. In a room perhaps more even than in speech, in look or in work does the impress of the individual make itself felt. There on the wax of outer things the inner self imprints its seal, enforces its fleeting claim to separate individuality. This thought, with its arresting interest, made Loder walk slowly, almost seriously, halfway across the room and then pause to study his surroundings.

The room was of medium size—not too large for comfort and not too small for ample space. At a first impression it struck him as unlike any anticipation of a woman's sanctum. The walls paneled in dark wood, the richly bound books, the beautifully designed bronze ornaments, even the flowers, deep crimson and violet blue in tone, had an air of somber harmony that was scarcely feminine. With a strangely pleasant impression he realized this, and, following his habitual impulse, moved slowly forward toward the fireplace and there paused, his elbow resting on the mantelpiece.

He had scarcely settled comfortably into his position, scarcely entered on his second and more comprehensive study of the place, than the arrangement of his mind was altered by the turning of the handle and the opening of the door.

The newcomer was Eve herself. She was dressed in outdoor clothes and walked into the room quickly; then, as Loder had done, she, too, paused.

The gesture, so natural and spontaneous, had a peculiar attraction. As she glanced up at him, her face alight with inquiry, she seemed extraordinarily much the owner and designer of her surroundings. She was framed by them as naturally and effectively as her eyes and her face were framed by her black hair. For one moment he forgot that his presence demanded explanation; the next she had made explanation needless. She had been looking at him intently; now she came forward slowly.

"John?" she said, half in appeal, half in question.

He took a step toward her. "Look at me," he said quietly and involuntarily. In the sharp desire to establish himself in her regard he forgot that her eyes had never left his face.

But the incongruity of the words did not strike her. "Oh," she exclaimed, "I—I believe I knew directly I saw you here." The quick ring of life vibrating in her tone surprised him. But he had other thoughts more urgent than surprise.

In the five days of banishment just lived through the need for a readjustment of his position with regard to her had come to him forcibly. The memory of the night when weakness and he had been at perilously close quarters had returned to him persistently and uncomfortably, spoiling the remembrance of his triumph. It had been well enough to smother the thought of that night in days of work. But had the ignoring of it blotted out the weakness? Had it not rather thrown it into bolder relief? A man strong in his own strength does not turn his back upon temptation. He faces and quells it. In the solitary days in Clifford's inn, in the solitary night hours spent in tramping the city streets, this had been the conviction that had recurred again and again, this the problem to which, after much consideration, he had found a solution, satisfactory at least to himself. When next Chilcote called him— It was notable that he had used the word "when" and not "if." When next Chilcote called him he would make a new departure. He would no longer avoid Eve. He would successfully prove to himself that one interest and one alone filled his mind—the pursuance of Chilcote's political career. So does man satisfactorily convince himself against himself. He had this intention fully in mind as he came forward now.

"Well," he said slowly, "has it been very hard to have faith these last five days?" It was not precisely the tone he had meant to adopt, but one must begin.

Eve turned at his words. Her eyes were brimming with life, her cheeks still touched to a deep, soft color by the keenness of the wintry air.

"No," she answered, with a shy, responsive touch of confidence. "I seemed to keep on believing. You know converts make the best devotees." She laughed with slight embarrassment and glanced up at him. Something in the blue of her eyes reminded him unexpectedly of spring skies—full of youth and promise.

He moved abruptly and crossed the room toward the window. "Eve," he said, without looking around, "I want your help."

He heard the faint rustling of her dress as she turned toward him, and he knew that he had struck the right chord. All true women respond to an appeal for aid as steel answers to the magnet. He could feel her expectancy in the silence.

"You know—we all know—that the present moment is very vital. That it's impossible to deny the crisis in the air.

"Eve," he said, "I want your help."

Nobody feels it more than I do. Nobody is more exorbitantly keen to have a share, a part, when the real fight comes"— He stopped; then he turned slowly and their eyes met. "If a man is to succeed in such a desire," he went on deliberately, "he must exclude all others. He must have one purpose, one interest, one thought. He must forget that"—

Eve lifted her head quickly —"that he has a wife," she finished gently. "I think I understand."

There was no annoyance in her face or voice, no suggestion of selfishness or of hurt vanity. She had read his meaning with disconcerting clearness and responded with disconcerting generosity. A sudden and very human dissatisfaction with his readjustment scheme fell upon Loder. Opposition is the whip to action; a too ready acquiescence the slackened rein.

"Did I say that?" he asked quickly. The tone was almost Chilcote's.

She glanced up; then a sudden, incomprehensible smile lighted up her face.

"You didn't say, but you thought," she answered gravely. "Thoughts are the same as words to a woman. That's why we are so unreasonable." Again she smiled. Some idea, baffling and incomprehensible to Loder, was stirring in her mind.

Conscious of the impression, he moved still nearer. "You jump to conclusions," he said abruptly. "What I meant to imply"—

—"was precisely what I've understood." Again she finished his sentence. Then she laughed softly. "How very wise, but how very, very foolish men are! You come to the conclusion that because a woman is—is interested in you she is going to hamper you in some direction, and after infinite pains you summon all your tact and you set about saving the situation." There was interest, even a touch of amusement, in her tone; her eyes were still fixed upon his in an indefinable glance. "You think you are being very diplomatic," she went on quietly, "but in reality you are being very transparent. The woman reads the whole of your meaning in your very first sentence—if she hasn't known it before you began to speak."

Again Loder made an interruption, but again she checked him.

"No," she said, still smiling. "You should never attempt such a task. Shall I tell you why?"

He stood silent, puzzled and interested.

"Because," she said quickly, "when a woman really is interested, the man's career ranks infinitely higher in her eyes than any personal desire for power."

For a moment their eyes met; then abruptly Loder looked away. She had gauged his intentions incorrectly, yet with disconcerting insight. Again the suggestion of an unusual personality below the serenity of her manner recurred to his imagination.

With an impulse altogether foreign to him he lifted his head and again met her glance. Then at last he spoke, but only two words. "Forgive me!" he said, with simple, direct sincerity.

CHAPTER XXII.

AFTER his interview with Eve, Loder retired to the study and spent the remaining hours of the day and the whole span of the evening in work. At 1 o'clock, still feeling fresh in mind and body, he dismissed Greening and passed into Chilcote's bedroom. The interview with Eve, though widely different from the one he had anticipated, had left him stimulated and alert. In the hours that followed it there had been an added anxiety to put his mind into harness, an added gratification in finding it answer to the rein.

A pleasant sense of retrospection settled upon him as he slowly undressed, and a pleasant sense of interest touched him as, crossing to the dressing table, he caught sight of Chilcote's engagement book, taken with other things from the suit he had changed at dinner time and carefully laid aside by Renwick.

He picked it up and slowly turned the pages. It always held the suggestion of a lottery, this dipping into another man's engagements and drawing a prize or a blank. It was a sensation that even custom had not dulled.

At first he turned the pages slowly, then by degrees his fingers quickened. Beyond the fact that this present evening was free he knew nothing of his promised movements. The abruptness of Chilcote's arrival at Clifford's inn in the afternoon had left no time for superfluous questions. He skimmed the writing with a touch of interested haste, then all at once he paused and smiled.

"Big enough for a tombstone!" he said below his breath as his eyes rested on a large blue cross. Then he smiled again and held the book to the light.

"Dine 33 Cadogan gardens, 8 o'c. Talk with L.," he read, still speaking softly to himself.

He stood for a moment pondering on the entry, then once more his glance reverted to the cross.

"Evidently meant it to be seen," he mused. "But why the deuce isn't he more explicit?" As he spoke a look of comprehension suddenly crossed his face and the puzzled frown between his eyebrows cleared away.

With a feeling of satisfaction he remembered Lakeley's frequent and pressing suggestion that he should dine with him at Cadogan gardens and discuss the political outlook.

Lakeley must have written during his absence, and Chilcote, having marked the engagement, felt no further responsibility. The invitation could scarcely have been verbal, as Chilcote, he knew, had lain very low in the five days of his return home.

So he argued as he stood with the book still open in his hands, the blue cross staring imperatively from the white paper. And from the argument rose thoughts and suggestions that seethed in his mind long after the lights had been switched off, long after the fire had died down, and he had been left wrapped in darkness in the great canopied bed.

And so it came about that he took his second false step. Once during the press of the next morning's work it crossed his mind to verify his convictions by a glance at the directory, but for once the strong wish that evolves a thought conquered his caution. His work was absorbing; the need of verification seemed very small. He let the suggestion pass.

At 7 o'clock he dressed carefully. His mind was full of Lakeley and of the possibilities the night might hold; for more than once before the weight of the St. George's Gazette, with Lakeley at its back, had turned the political scales. To be marked by him as a coming man was at any time a favorable portent; to be singled out by him at the present juncture was momentous. A thrill of expectancy, almost excitement, passed through him as he surveyed his appearance preparatory to leaving the house.

Passing downstairs, he moved at once to the hall door; but almost as his hand touched it he halted, attracted by a movement on the landing above him. Turning, he saw Eve.

She was standing quite still, looking down upon him as she had looked once before. As their eyes met she changed her position hastily.

"You are going out?" she asked. And it struck Loder quickly that there was a suggestion, a shadow of disappointment in the tone of her voice. Moved by the impression, he responded with unusual promptness.

"Yes," he said. "I'm dining out—dining with Lakeley."

She watched him intently while he spoke; then, as the meaning of his words reached her her whole face brightened.

"With Mr. Lakeley?" she said. "Oh, I'm glad—very glad. It is quite—quite another step." She smiled with a warm, impulsive touch of sympathy.

Loder, looking up at her, felt his senses stir. At sound of her words his secret craving for success quickened to stronger life. The man whose sole incentive lies within may go forward coldly and successfully; but the man who grasps a double inspiration, who, even unconsciously, is impelled by another force, has a stronger impetus for attack, a surer, more vital hewing power. Still watching her, he answered instinctively:

"Yes," he said slowly, "a long step." And, with a smile of farewell, he turned, opened the door and passed into the road.

The thrill of that one moment was still warm as he reached Cadogan gardens and mounted the steps of No. 33—so vitally warm that he paused for an instant before pressing the electric bell. Then at last, dominated by anticipation, he turned and raised his hand.

The action was abrupt, and it was only as his fingers pressed the bell that a certain unexpectedness, a certain want of suitability in the aspect of the house, struck him. The door was white; the handle and knocker were of massive silver. The first seemed a disappointing index of Lakeley's private taste, the second a ridiculous temptation to needy humanity. He looked again at the number of the house, but it stared back at him convincingly. Then the door opened.

So keen was his sense of unfitness that, still trying to fuse his impression of Lakeley with the idea of silver door fittings, he stepped into the hall without the usual preliminary question. Suddenly realizing the necessity, he turned to the servant, but the man forestalled him:

"Will you come into the white room, sir? And may I take your coat?"

The smooth certainty of the man's manner surprised him. It held another savor of disappointment, seeming as little in keeping with the keen, businesslike Lakeley as did the house. Still struggling with his impression, he allowed himself to be relieved of his hat and coat and in silence ushered up the shallow staircase.

As the last step was reached it came to him again to mention his host's name, but simultaneously with the suggestion the servant stepped forward with a quick, silent movement and threw open a door.

Loder's first impression was of a room that seemed unusually luxurious, soft and shadowed. Then all impression of inanimate things left him suddenly.

For the fraction of a second he stood in the doorway, while the room seemed emptied of everything except a figure that rose slowly from a couch before the fire at sound of Chilcote's name. Then, with a calmness that to himself seemed incredible, he moved forward into the room.

He might, of course, have beaten a retreat and obviated many things, but life is full of might have beens, and retreat never presents itself agreeably to a strong man. His impulse was to face the difficulty, and he acted on the impulse.

Lillian had risen slowly, and as he neared her she held out her hand.

"Jack," she exclaimed softly, "how sweet of you to remember!"

The voice and words came to him with great distinctness, and as they came one uncertainty passed forever from his mind—the question as to what relation she and Chilcote held to each other. With the realization came the thought of Eve, and in the midst of his own difficulty his face hardened.

Lillian ignored the coldness. Taking his hand, she smiled. "You're unusually punctual," she said. "But your hands are cold. Come closer to the fire."

Loder was not sensible that his hands were cold, but he suffered himself to be drawn forward.

One end of the couch was in firelight, the other in shadow. By a fortunate arrangement of chance Lillian selected the brighter end for herself and offered the other to her guest. With a quick sense of respite he accepted it. At least he could sit secure from detection while he temporized with fate.

For a moment they sat silent, then Lillian stirred. "Won't you smoke?" she asked.

Everything in the room seemed soft and enervating—the subdued glow of the fire, the smell of roses that hung about the air and, last of all, Lillian's slow, soothing voice. With a sense of oppression he stiffened his shoulders and sat straighter in his place.

The sight of a parent forcibly striking his child with his hand raised the ire of many citizens at the corner of Aylmer and McDonell streets last night shortly after eight o'clock. However the actions of the parent did not look any too well whereas a little encouragement or sympathy shown to the child would have had a better effect.

EARLY POTATOES NOT PLENTIFUL

Backward Season Has Told Heavily against Crop—Later Ones May be Better

The new early potatoes being offered this year are poor in quality, and most of the growers report small crops. When spoken to Saturday morning one gardener stated that the crop was the worst in years. In some places a few baskets of excellent potatoes have been secured. The backward season did not give the potatoes a chance, and in some cases plants grew only about four inches. Some of the farmers have plowed up their patches without securing anything beyond a few small potatoes which were not big enough to offer. The crop last year was poor, but it was nothing as compared to the one this year. Although the early potatoes are poor, the late ones promise well.

SERVICES WERE WELL ATTENDED

The local Y.M.C.A. took charge of the evangelistic services on the customs house lot yesterday afternoon and evening, and held two most successful meetings. The secretary, Mr. F. G. Hassard, led the afternoon session and Ald. J. J. Turner and Mr. J. F. Thornton delivered short addresses. Music was contributed by the Charlotte street Sunday school orchestra and by the Orpheus Male Quartette. In the evening Mr. J. C. Ellis was in charge, and was aided by Messrs. Bruce Quinn and R. J. Cox.

On the whole the meetings were two of the most successful of those which have so far been conducted, and an even greater success is anticipated for next Sunday.

SECTION FOREMAN MET AWFUL DEATH SATURDAY

Lost His Balance and Fell off His Handcar and Was Run Over by a Second Car — Death Resulted in Few Minutes.

A terrible accident occurred Saturday evening on the Grand Trunk Railway between Reaboro and Omemee, and as a result a section foreman named Robinson met an awful death. It appears that Robinson was on a handcar returning to Omemee after the day's work, and another car followed a short distance behind. Both machines were going at a pretty good rate of speed, with the hind car gradually creeping up on the front one. On reaching a point about one mile from Reaboro the hind car caught up to the one on which Robinson was riding, and who in putting his foot back and attempting to push the car back, lost his balance and fell off on the track in such a position that the wheels of the second handcar passed right over the whole length of his body, crushing his ribs and injuring him so seriously internally that death resulted in a few minutes. The deceased was a married man, and his family resides in Brooklin, a short distance from Whitby. The remains will be shipped there to-morrow morning.

25 FARM LABORERS TO ARRIVE HERE SATURDAY

As a result of the circular sent out some time ago by Mr. W. W. Scott, superintendent of immigration in Canada, asking for farm laborers, Mr. G. H. Howson, the local employment agent, has received word that twenty-five sailed from Liverpool on July 21 on board the S.S. Lake Manitoba, and are expected to reach here next Saturday. Farmers needing help should call at the local office at once and make arrangements with Mr. Howson, as these will be the last to arrive here this year.

ALLEGED GYPSY KIDNAPPER WAS IN COURT AT OTTAWA; WANTS A SPEEDY TRIAL

Cupid does not have to take any hand in gypsy marriages if all are arranged on the same plan as that of Katrina Miguel, aged 12, and Spero Sterrio, also aged 12, of the Ottawa and Hull gypsy camps respectively. It came out in the evidence in the case of the kidnapping of little Katrina Miguel at Hull magistrate's court yesterday, when her alleged kidnappers, Eli Stokes and John Stokes, of the Ottawa camp, were tried before Magistrate Goyette, that the marriage was arranged as a matter of convenience between the parents, without consulting the children.

The two Stokes were ultimately committed for trial, later asking for a speedy trial. From the evidence the kidnapping itself proved a very mild affair, the matters leading up to it being of far more interest. Verbal evidence made out a strong case on behalf of the prosecution undertaken by the Hull gypsies through Mr. Louis Cousineau, that there was a wedding contracted at the camp in Peterborough on June 20 with gypsy rites, between Katrina Miguel, aged 12, a Bulgarian, and Spero Sterrio, aged 12, son of Christo Sterrio, a Mexican. The consent of the pair, according to Bohemian rules, was unnecessary, so long as the parents were agreed as to the convenience, financial and otherwise, of the match. So the little girl of 12 and the little boy of 12 were mated with certain celebrations, but gypsy formula did not require any written contract. Thus no papers could be handed up to Magistrate Goyette yesterday but witnesses from the Hull camp to which the Lilliputian husband belonged swore to the marriage.

The kidnapping itself took place in this wise: The parents, being greatly attached to Katrina, felt lonely at her going, and on Sunday last went wailing to Magistrate Goyette and claiming they had more right to the girl than her husband, who was really so very young, too young to protect her. Also they had a suspicion there might be a flaw in the marriage deal. Mr. Goyette gave an order for the girl to be delivered to P. C. Lafontaine, and Katrina was to be held until the case was proved, one way or the other. Queen Rosa on the witness stand told with great volubility how Lafontaine came on Sunday whilst she was in bed. She hurried with her dressing and was just in time to snatch a valuable gold necklace from the child before Lafontaine ran off with her in an automobile.

When the father of the husband was informed he swore out warrants against Eli Stokes and John Stokes, who accompanied Lafontaine, for kidnapping the girl. Afterward a special order of habeas corpus had to be obtained from the superior court to obtain the release of Katrina from the custody of the police. Then by order of Judge Champagne she was placed under the wing of Bailiff DeCosli with instructions that only her parents were to see her.

The date of the speedy trial of the two Stokes will be fixed when the other cases in which they are concerned have been heard. The theft charges of stealing bracelets and rings from Katrina preferred by Queen Rosa against John Stokes, Eli Stokes, Mrs. Eli Stokes and Mrs. Alexis Miguel, mother of Katrina, will be heard by Magistrate Goyette to-day. In all cases, Mr. L. Cousineau prosecutes and Mr. A. Desjardins and Mr. L. A. Leduc defend.—Ottawa Free Press.

THIS INDIVIDUAL HAD THIS NERVE WITH HIM

A stranger, with all the earmarks of a professional hobo, sauntered into the Bank of Nova Scotia shortly after noon to-day and up to the cage occupied by the teller. He expressed a wish that he be given a sum of money, stating that he had just arrived from Cobalt and wished to secure the amount necessary for a ticket to Toronto. He did not produce any books to show that he had any greenbacks stowed away in the bank, and naturally the teller did not feel that he was justified in acceding to the demands of the stranger. One question led to another, and finally the man became excited and threatened to clean out the entire institution. This alarmed the official in the cage, and he told the would-be bank-robber that unless he withdrew he would be severely dealt with. But words had no effect and the police station was called up. P. C.'s McGinty and Adams responded and escorted the nervy individual to the cells for safe keeping.

MR. C. L. BREWER WRITES RE THE SMITH STREET BRIDGE

To the Editor of the Review.
Peterborough,
Ont.

Dear Sir,—I notice that a by-law is about to be voted on by the ratepayers for a concrete arch bridge on Smith street. I would like to point out that the ratepayers should consider the matter well before recording their vote. As to the plans submitted by your City Engineer, which also have been recommended by Mr. Frances, C.E. I have no doubt probably they are all right and no fault can be found, but the point I wish to bring out is that there are locations which are not adapted for concrete arches, and that cannot be depended upon to a certainty to keep their position after erection. I think the Smith street bridge may be classified as one of those. Any concrete bridge, where it is necessary to drive piles for its support, cannot be said to be a sure and immovable structure even allowing that the engineering is the best available; another and important point is the chance of poor concrete, which sometimes creeps in both from a desire of the contractor to save money, or through some detail which has failed to come directly under his eye. I also feel it to be a duty to point out that a number of concrete arch bridges have failed, which were built in less lengths of span than the one now proposed. Why? They were built on a pile foundation, and after completion and subject to the strain of traffic the footings settled and as concrete will not stand twisting strain or elongation to any great extent, the consequence is it has to separate at wherever the weakest point is, the least settlement of foundation is sufficient to cause a fracture.

I believe a steel structure is the most desirable, for the steel will adapt itself to a wonderful percentage of any movement of the foundation compared with the other. I also hold that the steel bridge with concrete piers and abutments can be built for about ten thousand dollars less, and that a well designed plan would not lack in beauty or general appearance. Another advantage is you can always adjust and level up the steel for any displacement of piers or abutments, whereas if such a thing transpires in a concrete arch it is a failure pure and simple. It is the opinion of a great many engineers that concrete arches to be an undoubted success, should be built on a positive rock bottom or something as good.

Looking at the proposed by-law I think it would have been well to have allowed the rate-payers recording their votes to have had the option to vote for either a steel bridge or a concrete arch, and possibly save ten thousand dollars.

Trusting I have not encroached too much on your valuable space, I am,

Yours truly,
CHARLES L. BREMER.

THE DOCTOR FINED $50

Dr. Pelletier Assessed by Hamilton Police Magistrate

The Hamilton Herald says:—Dr. Pelletier, a physician from Uncle Sams' domains, with various credentials, and who has an office at 68 South Hughson street, was charged by the British Medical Association with a breach of the Medical Act. Alex. Lewis, acting for the doctor, pleaded not guilty.

Detective Bleakley swore that Pelletier had a sign in his window which read, "physician and surgeon of the United States and Mexico." The officer swore that Pelletier's name was not in the Ontario Medical register.

Advertisements were produced which showed that Pelletier did not claim to hold an Ontario doctor's certificate. Crown Attorney Washington said that he thought the sign reading "physician and surgeon" would lead people to believe that Pelletier could practice here.

Pelletier took the stand and swore that he was born in Canada and held a United States doctor's certificate.

"I'm going to fine you $50, and the people will likely read that you are not allowed to practise in this city," said the Magistrate.

This is believed to be the Dr. Pelletier who was said to have been shot near Belleville a short time ago, and a partner of Dr. Pelkey, who had an office on Queen street here.

Bathers Should Stop

SAMUEL GOMPERS WRITES FOR THE REVIEW

Series of Letters From the President American Federation of Labor

Mr. Samuel Gompers, whose position as president of the American Federation of Labor stamps him as the leader of organized labor in the United States and Canada, is at present on a tour which will embrace England, Scotland, Ireland and France. His mission is to observe the condition of the Old Land workers and to compare them with conditions here, with such comment as Mr. Gompers thinks the interest of the subject warrants.

The Review has arranged with Mr. Gompers for a series of letters giving the full store of his observations. The President of the A. F. of L. is respected not only by the members of his organisation, but by all classes for the keenness of his perceptive faculties, his strong intellect, and for his fairness, which may temper but does not blunt his enthusiasm for the cause of the workers the world over. As a speaker he has few superiors. With his pen he is quite as facile as on the platform, and his letters from Britain are sure to be interesting.

The first of the series appears in to-day's issue, and will continue at the rate of two or three a week until after Mr. Gompers' return.

BUILDING STATISTICS FOR JUNE SHOW BIG INCREASE

Increase per cent. Greatest Ever Recorded in Canada—Average Gain 102 per cent—Winnipeg Shows Largest Volume of Business—Peterboro' Well up.

From a standpoint of building progress, June was a month of universal gains and no decreases. Extraordinary high percentages were attained in all sections of the country and the average increase for the month, 102 per cent., as based on the comparative figures supplied Construction by seventeen of the twenty cities reporting, exceeds any of the big successive gains made heretofore this year, and is probably the greatest advance ever recorded in the ubilding history of the Dominion. Two cities exceeded the two million mark, another had over half that amount, and ten additional places registered totals varying from one to six hundred thousand dollars, for permits issued during the month.

Winnipeg shows the largest volume of new work undertaken, her total being $2,041,645, as against $802,200 for the previous June. Toronto is second in this respect and Montreal next, their figures being $2,011,545 and $1,170,790, in order named, as compared with $1,055,405 and $559,972 for the corresponding period of last year; the relative increase in all three cases being 154 per cent., 90 per cent., and 109 per cent., respectively. The remarkable rapidity with which these three cities are growing, while clearly seen in the comparative amounts of the past few months, can more fully be realized when compared with the growth of the larger cities in the United States. None, in fact, aside from New York, Chicago and one or two other large cities, are making greater headway, and even these places are not showing a greater proportionate expansion.

The largest increase per cent. for the month has been recorded by Moose Jaw, which comes to the crest of the wave with a striking gain of 1056 per cent. This place, it will be noted, was one of the three to show a falling off last month, her loss being 19 per cent.

Regina, of the same province, shows an advance of 61.53 per cent., while Saskatoon's enormous ttoal, that of $149,000, although no figures for June 1908 were submitted, makes it quite plain that this thriving city has met with no reversal.

In Alberta, Calgary, and Edmonton still continue to forge strongly ahead, each adding to their former increases by another relative advance of 37 per cent. and 106 per cent.

The second largest increase for the month is noted in the case of Brandon, which over-reaches last year's figures for the corresponding period by 157 per cent.; while other western cities of much larger magnitude, which show a decided advance, are Vancouver and Victoria, both augmenting the aggregate amount of their previous consecutive monthly gains by a further gain of 104 per cent., and 21 per cent., respectively.

Reports from various centres throughout Ontario indicate plainly that building operations are going on at a tremendous rate. In addition to Toronto's increase, Fort William reclaimed herself from her decrease of 5 per cent. in May, by a gain of 94 per cent. Peterborough made an increase of 119 per cent., London 106; Berlin 56; and Hamilton 5 per cent. Windsor's total investment for the month was $48,350, while the value of the permits of Port Arthur amounted to $17,600. Fort William's aggregate total for the first six months of this year, that of $2,000,000, is one-third again as great as the recorded for the whole of 1908, and equally as good a showing has been made in several of the other cities of the province.

Rapid strides forward are also evidently being made in the extreme eastern section. Both the reports from Halifax and Sydney show a most wholesome condition. The former's gain for the month is 7 per cent., while the latter's increase of 130 per cent. after the usually active month in May, is really remarkably.

All the cities in the list send in encouraging reports which express the outlook as being decidedly favorable.

I. B. AND O. RAILWAY WILL BE EXTENDED TO OTTAWA

Lindsay, July 21.—The Irondale, Bancroft and Ottawa railroad, running from Kinmount Junction to Bancroft at present, is to be extended to Ottawa, according to authentic information received.

When the road was started the intention was to have the line run through to Ottawa, but Bancroft is the present terminus. W. D. Howland is president of the company which owns the I.B. & O. railroad.

The single line of railway which comprises this road, touches many centres in Haliburton county, a county which, by the way, is destined to become at no distant future, very important from the standpoint of mineral wealth. Its beautiful lakes and natural scenery, if properly exploited, will mean thousands of dollars in tourist trade, too, for that country.

The I.B. & O. was commenced about fifteen years ago, and it was intended from the start to run from Kinmount Junction (where the G.T.R. is joined), to Ottawa, thus giving Haliburton a good railway service with the eastern and western parts of the province. It is understood that right of way was secured, and for the past number years many rumors have been spread abroad regarding the building of this road.

Such centres of population as Kinmount, Furnace Falls, Gooderham, Hotspur, Wilberforce and Bancroft are touched at present by the road and considerable passenger and freight trade is done. The nature of the road-bed has caused difficulties and inconveniences at certain seasons of the year but this can be remedied.

The Ontario Railway Board is soon to visit the locality of the railway on their annual inspection tour and further developments may take place at that time.

IT IS TIME THIS WAS STOPPED? ENGLISH WOMAN TRIED IN FRENCH

An Englishwoman Arrested — Tried and Remanded to Gaol—Not a Word of English Spoken.

A recently arrived Englishwoman, Mrs. Whitenwright, who has taken up her residence in Montreal, is imbued with socialistic doctrines and has undertaken to preach them on the streets. She was arrested by a policeman for creating an obstruction. At the recorder's court on the following morning the officer gave his testimony in French, the prosecuting attorney conducted his examination in French, Recorder Dupuis spoke that language from the Bench, and even the woman's counsel did likewise. After the evidence had been taken she was remanded for eight days for the purpose of inquiring into her sanity. A heart-rending scene ensued, when the woman's two children clung to her in a passion of tears while an effort was made to remove her from the dock.

The Quebec Telegraph, commenting on the matter, takes exception to trying an accused in that way. "It is a decided hardship," it says, "for a prisoner whose liberty is at stake, to be obliged to remain a passive spectator, and in complete, or almost complete ignorance of the meaning of statements and proceedings which may affect that liberty more or less seriously." No one can dissent from that judgment. It should not be necessary to enforce so reasonable a view on the court authorities of Montreal. The presiding officer of the court should be scrupulously careful that such a thing could not happen. There is no excuse for it. It may be stated with some certainty that the recorder and the two counsel were capable of conducting the trial in English. If the constable could not speak English an interpreter should have been provided, and it was a piece of gross carelessness that that duy was neglected. These comments are based wholly on the newspaper reports of the affair. If they are wrong or exaggerated, we should be very glad to have them corrected.—The Globe.

FINE OPPORTUNITY FOR LOCAL COLLEGIATE CADETS

Lord Strathcona has offered a prize shield for competition amongst the school cadet corps of Canada. It is to be given to the corps which shows the highest degree of efficiency, for the largest number of men. The prize will be awarded by a conference of the inspecting officers towards the close of each school term.

In connection with the above it may be said that the local Collegiate will have a fine chance to win the new trophy. For the past three years they have been the leading cadet corps of the province, not only in point of numbers but also as regards the proportionate proficiency of the men.

This being the case they have a fine head start on the various other High schools of the province and should make a very formidable showing in the race for the new trophy.

LABOR MATTERS IN PETERBOROUGH

Report of Mr. J. A. Sharp as Reported to the Labor Gazette

The labor market continued busy and in some respects showed an improvement over the corresponding month of last year. Considerable building was under way. The municipal authorities have awarded the contract for the construction of a new dam, work to be commenced at once. The pumps will be supplied by the Wm. Hamilton Company of Peterborough, and Mr. John McDougal of Montreal. The city has also made arrangements to take all the power the Ontario Power Company can supply at $7.50 per horsepower. The city bakers have raised the price of bread from 10c to 12c per two-lb. loaf.

Agriculture.—Seeding is practically completed and fall wheat and clover look very well. Excellent growing conditions are making up for the lateness of the season.

Lumbering.—Logs are in the river and employees busy getting them to the mills.

Manufacturing. — The factories showed some improvement compared with the corresponding period of last year. The Central Milling Company has closed down to enable it to make extensive improvements that will double its capacity.

Bricklayers, masons, carpenters, lathers, plasterers, painters, and plumbers were busy. Stonecutters were active and builders' laborers busy. Iron moulders and core makers were fairly busy. There was some improvement among machinists compared with last month, but they were not very busy. Boat builders and canoe makers were busy. In the printing and allied trades fairly busy conditions prevailed. Tailors were also busy. Bakers and confectioners reported business good, but cigar makers were not very busy, although there was a slight improvement over last month. Leather workers reported business active. Steamboat men were very busy. There was plenty of work for unskilled labor.

FRUIT DEALERS HAD POOR DAY

The fruit dealers were in anything but a pleasant frame of mind Saturday, as the rain continued to fall, compelling the citizens to remain in the house, thus causing a considerable loss to those who had a large supply of perishable fruit on hand. The other merchants also suffered, but not to the same extent as the fruit dealers, who will have to throw most of Saturday's stuff away and this will mean a dead loss to them.

DAVE BELLAND'S FAMOUS RECORD SPRINT RECALLED

In these times of Marathon races and hundred yard dashes, we are led to remember the days when Davie Belland and Artie Burns lived and thrived around this burgh. Whether or not they are still working the same old game, it is not known, but as it is not in the nature of either of them to remain long unheard from they ought to reappear pretty soon. It is just about six years ago to-day that Belland made his sensational attack upon the world's hundred yards record.

The papers had been heralding the event for a week or more, and much interest was displayed in the proposed trial. The interest was the more concentrated owing to the fact that in none of his other races had he shown the slightest indication that he was of championship calibre. However, the people were on the lookout for anything unusual, and on the night in question a large crowd gathered at the Oval to witness shattering of the record.

About half-past six Belland appeared on the track and after doing a few preliminary stunts, prepared for the sprint.

As he came rolling down the stretch no unusual burst of speed was noticeable, but as Belland's style consisted mostly of a series of gigantic efforts to touch his chin with his chin, it was at all times rather hard to make a calculation as to the speed that he was making. This being the case while when at first the time was announced, there were some doubts and misgivings expressed, still, as a whole, the affair was swallowed in the most tame and approved fashion and the people departed to their various abodes full of the belief that the world's record had been lowered to 9 2-5 seconds.

The story went the rounds for several days, and was given considerable space in the larger newspapers, who, however, were not backward in passing insinuating remarks, as to the reliability of the affair. In the meantime Belland lived on the fat of the land and strutted around the town with a large vocabulary and larger head. Finally, however, some incredulous person put an end to the affair by measuring the course. Then was seen the truth of the matter—he had only run seventy-five yards.

Belland left the city shortly afterwards going to Quebec, where he became emixed up in several other queer games along the line. "Get the hook."

LINES ON SPORT

Tommy Burns has been touring Australia filling a vaudeville engagement and receiving $1,250 each night for his work on the stage. He played in every city of any size in Australia, and intends to take in New Zealand, as he has received a flattering offer from several managers in that country.

Tommy Burns says:—"I think Ketchel will be easy for me. I notice he would not cover the $5,000 Hugh McIntosh put up, and Johnson and Langford side-stepped it also, so if I am so easy you would think they would cover my money and toe the scratch. But at that I don't care if I never fight again. Believe me, I got mine, but would like another chance at Johnson in a finish fight, just to show that a white man is his master, and I certainly hope Ketchel knocks his head off."

Notice Yebbie Flaherty in town yesterday? Yebbie is from Peterborough, where the chippy fellows, including the sporting editor of the Review, come from. Nevertheless, Irish Yebbie could pitch ball and he always had an easy delivery. Both jaws worked overtime chewing gum (?) when Yebbie was in the thick of a game, and he would run up a little with every ball he pitched, and then walk back to the box, meanwhile giving his trousers a typical Irish hitch.—Lindsay Warder.

Rain prevented the cycle Marathon at Scarboro Beach, Toronto, from being pulled off Saturday night. Harry Young, formerly of this city, but now of Toronto, was one of those entered.

Sidney Hatch, of Chicago, set a new world's record for the 100-mile race Saturday, when he finished that distance in 16.07.43, which is 2.43.14 better than the previous time claimed by Albert Corey.

Lavelle, of Capitals, and Gagnon, of Nationals, were arrested Saturday during the game, for scrapping, but they were not locked up.

Toronto and Jersey City battled for 12 innings Saturday, but the result was a tie, 3—3. As usual, Kid Mahling was there with two errors.

MR. SIMPSON BUYS "FAIRLAWN A"

Mr. George Simpson, manager of the Simpson House, and a well-known horseman, has purchased the fast trotting bay mare "Fairlawn A" from the estate of the late Dr. Brandt, of Peterborough. The horse is a high-class animal, standard-bred, and registered, and can travel at a fast clip. Mr. Simpson has her now in training and will start her in the green races at Toronto exhibition and at all the fall fairs in Ontario.

Mr. Simpson expects to clean up all the green money this fall, and the horse that beats him will know he has been travelling some.—Lindsay Warder.

CRICKET

CRICKETERS, ATTENTION!

Cricket this year has not been up to "par" in this city. Some of the members are trying to boom it, and all those interested are particularly requested to attend practice on Wednesday evening, at the Oval, at 7 p.m. All welcome.

Games will likely be arranged later with outside teams.

The Canadian Zingari have mistaken their vocation. They were intended by nature to pick potato bugs and not play cricket. They should be at home now instead of in the United States playing cricket.

INTERESTING NEWS FROM UPPER STONEY LAKE

Special to the Review.

Stony Lake, July 26.—Saturday saw the usual large number of week-end visitors to the lake, and things continue busy at the various resorts.

A large congregation greeted the minister at Juniper Island yesterday morning. During the service Miss Carrie Rector, of Peterborough, rendered a most acceptable solo. Rev. J. R. Webb, of the Murray St. Baptist church, Peterborough, was expected to preach at the evening service at Crow's Landing, but illness prevented him doing so. A song service was held by Mr. Duffield.

FOUR RAINY DAYS

The last four days of last week were very disagreeable, and partially disgusted many visitors with the beautiful weather of the Kawartha Lakes. Books and cards demanded most of the time of the cottagers, but the campers in tents put in a very miserable time. However, Sunday was an excellent day for drying bedding, and last night many slept on dry beds—an experience they had not had for several nights.

AN INGENIOUS GAME.

One camp that was not deprived of a merry time by the weather invented a rather odd game, but at the same time interesting, and at times even exciting. During a trip up Eel's Creek six members of the party captured turtles, one apiece, and took them to the cottage with them. The following day was a cold, damp, windy one, and the question was one of putting in time. One bright member, endowed with more fertile and resourceful brain than the others, suggested a turtle race. The suggestion was no sooner made than it was acted upon. A tin of white paint was procured and a large figure soon added to the other decorations on each turtle's back. Those not possessing turtles staked their earthly possessions on the most likely looking ones among the starters, and before long or three of the men had opened books. The first turtle to reach the water was the winner. No. 3 won the first two heats, but No. 5 beat him out in the last heat. The time was very good, but as the turtles were not in good shape better time is expected at the next race, which is billed for the first rainy day.

VISITORS AT THE LAKE.

Miss May Wilson, of Toronto, is at "Bellvidere."

Miss Beatrice Elliott, of Norwood, is spending a few weeks at Stony Lake, the guest of Mrs. T. E. Finlay.

Mrs. D. Saunders, of Toronto, is spending a short while at Mr. H. G. Buck's cottage.

Miss Clara Cummings, of Norwood, is the guest of Miss Grace Reynolds at "Cedar Hedge."

Mrs. Joob, Miss Joob and Master Clarence, of Toronto, are at "Bide-a-Wee."

Mr. S. D. Kerr is at Mr. J. D. Collins cottage at Juniper Island.

Mr. R. W. Waters and Miss Edith Waters, of Norwood, are at "Water Lee Brae."

Mr. and Mrs. M. Nichol and family opened their cottage, "Don Brae," last week.

REGATTA ON AUG. 2.

The regatta at Crow's Landing will be held on Monday, August 2nd, and from present indications will be a grand success. All previous regattas of the U.S.L.C.C.A. have been very popular, and as this one is the first regatta of the season a large crowd is practically assured. A big list of handsome and valuable prizes, as well as cups and pennants has been prepared, and winners will be well rewarded for their victories. In the here will be a short but classy concert, at which the prizes will be presented, followed by a hop.

THE RING

The New York World says:

Battling Nelson came to town yesterday—all the way from the coast to the newsboys' benefit. He says he made a promise and he always keeps his word, although in this instance he was forced to cancel two lucrative engagements.

"'I was travel-worn, that's all,'" said Nelson, in speaking of the Ad Wolgast affair at Los Angeles. "'The little fellow caught me off condition. I had no zinger at all. But at that I got all the money. They gave me $5,500 and he got $1,500. Wolgast is a good boy, but if I get him again the result will be different."

Bat adds an interesting chapter to the recent Papke-Flynn battle. He says Papke has no heart. "If Papke had the heart to go in and fight he would be heavyweight champion of the world," said Nelson. "I saw his fight with Flynn, and he was stalling or hanging on the ropes nearly all the time. He needs Flynn's heart. Flynn is a big, willing fellow, who doesn't know anything, but if Papke had his heart he would be champion. Papke is a hard, straight hitter, but he stops as soon as he gets mussed up a little. It was the same in his fight with Ketchel. They tell me Ketchel could hardly hold his hands up in the last round, but he made Papke run away."

BASEBALL

All the members of the G. A. S. ball team are asked to turn out to practice to-night, when the team to play Hastings on the C. M. B. A. excursion will be picked.

MOTOR BOAT WAS TO COME HERE

On Friday night the handsome gasoline launch, recently purchased by Mr. R. W. Travers, manager of the local Bank of Montreal, was burned at the dry dock at Kingston. The Caprice was a fine boat 36 feet long and 8 feet deep. The upper parts were finished in solid mahogany and brass, with a bunting cabin. The men in charge went down to examine her before making ready to put her on a car for Peterborough. Smelling the odor of gasoline, they started to explore with a lantern. The fumes at once caught fire, and as she carried one hundred gallons of gasoline, the explosion was terrific. The boat is insured, but not by any means for full value and the loss to Mr. Travers will be considerable. Turcotte, the man who was spoken of in the despatches as being so seriously burned, has been with Mr. Travers for many years aboard his various sailing craft and Mr. Travers wired from Peterborough that everything possible be done for the unfortunate man.

The three men under arrest at Ottawa for stealing diamonds worth $6,000 are suspected of other thefts from Ottawa stores.

A NEW BOAT FOR LINDSAY

Will be Built Next Year—Trips From Scugog Town

Lindsay, July 26.—Manager Robert Hicks of the Otonabee Navigation Co. of Peterborough assured a Warder reporter yesterday that he would put a regular boat on these waters early next spring. He has considered the situation carefully and finally decided to run regular trips from Lindsay to Sturgeon Point, Fenelon Falls and Cobcoonk.

The company has a number of boats including the Manita and Ogemah, that at one time ran on these waters. They are also building a fine new excursion boat, and it is very likely the Otonabee is the one that will be placed on these waters. In the fall, when the water gets low, she will be taken off and a smaller one put on in her place.

This will be good news to Lindsay and Sturgeon Point citizens as every person that has been on the Otonabee was much taken with the fine excursion boat. She has returned to Peterborough and will not likely be seen on these waters again this season.

Concrete Walks For Normal

Plans of concrete walks and specifications for walks for the grounds of the Peterborough Normal School can be seen at the residence of F. Bartlett, architect, 68 Murray street. Tenders are to be sent in to Mr. Rhoas, secretary, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, arriving there not later than July 30 at noon. Advertisement in another column.

Will be in Norwood

Magistrate Edmison will go down to Norwood to hold court to-morrow. On Friday the magistrate will preside at court in Havelock.

GAME FOR TRAVELERS.

"By the Way" Will Amuse Grown Folks as Well as Children.

This game is a great deal of fun and can be played by children of all ages when traveling by car, automobile or carriage. The one who first sees an object wins a number of points. The score is kept by one player. The party should be divided into two sections, the left side of the road being assigned to one section and the right side to the other section. The counts are as follows (these may be changed to suit the particular part of the country you are in):

| | Count. |
|---|---|
| A baby in arms | 1 |
| A baby in a gocart | 2 |
| A white horse | 5 |
| A ladder against a house | 2 |
| A woman with white apron | 1 |
| A butcher's cart | 1 |
| A postman | 4 |
| A bridge | 5 |
| A red headed girl or man | 3 |
| A messenger boy | 2 |
| A man with a camera | 3 |
| A black pig | 5 |
| A white house | 1 |
| A boy on a fence | 4 |
| A brook | 2 |

If any of the following are seen the score is to be lessened by its count. Sides try to catch each other on these

| | Loss. |
|---|---|
| A pug dog | 2 |
| An open gate | 2 |
| A piebald horse | 4 |
| A flock of sheep | 3 |
| A soldier | 10 |

No matter what the score is, whichever side sees a cat on a window ledge or a pig standing on its hind feet wins the game.

WITH SCISSORS AND CORD.

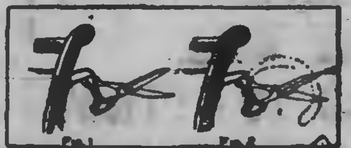
A Trick That Can Be Easily Performed When One Knows How.

A piece of strong cord is doubled and fastened to a pair of scissors with a slip knot, as shown in Fig. 1. After passing the ends of the cord through the thumb hole of the scissors they are tied fast to a chair, doorknob or any other object that may be of sufficient size to make the ends secure.



HOW THE SCISSORS ARE REMOVED.

The trick is to release the scissors without cutting the cord.

Take hold of the loop end of the cord in the lower handle and draw it first through the upper handle and then completely over the blades of the scissors, as shown in Fig. 2. This is very simple when you know how, but puzzling when the trick is first seen.—Popular Mechanics.

What Is My Thought Like?

One of the players in this game thinks of some object—it may be a person, an animal or a thing—and each player is questioned by the "thinker," "What is my thought like?" and must make an answer. "Like a monkey," "Like a table," "Like a fish," "Like a mischievous boy," and so on. When all have answered the "thinker" tells them the object thought of. Perhaps it was a person present. Each player must then justify his reply or, failing this, pay a forfeit.

For instance, the one who said the object was like a monkey when told the name of a gentleman present as the object would reply, "I said Mr. —— was like a monkey because he is fond of nuts." The next would say, "I said Mr. —— was like a table because he is rather wooden looking." "He is like a fish because he is fond of the water," and so on.

Game of Neighbors.

In this game half the company are blindfolded and are seated with an empty chair on the right hand of each. At a given signal all the other players occupy these as mysteriously as they can and immediately begin to sing, either all to a tune played on the piano or every one by himself.

The object of the blind players is to find out, entirely by ear, who is seated on their right. Those who guess correctly are unbandaged, and their places are taken by the players whose names they guessed. The others remain blindfolded until they guess rightly. Only one guess is allowed each round.

P's and Q's.

The company forms a circle, and one stands in the center as questioner. No one must name a place beginning with a letter that comes before "Q" in the alphabet.

The leader may begin in this fashion: "Commodore Evans is in the strait of Magellan with the fleet. Where is he going next? But mind your P's and Q's." The unthinking speaker may say "To Chile," for which a forfeit must be paid, as C is before Q in the alphabet, and so the game goes on. Any country or incident may be used in asking the questions.

The Way to June.

It is through the glade that the [illegible] has made
And under the glistening trees
Beyond the snow, where the cold winds blow
Through the [illegible] of the old March breeze,
Then down the lane of the April rain
Under violet scented showers
And off by way of the hills of May
With their apple blossom bowers,
Then on again through a leafy [illegible] aisle,
With the bird songs all atune,
Where you rest awhile, at the [illegible],
But you've found the way to June.
—St. Nicholas.

ASTRONOMICAL EXCITEMENT

At Crowe's Landing Last Night—Was it an Illuminated Airship?

Special to the Review.

Crowe's Landing, Stoney Lake, July 26.—Much excitement and interest was aroused here last night by the appearance in the western sky, bright crimson by the setting sun, of a light resembling a large star. It was first seen about nine o'clock, and was taken for a star, but rendered very conspicuous by its extraordinary size and color. A closer observation showed that it was rapidly moving, and what first resembled a star was seen to be a large fire-like light moving rapidly across the sky. Many campers watched it with growing interest as it rose in the west, passed rapidly across the heavens and was gradually lost to view in the east. It appeared to be very high and moved very rapidly as it was not visible more than two or three minutes.

What it really was is a question for which no one here has yet found a reasonable answer, but it may have been, and probably was a balloon. However, many who saw it declare that it moved much faster than the air, and therefore must be propelled by some motor power of its own. On the other hand, if it was an airship why was it carrying so large a light? Whatever it was it has aroused a great deal of interest on account of its phenomenal appearance combined with its rapid motion and colored lights.

AT VIAMEDE

The rainy days did not prove any impediment to the fishing at Viamede. The fishing in all fishing grounds is generally improved after a rain, but it fell in such large quantities in Stony Lake that the devotees of the rod and line feared that their sport would be interfered with. Such was not the case, however, and the luck was excellent.

On Friday and Saturday Mr. Sam C. Austin, of San Antonio, Tex., had excellent luck and caught the limit of bass both days. On Saturday Mr. Clarkson Taylor, of Cincinnati, caught three fine bass. Mr. Book, of London, made an excellent catch, and Mr. Walden, of Toronto, also met with great success.

The annual Viamede regatta will be held some day this week. The committee of guests in charge of arrangements are busy preparing the programme.

Service was held last evening at 8 o'clock and was well attended. The preacher in charge was Mr. W. J. R. Harris, of Wycliffe College, Toronto. Mr. Walden, of Toronto, sang a solo.

On Wednesday a progressive euchre party was held. The winners of the first prize were Mr. Urquhart, jr., and Mrs. Macey, of Toronto; Mr. Urquhart, sr., and Miss Graham; Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, of Cincinnati.

LABOR CONDITIONS IN ENGLAND

Mr. Samnel Gompers Writes of Matters as He Finds Them in Great Britian

Mr. Samuel Gompers writes of matters as he finds them in Great Britain;

Paris, July 13, 1909.—Another busy week has passed on—on my vacation. It hardly occurred to me during my stay in London that I might do something at sight-seeing, as I had engagements at almost every waking hour with men in the thick of the trade union and other social movements. The newspaper boys found that I could give them midnight interviews; consequently, they kept me up several nights until the small hours promised dawn, describing Trade Union methods in the American Federation of Labor. Sunday, our party left London for Paris—I stopped over a day at Calais. Here in Paris, our French friends, lively, cheerful, generous and intelligent have overwhelmed me with kindly attentions.

Certainly, it is a curious spectacle—that annual Fourth of July reception at Ambassador Whitelaw Reid's mansion in London. This year on Monday, the fifth, the occasion brought together a crowd of the most elegantly attired people I ever saw. At least four-fifths of the callers were American women. The scarcity of men, as well as the fact that nearly all of them were Londonized in dress—"top" hat and black frock coat, and the rest of it suggested the thought that "pa" has about enough cash this year to send "ma" and the girls abroad, but he is staying in America to watch the markets. It was a restless, gay, chatty assembly; its individual members quite uniformly knowing how to pose to advantage for the general admiration. Everybody arrived on "wheels" at the palatial quarters; a line of knee-breeched men servants indicated the way through the pillared vestibule and court, the broad marble staircase, at the landing, broad and deep, stood the tired Ambassador and Mrs. Reid, shaking hands with each caller as his or her name was audibly announced by an attendant; beyond, there, halls with polished floors, walls with rare vases and paintings, ceilings marvels of gilt and mouldings; thence, after a dress parade, the endless lines of people descended to the conservatories and the large marques on the lawn, to partake of as good a collation as the season and the court caterer could supply. The attendance numbered several thousands. Dorchester house as Ambassador Reid's residence in Hyde Park is called is one of the show places in London. It is said his rent for it is $55,000 a year, more than three times the salary paid him annually by the Government of the United States. What a variety of sentiments, admiration, envy, vanity, shyness, flippancy, philosophy, must have animated the multitude there foregathered! Mr. Reid has mounted the ladder high, but I dare say that when he dreams that he is again the country newspaper reporter of fifty years ago he is just as happy as in his present waking hours.

On the second of July when the meeting of unemployed men was being held in George Square, Glasgow, about a hundred and fifty of them leaving the body of those in attendance, tried to "rush" the entrances to the Municipal buildings where the special distress committee were in a wrangle over the situation—"At one time," says a dispatch, "it appeared that a serious riot was imminent, groups fo unemployed gathered round the various doors and clamoring for admittance." Checked in their rush (by the police) they massed themselves on the staircase, and stirring scenes ensued. One orator in the square declared to the crowd that they were "curs if they allowed their wives and children to starve." Far from Fourth of July enthusiasm was the sentiment of that mass of hungry human beings. The spectacle or even its description would be enough, one might believe, to move every man coming to know of it in studying why it is that society today sees so sad a disparity in the distribution of wealth, to do his share towards its elimination.

Nothing that has occurred in England during my stay has so much stirred me up as the fact that "batches" of miners in Durham county in the north of England were taken to prison in default of paying fines in various sums for having been absent from work for one day—April 12th. One item in the newspaper ran thus, "Thirty miners were yesterday taken to gaol and were accompanied to the train by hundreds of the villagers. (Later on, the miners who went to gaol last Friday arrived home after their imprisonment for the same offence, and were received with enthusiasm. There are still forty miners to go to gaol." It appears that there is a special act of Parliament forbidding workmen to quit their employment even for a day without due legal notice to their employers which may be construed by the employer as an intention to leave his service. The miners of Durham certainly come under that law, and strongly wishing a day off took it despite the orders to the contrary. Consequently they are being punished for breach of contract. Are the business, the employing classes ever "gaoled" for such a crime? To me it seems that a gross discrimination exists in such cases against labor. A very capable and prominent labor man assured me that he had never known of an instance of this character in his own trade. I had made the inquiry in the presence of a number of active, studious, labor men, officials of labor organizations, and who testified differently as to their men in their own Unions as well as others; they mentioned occurrences where men were fined and imprisoned in brass working, railroad gas workers, and several other trades who fined and imprisoned for absenting themselves from work for even half a day. Undoubtedly, an inquiry will yet be made by the Trade Unionists whether the rights under the British Constitution will permit imprisonment for failure to fulfil these specific terms of a contract for personal service. When contracts exist between business men and the party contracting to perform certain service, fails to fulfil the terms of the contract, he may be sued in damages. If he cannot respond to civil damages because of poverty, the injured party cannot compel the specific performance of the terms of the contract for that service. The same contention applies to the employer and the employed.

In connection with this, a case just ended in the courts is to be noted, in which the British Trades Dispute Act of 1906 has not worked out as expected. An agent of the Musicians' Union at Bristol, after the Union had withdrawn its members from the orchestra of a local theatre in a strike, circulated a hand bill asking the public to patronize another theatre which employed Union men. In the suit brought by the "unpatronized" theatrical manager, he obtained judgments for 17,500, against, not the Musicians' Union, but the member who issued the hand bill. The judge in his decree, expressed views strangely at variance with those entertained not only by Trade Unionists, by all who had any connection with the enactment of the law of 1906. The judge maintained that when the manager of the theatre succeeded in hiring a sufficient number of musicians to satisfy his avowed needs to replace the men who struck there no longer existed any dispute between the Union and him. While in America it has been decided that the express refusal of Union men to patronize any employer of non-Union labor is not illegal but the coercion of a "third party" is the feature necessary to establish a boycott liable in damages. This judge in England gave damages for "injury to the plaintiff's business." With these decrees as precedents the questions arise are the "disputes" which under the Act are legal still to leave the Union Treasuries liable to damage suits if the Union takes up the conflict between an employer and his own employees? In other words, is the law to be so interpreted that a Union cannot have a "dispute" with an employer when he is running his establishment with non-unionists? Cannot trade-unionists, workmen, appeal to the public to decline to patronize an antagonistic employer?

A DECISION OF IMPORTANCE

Drunkard's Wife Gets Verdict Against Saloonkeeper For $5225

A despatch from Detroit says: A decision, far-reaching in its importance, and one which will be of interest to the cause of temperance everywhere, was handed down by the Michigan supreme court on Wednesday. Mrs. Nettie Marriman of Glass Lake brought suit against Frederick, a saloonkeeper, in the same town, claiming $10,000 damages from him for having sold liquor to her husband, as well as causing the plaintiff to lose her home, her money and the companionship of her husband. It was shown to the satisfaction of the court that until Marriman took to drink he was a prosperous railway telegrapher, and stood high with his employers. The drink caused him to lose everything, and finally his wife was obliged to leave him. The case went before a jury, which gave Mrs. Marriman a small verdict, but she appealed to the supreme court and the decision on WWednesday resulted in a verdict against the saloonkeeper for $5,225.

Corps Against Corps in the Military Tournament at the Canadian National

The Military Display and Tournament at the Exhibition will have more features of real interest this year than anything of the kind previously attempted in Canada. In Canada. In such competitions as the Victoria Cross and wrestling on horseback corps will be arranged against corps, the Royal Canadian Dragoons stationed at Toronto against the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery stationed at Kingston. The rivalry between these corps is very keen, so much so that the men are anxious to also mix things up a bit with the single stick in the Balaclava Melee, if the permission of the officers can be obtained. However, the officers have not yet decided. Some think a few hard knocks would not hurt the men while others are inclined to think that the competition would resolve itself into something like too much actual warfare.

Be that as it may, the rivalry will give a spirit of rivalry to the competions that will make them doubly interesting.

Another thing that will add interest, is that the soldiers will all be living under canvas on the grounds, and will parade through the crowd to the stand before each performance.

MUST SAVE RESOURCES SAYS LIGHTHALL TO THE WEST

Honorary Secretary, Speaking at Union of Canadian Municipalities in Medicine Hat, Warns Them Against Giving Away Their Natural Heritage.

Medicine Hat, Alta., July 27.—About seventy delegates arrived in Medicine Hat on Sunday evening and Monday to attend the ninth convention of the Union of Canadian Municipalities.

The morning session opened at 11 o'clock and immediately adjourned until two, to allow the executive to arrange a program to work in with the local arrangements for entertainment.

The members of the executive are: President Ward, Toronto; Vice-President Cochrane, Manitoba; Hon. Secretary-Treasurer Lighthall, K.C., mayor, Westmount, Que.; J. H. McGuire, Toronto; Mayor Patterson, Galt; Mayor Stevely, London; G. McCready, Fredericton, N.B.; Mayor Galt; Mayor Stevely, London; G. McCasdale, Blanchard, Man.; Mayor Sanford W. Evans, Winnipeg; Mayor McBryde, Portage la Prairie; Mayor Keary, New Westminster, B.C.; Mayor Milne and W. Cousins, Medicine Hat, Mayor Jamieson, Calgary, ex-Mayor McAra, Regina; Mayor Chisholm, Halifax, N.S.; ex-Mayor Griesbach, Edmonton.

Addresses of welcome were delivered at two o'clock by Lieutenant-Governor Bulyea and Mayor Milne, and replied to by Mayor Hopkins of Ottawa and Mayor Chisholm of Halifax. Afterwards the delegates took in bucking competition for championship of Canada.

The address of W. D. Lighthall of Montreal, honorary secretary of the union, was a splendid review of the organization. In one of his most striking passages he uttered a serious warning with respect to the municipal dangers of the future.

Discussing municipal dangers the speaker said of big money interests: They are seizing with the utmost rapidity all the important water-powers of this continent with the money of three or four groups of capitalists, one of which is that of the General Electric Co. We would utter this vital warning to the west: Never sell or cede a water-power. Always lease them. Do not sell or cede your resources, apart from farm lands. Retain the people's ownership in the heritage of the people.

Mr. Lighthall ended his brilliant address with a eulogy of those like Joshua Dyke of Fort William, Cook of Ottawa, Lavallee and Gelinas of Montreal, George Wilson of Alberta, Oliver Howland of Toronto, who had given splendid service to municipal interests.

Recognizing the importance of the west, President J. J. Ward of Toronto at the same time recommended that they take advantage of the experience of the east, "so as to combat successfully the many weak points in the government of the latter by safeguarding cities against the encroachment of corporations whose obvious office it is to invade public rights."

"You must be ever on the alert to guard against the granting of concessions which will militate against the future growth and development of your respective cities," he said.

HON. ADAM BECK WINS THE DAY

London, July 27.—A bylaw to expend $123,700 in securing water from wells under the streets on the bank of the River Thames was carried yesterday by a majority of 1,840 out of a total vote of 2,550.

Hon. Adam Beck, who strongly supported the scheme, addressed the crowd from The Advertiser window, thanking them for eschewing politics in a matter of such importance, and promising that the scheme would be a success.

A bylaw to expend $96,000 on the extension of water mains was defeated by 540 out of a total vote of 2,218.

OLD CLOTHES MEANS MONEY

New York, July 27.—John W. Gates came back from six weeks vacation abroad, fairly bubbling over with good spirits and bullishness.

"Two years ago," said he, "I said that Americans were going to retrench and wear their old clothes. They have done so, and the money they have saved surprised them all, as is shown by bank deposits the country wide.

"Two years' economy in the United States means a world of money, and I believe the next four years will witness the greatest industrial development in the United States that the world has ever seen."

WOMAN HELD FOR TRIAL AS WHITE SLAVE TRADER

Special to the Review.

New York, July 26.—Helen Spencer, who, according to a despatch sent out by a wireless company, tried to kill herself on the Panama liner Alliance, yesterday, while the ship was plowing northward off Hatteras, arrived here on that vessel today in charge of the two detectives who arrested her in Ecuador as a White Slave trader. The woman is tall and slender, but her features were so muffled up in the folds of a thick, dark brown veil, that it was impossible to see her face. She refused to discuss her case, and although she had the freedom of the the ship on the way up, she was locked in her stateroom when the ship docked.

The officers of the ship denied that there was any truth in the despatch sent out. They even went so far as to deny it had emanated from the ship at all. The purser declared that it had originated in New York, just how he was not prepared to say. Helen Spencer had been in the best of health and spirits all the way up he said. The other passengers had avoided her studiously, but that did not seem to worry her.

The woman was taken to the Criminal Courts Buildings, where she was arraigned before Judge Rosalsky in Part One, General Sessions. She was represented by Mr. Cohen, of Goldfogle & Cohen, who asked that bail be fixed and the case put over till Monday. Assistant District-Attorney Marshall agreed to this and suggested $2,500 as the bond. Judge Rosalsky said that the sum was too small and made it $5,000. The woman was taken to the Tombs.

Mrs. Spencer, who when in New York lived at No. 322 Third Avenue, is charged by the police with being the "purchasing agent" for the Navjoa, a resort in Panama. Last May she sailed for the Isthmus on the Orinoco. With her were three young New York girls, Dixie Jerome, Marie Nevins and June Patterson. They firmly believed that they were going to work as variety performers at a good salary. When the ship got out to sea Mrs. Spencer intimated pretty plainly what kind of a place the Navajo is. They appealed to Capt. Cheret, who sent them home on another boat and informed the Canal Zone police. Mrs. Spencer learned in some way that her arrest was imminent and fled to Guyaquil. The New York detectives located and arrested her there.

WM. T. JEROME FIGHTS THAW

White Plains, N.Y., July 27.—Alienists began their slow march across the stage in the Thaw case yesterday. The efforts of Stanford White's slayer to obtain his release from the Matteawan Asylum for criminal insane are culminating in the testimony of the experts, called to prove him sane and when they are through the prisoner will take the stand. His attorney, Charles Morschauser, said that he might put Thaw on this afternoon, but he may not reach the stand till to-morrow.

District Attorney Wm. Travers Jerome, of New York, who at the request of the Attorney-General's office, broke off his vacation to aid the state, appeared in court and took entire charge of the state's case.

Mr. Jerome, deeply browned by the sun, and Thaw, grey-white, with his prison pallor, sat side by side, so close that their chairs touched; and if the prisoner had any fear of the man that sent him to the asylum, his face did not show it.

DIDN'T WANT HIS PICTURE TAKEN

Vancouver, B.C., July 27.—The police force are greatly puzzled to account for the reason which caused young Jack Anderson, held here for the Toronto police on the charge of cashing scores of bogus checks in different parts of the world, to fight against having his photograph taken for the Rogues Gallery.

When Detective James Anderson told him that he was going to take his picture the young man wished to leave his glasses behind. He was told he must be taken with them on. So determined was he not to be photographed with his glasses on that he smashed them on the hard cement floor of the jail corridor. A new pair was obtained and he was sucessfully photographed.

FREE HIDES THE ISSUE

U. S. Tariff Conference Depends on This Clause

Washington, July 27.—Hides will be put on the free list if boots and shoes and other manufactures of leather are reduced below the rates fixed by the House bill. Unless the advocates of free hides are able to carry out this bargain the whole program is to be called off.

A decision to this effect was reached by the tariff conferees yesterday.

The conferees adjourned last night, but the House assembled at 10.30 this morning in order that they might lay their plans for executing their part of the agreement. It is expected they will have a report from the House leaders as to the possibility of passing a rule conferring jurisdiction upon them to agree to lower rates on leather than those named in the House bill. Senator Aldrich has informed Senators from northwestern states that he will not consent to the abolition of the duty on hides unless there is a material cut in the rates of boots and shoes and other leather goods. In no other way, he said, can he get the votes necessary for the adoption of the report in the Senate if it carries free hides.

Hides, free, as provided by the House, against the Senate rate of 15 per cent. ad valorem.

Sole leather, 5 per cent., the same as in the House bill, as against the Senate rate of 15 per cent.

Dressed upper leather, 7 1-2 per cent. as against 15 per cent. in both the House and Senate bills.

Boots and shoes, ten per cent. as against 15 in the House bill and 20 per cent. in the Senate bill.

Saddlery and harness, 20 per cent. as against 35 per cent. in the House bill and 40 per cent. in the Senate bill.

BLACKBURN IS TOP MAN WINNINGS REACH $1,000

Unattached Rifleman Stands Easily Ahead of the Canadians in Number of Times He Won a Place—Lieut. Morris Also in Nearly Every List.

Bisley Camp, July 27.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Sergt. A. M. Blackburn of Winnipeg, the "unattached" man with the Canadian Bisley team, is easily the leading prize-winner among the Canadians.

To begin with he has the Prince of Wales' prize, $500 in cash, as well as the Prince of Wales' badge, and N.R.A. badge. With his Birmingham Munition Cup he gets another $125, and he divides the first prize of $175 in the Martin match with another competitor. In the King's Prize, Blackburn got fifteenth place; value $160. His second place in the service rifle championship brought him nothing but glory, and a silver jewel. But Blackburn was an "often mentioned" in the list of minor prizes in other matches. It is quite possible that his winnings will total $1,000 easily.

Next to Blackburn, Lieut. Morris of the 46th Regiment, Bowmanville, is probably next in cash winnings. He takes $200 with his third place in the King's Prize. His Standard of Empire prize includes $105 in cash and his London Small Arms Rifle takes with it $25. Morris also figured well in the lists of winnings in nearly every match in which the Canadians contested.

Staff-Sergt. Bayles of the Royal Grenadiers, Toronto, got $25 with his Wimbleton Cup and has figured up fairly well in other matches. Staff-Sergt. Richardson's All-Comers' Aggregate was a great win, but carried no money with [illegible]. Lieut. Mortimer of Ottawa got a good lot of money prizes.

Sergt. Blackburn of Winnipeg is second in the Service Rifle Championship, and Sergt. Mitchell of Hamilton third. Other Canadians stand as follows in this competition: Staff-Sergt. Richardson, Vancouver, 13th; Lieut. Morris, Bowmanville, 14th; Sergt.-Major Huggins, Hamilton, 26th; Sergt. Freeborn, Hamilton, 39th; Lieut. Smith, Chatham, 41st.

Blackburn's prize in this match is the silver jewel. The other Canadians above get a bronze jewel.

The prizes are awarded to competitors with best scores in the grand aggregate (short ranges), Elkington (long ranges aggregate), and Martinis (rapid-firing aggregate).

In the Martin Challenge Cup Competition Canadians were placed as follows: Morris, Bowmanville, 10th, $25; Mitchell, Hamilton, 23rd, $10; Stack, Truro, 41st; Richardson, Victoria, 78th; Mortimer, Ottawa, 96th; Huggins, Hamilton, 107th; Jones, P.E.I., 102nd; all make $10.

In the Harmsworth, Blackburn, Winnipeg, 17th, $5.

NAVY CAMPAIGN WAS SUCCESSFUL

London, July 27.—The big navy campaign has won the day, and four additional super-Dreadnoughts are to be added to the current year's shipbuilding program.

Reginald McKenna, First Lord of the Admiralty, officially confirmed this statement in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, saying that after a very anxious and careful examination into the shipbuilding conditions of foreign countries, the Government had come to the conclusion that it was desirable to take all necessary steps to insure the laying down of four additional Dreadnoughts in April, to be completed in March, 1912.

IRISH SHOULD BE PATIENT

Montreal, July 27.—Referring to dispute over the succession of Archbishop Duhamel at Ottawa, a "French-Canadian" from the capital writing to Le Canada, says that the Irish element cannot complain of the treatment received at the hands of the papal authorities. He instances the Maritime Provinces, where, although the majority of the Catholic population are French speaking, the bishops are Irish, and also the New England states, where, until quite recently, diocese having a French-speaking majority, remained under the control of Irish bishops.

The correspondent believes that, under the present circumstances, the raising of the race question by the majority in the diocese of Ottawa would simply tend to group the majority against them, and he calls upon all Catholics to wait respectfully for the decision of Rome, when the situation will be fully investigated.

BENGAL TIGER ATTACKS TRAINER

New York, July 27.—Mogul, a sulky Bengal tiger, who has been making no end of trouble for his owners ever since he was added to the attractions of Coney Island, a fortnight ago sprang from the pedestal to which he was chained yesterday afternoon snapped the links and landed solidly on the back of his trainer, Henry Falkendorth, bearing him to the ground.

Falkendorth struggled bravely. Of the five blank cartridges in his revolver not one exploded as he pulled the trigger. One savage blow from the tiger's forepaw had opened his scalp, and when he was finally pulled through the door of the cage by attendants who went to his rescue with iron prods and burning torches he was unconscious. At the hospital it was feared he had concussion of the brain and small hope was held out for his recovery.

MR. PUGSLEY TALKS NAVY

Victoria, B.C., July 27.—That Canada has determined upon having a navy to co-operate with the imperial navy in defence of the Empire was stated by Hon. William Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, before the Board of Trade yesterday. He said:

"I look forward to seeing a number of first-class vessels-of-war, of purely Canadian origin and manned by Canadians, stationed on both the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards.

"The question of the Canadian navy and of drydocks on both the Pacific and the Atlantic will be discussed as soon as the delegates to the imperial defence conference return from England. The outcome of the conference in my opinion will be a decision to construct drydocks on both Canadian seaboards capable of accommodating the largest battleships."

S.S. CAIRNCRAG ON THE ROCKS

Halifax, N.S., July 27.—The steamer Cairncrag, three thousand tons, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, from Boston, for Bathurst, N.B., in ballast, struck on Snorting Rock ledge at the western end of Dover Island, Canso, at daylight yesterday in a dense fog.

She is hard and fast in a bad place. The steamer is commanded by Captain Hyslop. Thick fog was encountered all the way from Boston, and she proceeded by dead reckoning the whole distance. Captain Hyslop miscalculated his position and just before daylight he sighted the breakers ahead.

In a moment the steamer crashed on the rocks and the sea made a clean break over her. The boats were launched and with considerable difficulty the crew of 20 men reached Dover Island.

Water is in the engine room of the steamer and it is a question if she will get off. When he struck the ledges Captain Hyslop had hauled up, hoping to make the Straits of Canso. The Cairncrag was to load deals at Bathurst.

PICHE WILL TELL THE FULL STORY OF MINING DEAL

Arrest of Andrew McKelvie, Former Mayor of New Liskeard and Liberal Candidate for Legislature Causes Big Sensation.

Cobalt, July 27.—The Hudson Bay Mining Co. case will come before Magistrate Atkinson on Thursday.

The arrest of Angus McKelvie, vice-president of the company, on a charge of giving a bribe to John Piche to clear the country, by which the company was able to get title to the property, has caused much excitement. He was one of the most prominent men in this northern country. He was mayor of New Liskeard for two terms, and was the Liberal candidate in the last provincial election, being defeated by R. T. Shillington. He is also superintendent of the Presbyterian Church, and is said to be worth close to a million dollars. With Thomas McCamus, another director, he owns a large sawmill and tracts of timber berths in this country.

Piche claims that he received only $6,000 for skipping the country, and that he was to receive $10,000 a year while away. It is said Piche is ready to expose the whole transaction.

Officials Are Silent.

Toronto, July 27.—Neither Deputy Attorney-General Cartwright nor Provincial Inspector Rogers, who arrested Andrew McKelvie, was willing to discuss the matter at the Parliament buildings yesterday, though it was virtually admitted that Piche's confession led to the arrest. They would neither say whether Piche's confession implicated any one else nor if McKelvie had made a statement when arrested. The Attorney-General is out of the city and could not be seen.

Piche will be the star witness at the hearing of McKelvie's case on Thursday, and it is said he will tell all he knows.

The arrest, it is said, undoubtedly followed a full confession by John Piche, who was charged with accepting a $25,000 bribe to abstain from giving evidence in an action between the Attorney-General and one Henry Thompson, a real estate man of New Liskeard, regarding the title to the Hudson Bay Mine.

Other arrests are expected to follow.

TWO BAD FIRES THIS MORNING

Saw-Mill at Burnham's Point and Florence & Sons Ware-House Destroyed—Cause of Conflagation Not Known Losses Will Be Heavy

Two very destructive fires occurred this morning at an early hour, and as a result the saw-mill of the Peterborough Lumber Company, situated on the property known as Burnham's Point, was burned to the ground, and the large frame warehouse, used by D. Florence & Son, at the south-west corner of Bethune and Simcoe streets, was also destroyed. The loss in both cases will be heavy, and in the former, a large number of men will be thrown out of work.

What caused the fires is not known, although is is thought that in the case of the latter, a combustion caused by the large amount of rags in the building at the time may have started a blaze, while at the saw-mill, the sawdust may have caught fire under or near the mill, and been smouldering for a long time, only to break out in a blaze at an unexpected moment.

No alarm was sent in from the scene of the fire, although there are two nightwatchmen employed during the night. The blaze was first noticed by Chief Howard, who sent in the alarm to the fire station, but it was afterwards learned that one of the watchmen had noticed the fire when it first started, but the blaze gained headway with such rapidity that his work was of no avail. By the time the firemen arrived at the saw mill the structure was enveloped in fierce flames, and as no hydrants were in the vicinity, the brigade could accomplish very little in the way of saving the property. The fire engine was sent for, but on its arrival it could not be put into service, and the firemen then did their best to prevent the lumber piles and buildings nearby from catching fire. There was not a breath of wind at the time, and for this reason, the loss is small to what it would have been, had the fire spread to the other property.

The saw mill is a complete loss, as all that remains is the twisted and broken machinery and the large furnace, which was encased in a brick building, of which parts of the wall were knocked down.

The insurance is small and representatives of the company cannot place the loss at any correct amount.

SECOND FIRE.

It was while the firemen were at the fire at the Peterborough Lumber Co.'s property, that the blaze at the warehouse was noticed. The brigade hastened with all possible speed, but as in the case of the first, the building was a mass of flames when they arrived. Seven streams of hose were turned on to the conflagration with little avail, and the firemen then turned their attention to the many frame buildings close by, and fortunately no further destruction occurred. It was learned this morning that two employees of the warehouse were sleeping in the building at the time, and they were awakened just in time to escape being badly burned. Mr. Florence, the proprietor, was awakened by people pounding at his door, and this was the first intimation he had of the building being on fire. He stated this morning that he had very little insurance and his loss would be heavy.

TUESDAY, JULY 27, 1909.

WHAT ARE THEY AIMING AT?

"This is undoubtedly the impression which the procession of statesmen who appeared before the Conference sought to leave. It was a deliberate, organized and harmonious effort to stamp indelibly upon the minds of the "moulders of opinion" from the scattered colonies the specific anxiety which has been weighing upon the souls of the men upon the watch-towers of the Mother Country. Mr. Nichols apparently was one of the Canadian delegates who took the impression.

"There seem to have been other delegates who were armor-plated against it. They knew better. Lord Rosebery, Sir Edward Grey, the Prime Minister and Mr. Balfour could not fool them. They had been studying this subject out in Canada before they sailed, and they were not to be misled by panic-striken and excited London politicians who were so near to the situation that they could not see it with the clearness of vision enjoyed by the cool-headed gentlemen from the diplomatic centres of Canada.

"In fact, these armor-proof delegates of ours knew that this was not the real issue at all. The creatures of 'Downing Street' might talk a jingo jargon about Imperial defence; but what they really had their eyes upon was the autonomy of Canada. That had aroused their jealousy; and they were striving by indirect means to revive the issue which Lord Metcalfe lost in fighting for, and which Lord Elgin abandoned more than sixty years ago.

"But the Canadian sentinels were on their guard. At the first sight of 'the cloven hoof,' they raised the cry of 'autonomy.' They were ready to fight over again the old battle of Baldwin and Lafontaine, or any other old battle, which would be safer, less expensive and surer of success than the possible Armageddon to which this sinister combination of British publicists called their attention. They will probably be found standing staunchly up in defence of 'self-government in Canada' when the British fleet sails out to battle with the fate of the Empire at stake, and certain long-headed gentlemen in Washington are smiling as they reflect that 'States Rights' will be a very good substitute for 'Canadian autonomy!'"—The Montreal Star.

A certain number of our Canadian delegates to the recent great Imperial Press Conference in London would not listen to the statements of the great men of the Empire, Liberal and Conservative, who spoke frequently and impressively of the German peril. So say the Montreal Star and the Winnipeg Telegram, both of which sent delegates. The back-benchers of Canada haughtily declined to be impressed by the hints thrown out by Rosebery, Sir Edward Grey, etc., of the extreme necessity of promptly uniting all parts of the empire into an imperial whole, in view of the truly Napoleonic character of the German peril. Why would these Liberal delegates like Macdonald of the Globe and representatives of the French-Canadian journals not cry "Let the Empire now be welded together!" We leave that to be surmised. Instead of saying in reply to these noble appeals to our loyalty from their own political kin at the very time we Canadians ought to show it if we have it, what was the burden of these balky ones' songs? Always "Canadian Autonomy!" According to them Canada is not to be mixed up in any "cause of empire" at all. If not a separate people, we are fast becoming next door to it. In our opinion THE NEXT ELECTION IN CANADA WILL BE FOUGHT OUT ON THE QUESTION OF EMPIRE. Are we one people from the Southern Cross to the North Star, or are we a crafty and discreet system of colonies, who accept protection from Great Britain while we hatch out autonomic independence. Canada alone bars the way. As for ourselves we believe with the Montreal Star. It looks to us as if, under the present leader Canada was becoming cold. She holds Britain down with a so-called Preference, while she is maturing plans for her own navy, her own army, and virtual independence.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Men are four, he who knows, and knows he knows—he is wise—follow him. He who knows, and knows not he knows—he is asleep — wake him. He who knows not, and knows he knows not—he is a fool—shun him. He who knows not, and knows he knows not—he is a child — teach him.—Arabian Proverb.

The Simcoe "Reformer" doubts that Great Britain said that she was in favor of a Canadian navy, but it admits that Lord Beresford did so. It is such prominent representatives as Lord Beresford that made the Review "sorrowfully conclude" that the wholly Canadian navy idea was supported in Britain.

Winnipeg Telegram (Con.): — The trade figures simply show that the debt of Canada is increasing at the somewhat generous rate of ten million dollars a month. It is a good thing that Canada should have such excellent credit. It is also a good thing that the funds should be available. The debt is distributed over every available source of credit, national, municipal and private in Canada. But the point is, can we stand the pace, and, if we can, will the lender consent to the speed at which we are travelling? It might so happen that an application of the curb would be somewhat harsh. — The Globe.

While the gold movement from the United States is not a cause for present anxiety, it should serve as an instructive lesson. France, with her very large stock of yellow metal, has interposed objections to the speculation upon her bourse in shares of the United States Steel Corporation, upon the reported ground that it might give rise to conditions whereby her gold reserves might be impaired.

We show a total lack of any and all precautions against similar possible drains upon our stock; we permit our thousands of banks to expand the currency almost at will, no matter how seriously this affects the foreign exchange situation. There are some, indeed, who claim the latter is not affected by the former; that gold goes out because we owe the money, and there you are.

But is is clear that there is in Europe to-day no demand for our gold; discount rates are low, and the banking interests there would be only too ready to carry temporary debts for us at low rates. This is not done simply because we have actually made our own money so cheap by the ridiculous mode of supplying it far in excess of needs, that, in effect, we are forcing the gold upon the banks abroad. Some day we shall get our gold back and will have to pay for it, too.—The Banking Law Journal.

The leaning of the East Indian has ever been in the direction of spirituality. He has looked upon his existence as a temporary sojourn. His eyes have been fixed on the hereafter. Now and here he has been looked upon as mere incidentals, unworthy of receiving his prime attention. Manual labor and its resultant, the riches of the world, have not evoked his interest. He has called the world "Maya"—illusion—and his ideal has been to have as little to do with it as possible. That such a person has deteriorated from a material viewpoint is not to be wondered at.

To-day a different philosophy is moving India's masses. It is a philosophy that concerns itself with here and now, and relegates the hereafter to the background. It develops his material life along with the material advancement of the spirit. "Mens sana in corpore sano" is the goal of this new philosophy, which is having a most salutary effect upon the East Indian compelling him to look upon life through properly adjusted lenses, and thus have a sane, worthwhile, working basis of life.

So long as a morbid spirituality ruled the East Indian brain, it inspired the people to slothfulness and standstillism. But to-day the germ of the up-to-date is inspiring India to uplift herself materially. Inspired by new views of life, the East Indian, who for generations has been inoculated with the virus of aversion for physical work, is now eagerly engaged in it. Agricultural, industrial, and commercial occupations have lost the terror of defilement which they possessed for the high-caste Hindu, and he is bringing to these avocations a high scientific knowledge, and consequently uplifting what he regarded to be decadent and commonplace pursuits to the dignity of paying professions.—Witness.

The Newspaper Guy

I saw a man pushing his way through the lines
Of the cops where the wrath of the
"fire fiend" shines.
"The chief?" I inquire, but a fireman replies:
"Oh, no! why, that's one of those newspaper guys."

I see a man walk through the door of a show,
Where great throngs are blocked by the sign "S.R.O."
"Is this the star that no ticket he buys?"
"Star nuthin'! He's one of those newspaper guys."

I see a man start on the trail of a crook,
And he scorns the police, but he brings him to book.
"Sherlock Holmes?" I inquire; someone scornfully cries:
"Sherlock Holmes? Naw, he's one of those newspaper guys."

And some day I'll pass by the great
"Gates of God,"
And see a man pass through unquestioned and bold.
"A saint?" I will ask, and St. Pet-
er'll reply:
"No, he carries a pass—he's a newspaper guy."

Butchers.

The butchers' cattle, of which there were about 700, were all sold. Prime picked lots of heifers and steers, 1000 to 1050 lbs. each, are worth from $5.30 to $5.60; loads of good sold at $5 to $5.25; medium, $4.75 to $5; common, $3.75 to $4.60; cows, $2.25 to $4.25.

Sheep and Lambs.

Three hundred and sixty-five sheep and lambs were on sale. Export ewes sold at $3.50 to $4 per cwt.; rams, $2.50 to $3 per cwt.; lambs, market easier, at $6 to $7.25 per cwt.

Hogs.

Hogs—Market firm, at $8, f.o.b., cars, at country points, and $8.25 to $8.35, fed and watered, and $8.50 to $8.65, off cars.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, July 26.—(Special.)—At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending July 24, were 2200 cattle, 975 sheep and lambs, 1800 hogs and 585 calves. The offerings on the market this morning consisted of 1050 cattle, 400 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 500 calves. There has been no important change in the condition of the market for cattle since this day week, the undertone being firm and prices well maintained, owing to the fact that supplies have not been in excess of the requirements and as the quality of the stock coming forward is steadily improving in weight on account of the good pasturing throut the country, buyers have been more disposed to take larger lots. There was some demand from exporters for top quality steers and a few were bought to complete shipments with, but the bulk of the trade was done for local account and the market was fairly active. Choice steers sold at 6c to 6¼c; good, at 5¾c to 5¾c; fair, at 5c to 5¼c; medium, at 4½c to 4¾c; common, at 3½c to 4¼c, and inferior, at 2½c to 3¼c per lb.

The market for hogs was unchanged from last week, prices being firmly maintained at the advance, on account of the limited supplies arriving and the keen demand for the same from packers and dealers. The market was active with sales of selected lots at $9 to $9.10 per cwt., weighed off the cars. Foreign advices on Canadian bacon last week were steady to firm, but packers state that they are doing little business in this direction, as they have all they can do to supply the local requirements. The local demand for sheep continues good and as the receipts are not in excess of the requirements, prices rule steady at 4c to 4¼c per lb. There is no demand for export account, owing to the fact that at present prices being realized for them in Liverpool they would lose considerable money. A fairly active trade was done in lambs at prices ranging from $4 to $5 each. Calves are coming forward pretty freely for the season and meeting with a good demand at from $2 to $8 each, as per size and quality.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

THE Masquerader

By KATHERINE CECIL THURSTON,

Author of "The Circle," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, 1904, by Harper & Brothers

"No," he said, "I don't think I shall smoke."

She moved nearer to him. "Dear Jack," she said pleadingly, "don't say you're in a bad mood. Don't say you want to postpone again." She looked up at him and laughed a little in mock consternation.

Loder was at a loss.

Another silence followed, while Lillian waited; then she frowned suddenly and rose from the couch. Like many indolent people, she possessed a touch of obstinacy, and now that her triumph over Chilcote was obtained, now that she had vindicated her right to command him, her original purpose came uppermost again. Cold or interested, indifferent or attentive, she intended to make use of him.

She moved to the fire and stood looking down into it.

"Jack," she began gently, "a really amazing thing has happened to me. I do so want you to throw some light."

Loder said nothing.

There was a fresh pause while she softly smoothed the silk embroidery that edged her gown. Then once more she looked up at him.

"Did I ever tell you," she began, "that I was once in a railway accident on a funny little Italian railway centuries before I met you?" She laughed softly and with a pretty air of confidence turned from the fire and resumed her seat.

"Astrupp had caught a fever in Florence, and I was rushing away for fear of the infection, when our stupid little train ran off the rails near Pistoria and smashed itself up. Fortunately we were within half a mile of a village, so we weren't quite bereft. The village was impossibly like a toy village, and the accommodation what one would expect in a Noah's ark, but it was all absolutely picturesque. I put up at the little inn with my maid and Ko Ko—Ko Ko was such a sweet dog—a white poodle. I was tremendously keen on poodles that year." She stopped and looked thoughtfully toward the fire.

"But, to come to the point of the story, Jack, the toy village had a boy doll!" She laughed again. "He was an Englishman—and the first person to come to my rescue on the night of the smashup. He was staying at the Noah's ark inn, and after that first night I—he—we— Oh, Jack, haven't you any imagination?" Her voice sounded petulant and sharp. The man who is indifferent to the recital of an old love affair implies the worst kind of listener. "I believe you aren't interested," she added in another and more reproachful tone.

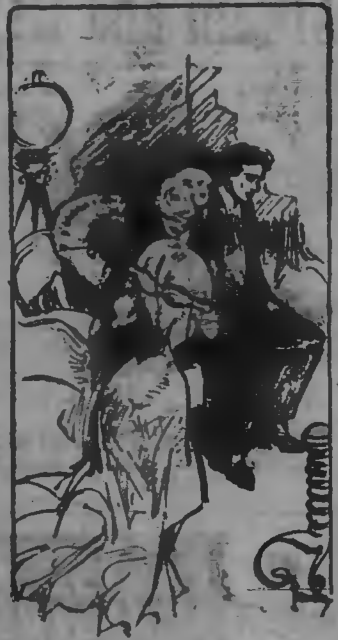
He leaned forward. "You're wrong there," he said slowly. "I'm deeply interested."

She glanced at him again. His tone reassured her, but his words left her uncertain. Chilcote was rarely emphatic. With a touch of hesitation she went on with her tale:

"As I told you, he was the first to find us—to find me, I should say, for my stupid maid was having hysterics farther up the line, and Ko Ko was lost. I remember the first thing I did was to send him in search of Ko Ko"—

Notwithstanding his position, Loder found occasion to smile. "Did he succeed?" he said dryly.

"Succeed? Oh, yes, he succeeded." She also smiled involuntarily. "Poor Ko Ko was stowed away under the luggage van, and after quite a lot of trouble he pulled him out. When it was all done the dog was quite unhurt and livelier than ever, but the Englishman had his finger almost bitten through. Ko Ko was a dear, but his teeth and his temper were both very sharp." She laughed once more in soft amusement.



She drew quite close to Loder and slid gently to her knees.

Loder was silent for a second, then he too laughed—Chilcote's short, sarcastic laugh. "And you tied up the wound, I suppose?"

She glanced up, half displeased. "We were both staying at the little inn," she said, as though no further explanation could be needed. Then again her manner changed. She moved imperceptibly nearer and touched his right hand. His left, which was farther away from her, was well in the shadow of the cushions.

"Jack," she said caressingly, "it isn't to tell you this stupid old story that I've brought you here. It's really to tell you a sort of sequel." She stroked his hand gently once or twice. "As I say, I met this man and we—we became very fond of each other. You understand? Then we quarreled—quarreled quite badly—and I came away. I've remembered him rather longer than I remember most people—he was one of those dogged individuals who stick in one's mind. But he has stayed in mine for another reason"— Again she looked up. "He has stayed because you helped to keep him there. You know how I have sometimes put my hands over your mouth and told you that your eyes reminded me of some one else? Well, that some one else was my Englishman. But you mustn't be jealous. He was a horrid, obstinate person, and you—well, you know what I think of you"— She pressed his hand. "But to come to the end of the story. I never saw this man since that long ago time until—until the night of Blanche's party!" She spoke slowly, to give full effect to her words. Then she waited for his surprise.

But the result was not what she expected. He said nothing, and, with an abrupt movement, he drew his hand from between hers.

"Aren't you surprised?" she asked at last, with a delicate note of reproof.

He started slightly, as if recalled to the necessity of the moment. "Surprised?" he said. "Why should I be surprised? One person more or less at a big party isn't astonishing. Besides, you expect a man to turn up sooner or later in his own country. Why should I be surprised?"

She lay back luxuriously. "Because, my dear boy," she said softly, "it is a mystery! It's one of those fascinating mysteries that come once in a lifetime."

Loder made no movement. "You must explain," he said very quietly.

Lillian smiled. "That's just what I want to do. When I was in my tent on the night of Blanche's party, a man came to be gazed for. He came just like anybody else and laid his hands upon the table. He had strong, thin hands like—well, rather like yours. But he wore two rings on the third finger of his left hand—a heavy signet ring and a plain gold one."

Loder moved his hand imperceptibly till the cushion covered it. Lillian's words caused him no surprise, scarcely even any trepidation. He felt now that he had expected them, even waited for them, all along.

"I asked him to take off his rings," she went on, "and just for a second he hesitated—I could feel him hesitate. Then he seemed to have made up his mind, for he drew them off. He drew them off, Jack, and guess what I saw! Do guess!"

For the first time Loder involuntarily drew back into his corner of the couch. "I never guess," he said brusquely.

"Then I'll tell you. His hands were the hands of my Englishman! The rings covered the scar made by Ko Ko's teeth. I knew it instantly—the second my eyes rested on it. It was the same scar that I had bound up dozens of times, that I had seen healed before I left Santasalare."

"And you? What did you do?" Loder felt it singularly difficult and unpleasant to speak.

"Ah, that's the point. That's where I was stupid and made my mistake. I should have spoken to him on the moment, but I didn't. You know how one sometimes hesitates. Afterward it was too late."

"But you saw him afterward—in the rooms?" Loder spoke unwillingly.

"No, I didn't—that's the other point. I didn't see him in the rooms, and I haven't seen him since. Directly he was gone I left the tent—I pretended to be hungry and bored—but, though I went through every room, he was nowhere to be found. Once"—she hesitated and laughed again—"once I thought I had found him, but it was only you—you, as you stood in that doorway with your mouth and chin hidden by Leonard Kaine's head. Wasn't it a quaint mistake?"

There was an uncertain pause. Then Loder, feeling the need of speech, broke the silence suddenly. "Where do I come in?" he asked abruptly. "What am I wanted for?"

"To help to throw light on the mystery! I've seen Blanche's list of people, and there wasn't a man I couldn't place—no outsider ever squeezes through Blanche's door. I have questioned Bobby Blessington, but he can't remember who came to the tent last. And Bobby was supposed to have kept count!" She spoke in deep scorn, but almost immediately the scorn faded and she smiled again. "Now that I've explained, Jack," she added, "what do you suggest?"

Then for the first time Loder knew what his presence in the room really meant, and at best the knowledge was disconcerting. It is not every day that a man is called upon to unearth himself.

"Suggest?" he repeated blankly.

"Yes. I'd rather have your idea of the affair than anybody else's. You are so dear and sarcastic and keen that you can't help getting straight at the middle of a fact."

When Lillian wanted anything she could be very sweet. She suddenly dropped her half petulant tone; she suddenly ceased to be a spoiled child. With a perfectly graceful movement she drew quite close to Loder and slid gently to her knees.

This is an attitude that few women can safely assume. It requires all the attributes of youth, suppleness and a certain buoyant ease. But Lillian never acted without justification and as she leaned toward Loder, her face lifted, her slight figure and pale hair softened by the firelight, she made a picture that it would have been difficult to criticise.

But the person who should have appreciated it stared steadily beyond it to the fire. His mind was absorbed by one question—the question of how he might reasonably leave the house before discovery became assured.

Lillian, attentively watchful of him, saw the uneasy look, and her own face fell. But, as she looked, an inspiration came to her—a remembrance of many interviews with Chilcote smoothed and facilitated by the timely use of tobacco.

"Jack," she said softly, "before you say another word I insist on your lighting a cigarette." She leaned forward, resting against his knee.

At her words Loder's eyes left the fire. His attention was suddenly needed for a new and more imminent difficulty. "Thanks!" he said quickly. "I—I have no wish to smoke."

"It isn't a matter of what you wish, but of what I say." She smiled. She knew that Chilcote with a cigarette between his lips was infinitely more tractable than Chilcote sitting idle, and she had no intention of ignoring the knowledge.

But Loder caught at her words. "Before you ordered me to smoke," he said, "you told me to give you some advice. Your first command must have prior claim." He grasped unhesitatingly at the less risky theme.

She looked up at him. "You're always nicer when you smoke," she persisted caressingly. "Light a cigarette—and give me one."

Loder's mouth became set. "No," he said, "we'll stick to this advice business. It interests me."

"Yes—afterward."

"No; now. You want to find out why this Englishman from Italy was at your sister's party and why he disappeared?"

There are times when a malignant obstinacy seems to affect certain people. The only answer Lillian made was to pass her hand over Loder's waistcoat and, feeling his cigarette case, to draw it from the pocket.

He affected not to see it. "Do you think he recognised you in that tent?" he insisted desperately.

She held out the case. "Here are your cigarettes. You know we're always more social when we smoke."

In the short interval while she looked up into his face several ideas passed through Loder's mind. He thought of standing up suddenly and so regaining his advantage. He wondered quickly whether one hand could possibly suffice for the taking out and lighting of two cigarettes. Then all need for speculation was pushed suddenly aside.

Lillian, looking into his face, saw his fresh look of disturbance, and from long experience again changed her tactics. Laying the cigarette case on the couch, she put one hand on his shoulder, the other on his left arm. Hundreds of times this caressing touch had quieted Chilcote.

"Dear old boy!" she said soothingly, her hand moving slowly down his arm.

In a flash of understanding the consequences of this position came to him. Action was imperative, at whatever risk. With an abrupt gesture he rose.

The movement was awkward. He got to his feet precipitately. Lillian drew back, surprised and startled, catching involuntarily at his left hand to steady her position.

Her fingers grasped at, then held his. He made no effort to release them. With a dogged acknowledgment, he admitted himself worsted.

How long she stayed immovable, holding his hand, neither of them knew. The process of a woman's instinct is so subtle, so obscure, that it would be futile to apply it to the commonplace test of time. She kept her hold tenaciously, as though his fingers possessed some peculiar virtue. Then at last she spoke.

"Rings, Jack?" she said very slowly. And under the two short words a whole world of incredulity and surmise made itself felt.

Loder laughed.

At the sound she dropped his hand and rose from her knees. What her suspicions, what her instincts were she could not have clearly defined, but her action was unhesitating. Without a moment's uncertainty she turned to the fireplace, pressed the electric button and flooded the room with light.

There is no force so demoralizing as unexpected light. Loder took a step backward, his hand hanging unguarded by his side, and Lillian, stepping forward, caught it again before he could protest. Lifting it quickly, she looked scrutinizingly at the two rings.

All women jump to conclusions, and it is extraordinary how seldom they jump short. Seeing only what Lillian saw, knowing only what she knew, no man would have staked a definite opinion, but the other sex takes a different view. As she stood gazing at the rings her thoughts and her conclusions sped through her mind like arrows—all aimed and all tending toward one point. She remembered the day when she and Chilcote had talked of doubles, her skepticism and his vehement defense of the idea, his sudden interest in the book "Other Men's Shoes," and his anathema against life and its irksome round of duties. She remembered her own first convinced recognition of the eyes that had looked at her in the doorway of her sister's house, and, last of all, she remembered Chilcote's unaccountable avoidance of the same subject of likenesses when she had mentioned it yesterday driving through the park, and with it his unnecessarily curt repudiation of his former opinions. She reviewed each item, then she raised her head slowly and looked at Loder.

He was prepared for the glance and met it steadily. In the long moment that her eyes searched his face it was she and not he who changed color. She was the first to speak. "You were the man whose hands I saw in the tent," she said. She made the statement in her usual soft tones, but a slight tremor of excitement underran her voice. Poodles, Persian kittens, even crystal gazing balls, seemed very far away in face of this tangible, fabulous, present interest. "You are not Jack Chilcote," she said very slowly. "You are wearing his clothes and speaking in his voice, but you are not Jack Chilcote." Her tone quickened with a touch of excitement. "You needn't keep silent and look at me," she said. "I know quite well what I am saying, though I don't understand it, though I have no real proof"— She paused, momentarily disconcerted by her companion's silent and steady gaze, and in the pause a curious and unexpected thing occurred.

Loder laughed suddenly—a full, confident, reassured laugh. All the web that the past half hour had spun about him, all the intolerable sense of an impending crash, lifted suddenly. He saw his way clearly, and it was Lillian who had opened his eyes.

Still looking at her, he smiled—a smile of reliant determination, such as Chilcote had never worn in his life. And with a calm gesture he released his hand.

"The greatest charm of woman is her imagination," he said quietly. "Without it there would be no color in life; we would come into and drop out of it with the same uninteresting tone of drab reality." He paused and smiled again.

At his smile Lillian involuntarily drew back, the color deepening in her cheeks. "Why do you say that?" she asked.

He lifted his head. With each moment he felt more certain of himself. "Because that is my attitude," he said. "As a man I admire your imagination, but as a man I fail to follow your reasoning."

The words and the tone both stung her. "Do you realise the position?" she asked sharply. "Do you realise that, whatever your plans are, I can spoil them?"

Loder still met her eyes. "I realise nothing of the sort," he said.

"Then you admit that you are not Jack Chilcote?"

"I neither deny nor admit. My identity is obvious. I can get twenty men to swear to it at any moment that you like. The fact that I haven't worn rings till now will scarcely interest them."

"But you do admit—to me, that you are not Jack?"

"I deny nothing—and admit nothing. I still offer my congratulations."

"Upon what?"

"The same possession—your imagination."

Lillian stamped her foot. Then by a quick effort she conquered her temper. "Prove me to be wrong!" she said, with a fresh touch of excitement. "Take off your rings and let me see your hand."

With a deliberate gesture Loder put his hand behind his back. "I never gratify childish curiosity," he said, with another smile.

Again a flash of temper crossed her eyes. "Are you sure," she said, "that it's quite wise to talk like that?"

Loder laughed again. "Is that a threat?"

"Perhaps."

"Then it's an empty one."

"Why?"

Before replying he waited a moment, looking down at her.

THAT AWFUL PAIN IN THE BACK

Lots of men, and women too, are limping about the house—groaning in easy chairs—or tossing about the bed—because of that nagging pain in the back. The old standbys—hot vinegar, porous plasters, liniments, etc.,—don't do any good any more. You see, you are a bit older now. The kidneys are not as strong as they used to be. And even those "blistering" liniments and plasters won't stimulate the kidneys.

Your trouble is kidney trouble. The kidneys are not diseased, they are overworked and strained. The bowels and skin—which help the kidneys to rid the system of waste matter—have not been doing their share of the work. The kidneys have had to do too much.

What you need is a medicine to cure the bowels, liver and skin. This medicine must cure the Constipation by acting on the liver and thus make the bowels move regularly and naturally. This medicine must heal and strengthen the kidneys, and thus relieve the congestion. "Fruit-a-tives" is this medicine. It is the most effective Kidney Remedy known, and keeps these vital organs in a vigorous, healthy condition. For aged people, for those who work hard, for tired-out women, "Fruit-a-tives" never fail to stop that severe pain in the back and build up the whole system. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. ## AUTOMOBILE HAS SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Ald. Hicks had a somewhat serious accident last night, and as a result he was compelled to seek aid from a neighbor in the shape of a wheel for his automobile. About eight o'clock he had occasion to take his machine to Mr. George Steven's residence for some trifling repair, and was just coming out of the yard to return down town, when the accident happened. A city street car was coming up the track at the time, and Mr. Hicks endeavored to cross the road ahead of it. Unfortunately, however, he had misjudged the distance, and as a result a collision occurred, which completely demolished a rear wheel of the auto. The fender of the street car was also somewhat badly damaged, but none of the occupants of the car were hurt. Mr. Hicks borrowed a wheel from Mr. Stevens, and was able to return home without trouble.

Good Prizes—Good Fun—Good Time

KRYPTOK BIFOCALS

Kryptok Bifocals are the only perfect invisible, double vision lens made. There is no split or crack to gather dirt, and being made of one piece of Glass, it forms no line between the near and far sight. No cemented double vision lens is entirely satisfactory, because the cement will come loose in time. The Kryptok lenses are fused and welded in such a way as to become solid lens of perfect optical qualities. We have issued a Booklet on these lenses, which covers the question of Bifocals thoroughly, and explains why the Kryptok Bifocals are much superior to the ordinary cemented kind. These Booklets we give away free of charge as well as our Antiseptic Lens Wipers. Call and ask for one.

HOUSE PAINTERS' AND DECORATORS' CONVENTION OPENED THIS MORNING

Many Members of the Association Have Arrived From Outside Points—The Address of Welcome by His Worship Mayor Rush—A Big Convention

The Canadian Convention of the International Association of House Painters and Decorators was opened this morning at the Foresters' Hall, Simcoe street. A large number of the knights of the brush are in attendance from outside points, and the convention promises to be very successful. Many prominent painters and decorators have arrived, and all will be entertained during their three days' visit by the local Association. One room of the hall is being used for the demonstration of different kinds of work, and the articles and materials by which the work is accomplished. Mr. Fred Cook, president of the local Association, opened the meeting, and after the address of welcome by His Worship Mayor Rush, the business before the morning meeting was proceeded with.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

The address of welcome, read by Mayor Rush was as follows:—

MAYOR'S ADDRESS.

Mr. President and Members of the Master House Painters and Decorators' Association of Canada:

Gentlemen,—It gives me great pleasure to welcome you to Peterborough on behalf of the Council and citizens. It is a pleasure to us to have visitors come to Peterborough, and especially when they come, as you do, in a representative capacity, speaking, acting and observing, not only for yourselves, ubt for large numbers of others connected with your association, and whose representatives you are. We are honored by having your annual meeting held here. The mechanics of the country are among the most important members of the community. When the natural products are grown, delved or gathered from the earth, they are fashioned and made available for use by the mechanics, whose work provides the comforts for the people and adds to the wealth of the community. And among those whose work is in this way so beneficial you hold an important place, for a house to be comfortable and home-like must be decorated becomingly and with skill. The work of the house painter and decorator is a growth of civilization, and to some considerable extent the advancement and culture of a people may be judged by the taste shown in the decoration of their homes. We hope that your trade will be benefitted by your annual gathering.

We have in our City Council one of your members, Ald. George H. Duncan, who is one of the most careful and useful members of the Council, and this gives us an added interest in your annual session.

While your meeting is a business one, we hope you will be able to take time to see something of our city. Our manufacturing industries are considerable in number and importance, and our educational institutions, including the new Normal School and Collegiate Institute, are worth visiting. We think we are well provided with parks, and the churches and public buildings are creditable structures, while there are many attractive residences. The lift lock on the canal should certainly be visited, as it is the largest in the world, and these locks are only to be seen in America on this canal.

We hope your meeting will be very beneficial, and that your stay in Peterborough will be so pleasant that you will soon return.

H. RUSH, Mayor.

THE MAYOR ADDRESSES THE CITIZENS RE THE BY-LAWS

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—With reference to the by-laws to be voted upon on Thursday of this week, permit me to say a few words.

The money to be raised for street extensions, all but a small sum, has been spent in former years. In 1904 an expenditure was made in opening Barnardo avenue to Water street. In 1904 and 1906 George street was extended south to the boundary. In 1907 Aylmer street was opened from Lake street to the King Edward school, and Hunter street east to the lift lock. In 1908 Bethune street, at a small expense, was opened to Aberdeen avenue. These extensions cost, up to the end of last year, $20,300.95, against which is to be set $6,000 formerly raised for these purposes, leaving a balance of $14,300.95, and there is provision in the by-law to complete the opening of Aylmer street and to widen Benson avenue to the Normal school.

The first expenditure on filling in the city's property on the water front was made in 1906, and further amounts each year since that, making a total of $4,972.17.

The sums which have been spent for these two purposes, and not provided for, amount to $19,273.12. This must be met, either by the passing of the by-laws, or by raising the sum on the rates, which would require over 2 1-4 mills on the assessment. It is clearly in the interest of the city and of the ratepayers that the by-law should be passed.

Regarding the Smith street bridge, the Council has not only had the plans prepared carefully by the city engineer, but also examined and reported upon by Mr. Francis, of Montreal, and owing to the less cost of maintenance and appearance, as compared with a bridge with steel superstructure, they both recommend the concrete bridge now proposed. The old wooden bridge must be replaced, as it has only been maintained for some years at considerable expense, and it years at considerable expense, and it should be replaced by a bridge that will be permanent, cost little or nothing to maintain, and satisfactory in every way.

Such a bridge is the one proposed, and I hope the ratepayers will also approve of this by-law.

Yours truly,
H. RUSH,
Mayor.

Peterborough, July 27, 1909.

A WAVE OF MISSIONARY ENTHUSIASM SWEEPING OVER THE DOMINION

Fourth Annual Summer School at Whitby, the most Successful in History of Institute—Delegates from Peterborough Churches Attended.

There is certainly a wave of missionary enthusiasm sweeping over Canada. This is shown in the splendid interest taken by the mature men of the churches in the policy and plans of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, adopted at the recent Missionary Congress held in Toronto.

One of the active agencies helping to make possible the realization of the ideal, "the evangelization of the world in this generation," is the Young People's Missionary Movement of the United States and Canada, with its propaganda in the interest of missionary education.

In addition to providing mission text-books and other facilities for use in educating Sunday school scholars and young people regarding the missionary enterprise, the movement conducts summer schools and institutes for the purpose of training leaders to promote this work.

The fourth annual Canadian Summer School or Conference was held at Whitby, Ont., July 2nd to 9th, 1909, and was more largely attended and more successful than any that have preceded it. A number of delegates from Peterborough church were in attendance. The registered attendance this year was 253, including leaders, speakers, missionaries on furlough, and other delegates. There were eight different denominations represented in this delegation, and the closest possible fellowship in thought and effort prevailed.

The movement under whose auspices the conference was held is distinctly interdenominational as well as international in its work. Accommodation was provided for the conference in the splendidly adapted buildings and grounds of the Ontario Ladies' College.

Every day was a busy one from the time of the rising bell at 6.30 in the morning till 10 o'clock at night. The forenoon of each day was given up to hard work, the afternoons being religiously reserved for recreation, while the evenings were taken up with twilight talks on the problem of lifework, out on the lawn and platform meetings in the Assembly Hall. During the first hour of each day the conference was engaged in devotional Bible study under the direction of one of the leaders. Eight Mission Study classes were conducted each morning, six different courses of study being presented. Practical methods of carrying on missionary work in connection with the Sunday School and Young People's Organizations were discussed in the hours devoted to open conferences. At the platform meeting each forenoon, messages were received from those engaged in Home and Foreign Mission work, while at the evening meetings a series of popular lectures were given on the leading non-Christian religions of the world.

This week of work served not only to be the opportunity for training to a large number of young leaders in missionary work, at home, but it helped to prepare a splendid force of young lives for personal service abroad. At the closing meeting 60 of those who were present rose in response to the question as to how many had decided to give themselves to definite missionary service, and 20 of these declared that they had been helped to reach that decision at the conference. Fourteen missionaries at home on furlough were a source of inspiration to the gathering, as were also seven young men and women who are under appointment to sail for the foreign mission fields this fall.

Moonlight Excursion on the Str. Otonabee on Wednesday at 8 p.m. from Wolfe St. Wharf Gentlemen 20c. Ladies 15c. 57 Band will be in attendance.

NO CIRCUS IS LIKELY TO COME

To Peterborough This Summer—Barnum-Bailey Show Not Booked

It is not likely that Peterborough will have a circus this year and because one has not been billed the citizens have given up hope of seeing a circus here this season. It was rumored that the Barnum-Bailey show would come to this city, but the report to that effect did not originate on good authority and yesterday Mr. E. Jones, secretary of the Turf Club, which has the renting of the ground, that the circus would require to use stated to the Review that no circus had engaged the grounds yet.

He said that there had been some talk of a circus coming in August, but no arrangements had been made to date.

THE NASSR AIRSHIP

Great and Expensive Attraction Secured For This Years Central Canada Fair.

The Central Canada Exhibition Association has been fortunate in securing as one of its best attractions for this year's big fair—September 10th to 18th—the Nassar Airship, whose daily flights will provide a spectacle never before witnessed in this part of the country. There is no subject receiving more careful scientific attention at the present time than that of aerial navigation. While it is perhaps in its initial stage of development, the possibility of ascensions with the ship under perfect control is fully demonstrated by the Nassar invention. Upon the ship, which will be seen and operated at the fair, over $15,000 has been spent. The construction was done almost wholly by its navigator, Tony Nassar, of Toledo, Ohio. The big gas bag which supports the framework and engine of the airship is 78 feet in length, has a diameter of 16 feet, and when inflated with hydrogen gas has a capacity of nearly 13,000 cubic feet. The airship is not to be confused with the old hot air balloon, and as one of the latest scientific achievements of the world it will be a great attraction at the fair. It has been contracted for by the Central Fair directors at very heavy expense. There will be daily ascensions unless a gale happens to be blowing.

Charity Board Met

A meeting of the charity board was held last night when routine business occupied the attention of the members.

REVIEW OF COLD STORAGE SYSTEM IN PETERBOROUGH

Temperature of Building From 15 to 25 Degrees Above Zero—The Grairty Brine System Explained.

A Review reporter this morning paid a visit to the cold storage plant of the firm of Scott & Hogg, East Peterborough. To suddenly descend from an atmosphere of 77 or 78 degrees in the shade into a mid-winter temperature, of anywhere from 10 to 25 degrees, was a most pleasurable sensation. Outside all was hot and dusty. People carefully chose the shady side of the street, and looked with longing glances toward the cool waters of the river, three blocks away. Inside all was cool and refreshing. The frosty walls and icy ceilings called up visions of the skating rink and toboggan slide.

This is the second year that the plant has been running in full working order. So far the venture has been a most successful one, and from present indications it will continue to be so.

As its name implies, the building is, first and last, a storage house for all kinds of perishable goods. The company has several agents making the rounds of the smaller villages, whose sole mission is to collect and purchase from the surrounding farmers, large quantities of the products of their various farms. These, when brought to the store-house, are kept on hand until orders for consignments are received, when they are shipped in car loads by express.

The space within the store-house is divided into several different-sized rooms, by insulated partitions. A number of these rooms are set aside for the farming products, and the remainder for the storage of fruits and various other products. The room which is given up to the storage of butter, is about 4,000 cubic feet in volume. This means that, when the plant is working at its utmost capacity, about two hundred thousand pounds of butter can be stored here. The egg compartment contains about 40,000 cubic feet, and is capable of holding about three hundred thousand dozens of eggs. The space given to fruit is a little over 24,000 cubic feet, and, in season, that to poultry and meats about 10,000 cubic feet.

The walls of the building itself are all tightly insulated to prevent the cold air within from coming in contact with the warm air without, and so defeating the purpose of the system. Even at that, there is some escapage of the cold air, as there is a perceptible difference in temperature between the air in direct contact with the building and that at a short distance from it.

The system in use to bring about the needful degree of temperature in the various rooms is what is commonly known as Gravity Brine system. In brief, the system is composed of a series of hollow iron pipes in which a freezing mixture of brine is kept constantly circulating. These pipes are arranged in two distinct sets, one called the primary set, and the other the secondary. The function of the primary set is to cool the brine of the secondary set, and the function of the secondary set is to cool the air in the storage rooms proper. In order to accomplish this, the air in each room is kept circulating by electric fans, over its own secondary set of coils, and is thus kept at an almost constant temperature.

The primary coils are arranged in wooden pits at the top of the building, and are surrounded by a mixture of ice and salt, which keeps the brine within the coils at the desired temperature. This temperature may be varied at will by merely varying the quantity of salt in the mixture. Commonly the air of the egg storage department is kept at a temperature of about 25 or 26 degrees, while that of butter room is at 15 or 18 degrees.

The firm has its own ice house in connection with the building, which, when full, contains about 4,000 cubic feet of ice.

On the whole, the plant is one of the most interesting in the city, and one of the most up-to-date and well-organized in the province.

THE BY-LAWS

To Be Voted on Thursday, July 29th.

Why You Should Vote For the Smith Street Bridge By-law.

1. BECAUSE the old bridge is "Condemned".
2. BECAUSE the northern part of the city cannot exist without this means of communication.
3. BECAUSE the loss in assessable values in one year would pay for the new bridge.
4. BECAUSE the proposed concrete bridge is just as cheap to build and far less expensive thereafter than any other sort of bridge. All but the cement is "Local Industry".

Why You Should Vote For the Street Extension and Filling-in By-law.

1. BECAUSE the money for street extension had to be spent and has been spent. Do you want it on the debenture rate or on next year's rate? If on the debenture rate, vote for the By-law.

Why Vote for the Filling-in?

1. BECAUSE this large strip of land along the C.P.R. spur is worth $20,00000 to Peterborough. We get it for ten thousand. It will be the future market-place for the wives of our workers. The present market property is too valuable for merely market purposes.

GOVERNMENT PATROL BOAT IN THE CITY BEING REPAIRED

The Naiad is a trim-looking craft with a 4 1-2 compound engine, and return boiler, which drives her along at a speed of ten miles an hour. The crew is composed of Capt. Carson, Bert Hall, of Kincardine, mate, and P. Deveney, of Belleville, fireman. The Naiad is 52 feet long and 9 feet beam, and handsomely fitted up with all necessary conveniences. She is used on Lake Simcoe, and covers the waters of part of the river Trent, Rice Lake, Otonabee river, Stony Lake, Lovesick, Buckhorn, Pigeon Lake, Sturgeon Lake, Cameron Lake, Balsam Lake and Cameron Lake.

PETERBORO PRESBYTERY' IN SESSION THIS MORNING

The Presbytery of Peterborough met in St. Paul's church this morning. Rev. James Skene, moderator, presided. There were present, besides the moderator, the Rev. Messrs. McDonald, Johnston, MacLennan, Burns, Keith, Stirling, Pogue, McKenzie, Brown, Thomson and Dr. Marsh.

Mr. Skene reported that he had met with the people of Mill street church, Port Hope. A majority desired to retain the services of Rev. W. H. Brokenshire, and a minority opposed this. After parties were heard pro and con, a committee consisting of Rev. Messrs. Skene, McKenzie, Johnston and Thomson to meet with the congregation, considered the entire situation, and will report at the next meeting of the Presbytery.

A unanimous call from Omemee and associated stations was presented by Rev. R. Pogue in favor of Rev. Donald Currie of Hillsdale, in Barrie Presbytery. The call was signed by 146 members and 45 adherents, and accompanied by a guarantee of stipend of $1,000 and manse. The call was sustained, and the clerk was instructed to transmit it with relative documents to the clerk of Barrie Presbytery. Provisional arrangements were made for the induction of Mr. Currie at Omemee, Rev. Mr. Skene, moderator, to preside, Rev. R. Pogue to preach, and narrate the steps towards the call. Rev. Mr. Keith will address the minister and Rev. Mr. Johnston the people. Rev. Mr. Pogue and Mr. Lamb were appointed to support the call before the Presbytery of Barrie.

The records of Springville, Pontypool, Janetville and Ballyduff were examined and attested as having been healthy and correctly kept.

Dr. Marsh brought before the Presbytery the need of rearranging certain fields of the Presbytery. After full discussion Rev. Messrs. Pogue, McDonald and Burns were appointed a permanent committee for the rearrangement of the fields mentioned.

The nomination of a professor for Halifax college, and the consideration of the Synod meeting at an earlier or later date were deferred to next meeting.

Alleged Car Robbers at Ottawa Gave This City as Their Address

An Ottawa paper tells of the arrest of Frank Woods and Edward White on the charge of car robbery in Ottawa. # MORE ABOUT THE DOCTOR

Under the heading of very much alive, the Ottawa Citizen says;—

Hamilton, Ont., July 52. — Magistrate Jelfs on Saturday fined "Dr." Pelletier, who opened at 68 Hughson street, south, a few days ago, $50 for practising medicine contrary to the Ontario Medical Act. He claimed he held a doctor's certificate in the United states and thought that that was all that was necessary to enable him to practice here.

Evidently this is the same person so has figured so considerably in Ottawa and Hull recently, and who was supposed to be almost killed near Peterborough since he was fined here.

A young woman from London, England, named McMillan, died in mid-Atlantic on board the Empress of Ireland.

THE CHAMPION HEAVYWEIGHT PLEASES THE TORONTO FANS

Made Hit at Hanlan's Point—Good Bout With Laura—A Line on the Title Holder.

Last night's issue of the Toronto Star contains the following interesting dope on the work of Jack Johnson the champion heavyweight;—

Despite the wind and rain, Jack Johnson, the colored heavyweight champion, appeared at Hanlan's Point on Saturday night in the open air and boxed a couple of rounds with two local men, "Chummy" Banks (colored) and Frank Laura.

Banks was too small to make much of a showing against the champion, and Johnson merely shoved him around the ring. Johnson is a giant, but young Laura, much developed since he boxed in the Toronto amateur tournaments, was more of a match in height and reach than Banks, and gave a very interesting exhibition. Laura landed a few punches himself, but the good-natured Johnson only smiled and showed his gleaming white teeth, with all cavities well filled with gold. Incidentally Johnson made Laura's nose bleed, a corner-lot sign of victory.

After the bout Johnson won the hearts of everybody with a speech that was both modest and surprisingly clever. He said;—

"Ladies and gentlemen,—With your very kind attention I would like to make a few remarks concerning Mr. James J. Jeffries and myself. Most of you read the sporting pages, so that most of you know that there has been posted on my behalf the sum of ten thousand dollars with the Chicago American of Chicago, and five thousand dollars with the New York Journal, of New York City. The sporting writers everywhere are aware of this, as is Mr. James J. Jeffries. This money having been posted for some considerable time—ample time for it to be covered by Mr. Jeffries—there came a demand for a contest between the next best man in the ring, and the sporting writers agreed that Mr. Stanley Ketchel (the middleweight champion) was that person. Therefore a match was arranged. Mr. Ketchel posted $5,000 in New York City, and the contest will take place on the 5th of October in San Francisco.

"Let us hope that the Ketchel-Johnson match takes place according to schedule, and that the Jeffries-Johnson match is arranged.

"Then let us hope that the best man wins. Thank you, ladies and gentlemen" and bowing as gracefully as possible, he retired.

The rain may have slowed Johnson up somewhat on Saturday night, but he did not have nearly as much speed as Jeffries."

Johnson will visit Toronto again at an early date.

DREW THE COLOR LINE.

'Twas Saturday morning. He sauntered slowly along the west side of Yonge street. Occasionally he would stop and gaze meditatively into the store windows.

He was big and burly and black, just as black as any cannibal Bangala negro who goes wandering around the African forests looking for a meal or a fight. A fight and a meal just mean the same thing to the wild Bangala. After a successful fight with his "brudder" tribes, well—the conqueror dines. Maybe 'tis the same thing with our friend. Maybe 'tis the same thing with our friend. After a successful fight, he, too, dines high. Unlike the wild Bangala, however, his front teeth are not filed to a point, and thereby kept sharp. No, that's one of the fine-pointed differences that exist between cannibalism and civilization.

He no longer wants to dine off a succulent missionary chop. A steak of gin-soaked trader charms his palate no more. He's still looking for fight, though, and maybe he anticipates eating up a white man ere long. (Who knows? He wandered along the sidewalk—thinking, just thinking. Pedestrians on business and pleasure bent turned and looked at the big colored gent. Two newsies spotted him.

"Dat's Johnsing," said one to the other.

"Gee, ain't he a big guy," was the reply.

"Say, youse tink youse some fighter, eh. Go and take a wallop at him and see what he'll do."

"Garn, what d'ye tink I am. I ain't no Tommy Burns. I draw'd de color line years ago. 'Sides, what's de use of beaten' up one of dese prizefighters, anyway?"

LINES ON SPORT

The first of August will soon be here and according to the O.H.A. rules no hockey player can play with a team unless he has been a resident of the place the team is representing by the above date.

By all accounts Lindsay will not have much of a team to defend the intermediate mug this year, as several of their star players have left the muddy town. Still Peterborough could lend the sports up there a few city leaguers.

What about the Rugby game here for the coming season. Nothing like starting early.

That runner who ran one hundred miles should be classed with Edward Payson Weston. Both would make a hit if placed in a circus cage and exhibited around the country.

Below will be found the figures showing the work in the field of those players of the West End team who have played one or more games.

An odd incident occurred in a semi-professional game in Chicago the other day. The umpire had a hole in his blouse so that it would not hold extra balls not in play. Therefore he placed a ball on the ground, back of the pitcher. A batsman drove a hit through the pitcher's box, and the batted ball hit the one on the ground, with the result that one ball bounded to the shortstop and the other to the second baseman. Both fielders threw to the first baseman almost simultaneously, and he, seeing two balls coming, dodged out of the way.

Tom Longboat and Alf Shrubb will meet in a 12-mile race at Scarboro Beach track, Toronto, on Saturday night.

George Anderson, trainer for Bobby Kerr, had a number of medals stolen from him in Boston.

Baltimore beat Toronto yesterday, 3—1. Doc Newton was wild, and errors by himself and McDonald did the rest.

Jimmy Jones made a home run with the bases full, and Montreal won from Providence by 6—0.

The following players are requested to be at the G.T.R. station at 11.45 Thursday morning for the match with Lindsay: R. J. Macdonald, Dr. Gowan, S. Ray, S. T. Medd, A. Mowat, Rev. Mr. Henderson, D. Walker, H. D. Burnett, W. H. Blanchette, A. H. Stratton, J. N. Barber, T. F. Matthews, W. G. Morrow, P. Campbell, D. M. Bull, F. D. Kerr, W. H. Bradburn.

The tickets are to be had from the captain.

QUALITIES NECESSARY FOR WINNING BALL CLUB

There are three things that are absolutely necessary for a ball team to make it a championship possibility, and there may be others, says Manager McGraw, of the Giants. No ball club can be a champion unless it has a great pitching staff, a squad of fast men on the bases and a club of good hitters. Then again, there is a certain kind of feeling that there must pervade the whole team. It is a pretty hard thing to describe, but it is something like each man pulling for the other, and all of them believing that the combination is a winner. In other words (and Mac pulled this one, on the level), it is what the French call esprit de corps.

It is seldom that we find the exact combination in a club and that is why a team can go so long sometimes without winning a pennant. All the good management and intelligent direction of players isn't worth a cent unless the players have got the brains to absorb it. I would rather have an ordinary player with a quick brain than a wonder who couldn't think quick when the time came. It has got to where the wooden-headed ball player is a thing of the past in the big leagues. All the players must be quick thinkers, or they have to move back to the minors.

Some men have what we call ball playing instinct. They seem to know exactly what to do at the right time and do not have to take time to consider. They are natural ball players and their peculiar minds direct them what do do without any effort. I have seen some young men who were highly educated and brilliant conversationalists who were regular blockheads on a ball club. It was not that they didn't have the brains. If given plenty of time they could probably outwit the others, but in base-ball we must have the who can think and act simultaneously—on the jump. Thoughts must come to him in a flash and not after mature deliberation. That's what I mean by quick thinkers, and they are the boys that must be on a team that wins a championship.

Of the three requisites named the greatest is wallop. You cannot run bases unless you get on them, and a game cannot be won by pitching. The pitching is needed to hold the other fellows down. The batters must do the winning.

BOBBY KERR'S TRAINER TELLS ABOUT SPRINTER'S RACES

George Anderson, trainer of Bobby Kerr, arrived home on Saturday morning and the veteran trainer is talking rather sorrowfully of the loss of the English championships by Bobby. He stated there was nothing to it but that Bobby should have reached England a couple of weeks sooner than he did or that he should have travelled on a better ship. The Ottawa gave them a stormy voyage and they were sick. Bobby was sick for four days and caught a cold. One of his legs was strained a little and he had to do nothing but light work the first week. The second week it rained and the races had to be run between storms. Kerr was unable to undergo any gruelling work such as he needed after his voyage till a couple of days before the A.A.A. The first Saturday after his arrival Kerr ran a race and won but Cartmell and Walker were a little too much. Bobby was unfortunate in the choice of positions in the championships. He drew between this pair in the 100 and drew the outside lane in the 220, which, with two turns, made his distance four or five yards more than Cartmell's, and at that he only lost by a yard or so.

Anderson is not badly put out, though. He says, Kerr has beaten Cartmell twice in the 100 and once in the 220, and has Walker dodging him all over England.

"I've been around long enough to know a sprinter when I see him, and that man Walker isn't any 9 2-5 man. He's a 10 second man, and he only made that distance once or twice. He can't start right, and has a poor finish. Practising his start, he has lost sight of his finish, which is almost what Bobby did, and he can never beat Bob or Cartmell," said the trainer. "Bobby and Cartmell are a pair of world-beaters. Either one is liable to win when they race, and they are the best men in the world."

Anderson left Kerr a few days before the Irish games, but said Bobby was feeling good then, and prophesied that he would win, and it came true.

Walker was doing some diplomatic work getting out of Kerr's way, and the only chance Bobby has of meeting him will be this week.

Kerr raced in Dublin on Saturday, but no reports of the race have come through yet. Next Saturday he races at Belfast, and this week a meet will be held at Birmingham. It is possible Kerr may not take the chance of meeting Walker by making the trip to Birmingham, as he wants to lay off till he feels well enough to win. Walker is taking his time, and Kerr is wise to take his.

Anderson confirmed the story published in the Spectator last week to the effect that Cartmell and Walker would be here next year. He said Kerr would race them every time he had a chance or that they would run, and Anderson has no fear of the results on a Canadian track, with Canadian air.

JUNIOR TEAMS COMPLAIN OF SR. MANAGERS

The Intermediate Baseball League has certainly proved to be an utter failure this year. For some reason or other Peterborough does not seem to be able to support and encourage two leagues at once. That, perhaps is one reason why the leagues has been so unsuccessful and then there is the other reason. The managers of the senior team, needing new players, naturally turned to the intermediate ranks, and claimed the best men, thus leaving the league in a crippled state. While some of these intermediates have undoubtedly proved fast enough for senior company, still there are a lot who certainly have not. That being the case, these might just as well have been allowed to stay in the intermediate teams, where they belong and so leave the league in a little better way than it now is. It is to be hoped that next year the various managers will get to work earlier in the season, and not remain idle so long, that they will have to recruit entire teams from the intermediate league, just after that organization has got nicely started.

CRICKET

The fourth test match Australia vs. England, began sensationally yesterday at Manchester. Australia made 147 runs in the first innings and England 119.

WHAT BECOMES OF THE CUP?

What becomes of cup?

What will be done with the intermediate baseball league's cup? The Review presented a cup to the league two years ago and last year the Strathconas won it. The Straths are now playing senior ball, however, and the intermediate league has bit the dust. What will be done about it? Will the Straths calmly retain the cup for another season, or will someone make a last determined effort to place the intermediate league on its feet once more?

THE STOKES TELL OF THE DARING MIDNIGHT HOLDUP

The Ottawa Free Press says:

"Give up the money, or we'll kill you!"

John Stokes, leader of the Bulgarian gypsy camp, in the police court this morning, declared that the above ultimatum was tendered him by a deputation of Mexican gypsies at midnight in his tent on the Richmond road one week ago. The deputation included, Stokes declared, Steven George, Peter Mitchel, Peter Stevio, Stephen John and Spido John, all of whom were present in court to-day charged with holding up Stokes and robbing him of $200. The man who pushed a revolver under Stokes' nose and gave him the choice of handing over $200 or losing his life, has not been seen since, but Stokes was sure of the identity of the others.

The court room was a rainbow of color this morning when the gypsy case was called. A dozen dusky queens in scarfs and sashes of green and crimson, with earrings and necklets of gold coins, occupied seats among the spectators or along the witness' bench.

Crown Attorney Ritchie prosecuted the Mexicans, while Messrs. A. E. Fripp and Gordon Henderson handled the defence side. Stokes declared that while he was being held up Peter Mitchel had seized his wife by the neck and had threatened to plunge a big knife into her throat if she continued shouting. As it was, Mitchel had cut Mrs. Stokes somewhat severely with the weapon. The complainant stuck to his story despite a severe cross-examination by the counsel for the Mexicans.

Mrs. Stokes' evidence was along the same lines as that given by her husband. Mitchel, she declared, had grasped her by the throat and placed the point of a large knife at her breast, telling her he would kill her, too, unless she kept quiet. The witness here showed a deep cut on her breast, which she alleged resulted from a stab by Mitchel.

Hay Wango, a member of the Stokes camp, swore that he was a ranch owner at High River, Alta. This witness also told a similar story regarding the midnight robbery as related by the Stokes.

The case was still in progress at 1 o'clock, and will be continued during the afternoon.

DANNY SIMONS WILL PLAY FEATURE PART THIS SEASON

Cohan and Harris, the theatrical producers, evidently value the services and recognize the ability of Mr. Danny Simons. They have given him the part of "The Unknown," a principal comedy role in "Little Johnny Jones," the popular musical play, in which he played the part of McGee so successfully last season. It was the intention of the producers to give Mr. Simons a character part in a new Cohan play this season, but "Little Johnny Jones" will again be on the road, and they [illegible] to give him an opportunity to shine as "The Unknown," one of the best roles in the piece.

Mr Simons received a wire Sunday to report for rehearsals in New York at once, and left yesterday afternoon to join the company.

PADDLER WANTS BETTER LAMPS

On the Launches in the River—Ones in Use Not Strong Enough

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I wish to say something about a matter that is causing considerable comment on the part of canoeists and rowers on the river.

I am of the opinion that something should be done towards making owners of launches carry stronger lamps on their boats. The lights they have are farcical in the matter of supplying any illumination, and simply comply with the regulations requiring the employment of lamps. They don't cast a light for any distance, and nightly the canoeists are having narrow shaves from collisions.

The launch owners say that the canoeists should have lights on their crafts, but the suggestion, in the face of it is absurd, and the complaint might as well come from the larger boats if they did not have sufficiently strong lights or were not so large that they were conspicuous enough to be noticed by the paddlers.

I have been in several launches myself this summer, and with the small lights know it is difficult to even see the buoys in the water.

Yours truly,
PADDLER.

Next Saturday's Review will contain a theatrical interview of local interest.

THE POLICE ARE AFTER PRINTER

The police are making a round of the printing offices in this city in an effort to locate Elias Norman, a young boy who has served about a year and a half in the printing trade. The communication requesting that they find him offers a reward of fifty dollars for his apprehension and detention. The card is from Ingersoll, Ont.

The police thought they had found the youth in one of the city offices but it was discovered that he was not the one they wanted.

SMITH STREET BRIDGE — You Should Vote to Carry These Two By-Laws Thursday, July 29 — WATER FRONT & FILLING IN

The new Smith-st. bridge is absolutely necessary. The one now in use is condemned and actually unsafe. A bridge of some form must be built, and why not of concrete? It is the modern way, durable, will last for a half century and nothing for up-keep. The northern part of the city requires a new bridge.

Vote for the Bridge By-law.

The "filling in" by-law is to provide funds to make the water front from Simcoe to Sherbrooke-sts., useful. It will be worth thousands of dollars to the city in years to come. It is only carrying out what has been in the public mind for 25 years. Do it now! Be progressive! Send your city a step ahead. Don't let it be said the city hasn't snap enough to improve. If we don't improve we stand still.

The street extension is one with the filling in. Both indicate civic improvement. The development of the lower part of the city calls for additional communication. The new streets opened will be built up and pay taxes. This will bring in a revenue. You are only investing the money. Not a cent will be wasted. It all goes to help progress.

MRS. BURWASH MAY TESTIFY

Cobalt, July 28.—Interest is intense in the T. & H. B. bribery case, but so far no further steps have been taken by the authorities, though it is understood that the crown will subpoena Mrs. Adam Burwash, wife of Adam Burwash the Indian agent at New Liskeard, and a sister of John Piche. Her husband will also be called. Mrs. Burwash is very annoyed at the manner in which her brother has been treated and is prepared to tell everything she knows regarding the early history of the company and the alleged bribing of John Piche, to whom she has remained very closely since his arrest. She is said to be conversant with all the details of the organization of the company and has intimate knowledge of all that transpired later. Adam Burwash, too, is understood to be ready to tell the crown everything he knows and their evidence together with Piche's, is expected to be sensational.

PRODUCTION OF CEMENT

Toronto, July 28.—Over-production and economy exercised in manufacturing by the larger and more up-to-date plants have brought about the present situation in the cement industry which has resulted in the closing down of several of the smaller plants, according to D. J. Johnson, manager of the Lehigh Portland Cement Co.

One reason for the present low quotation, Mr. Johnson said, was the fact that rock was being used by the larger plants now, while marl, a more expensive article, was almost entirely used in the production of cement a few years ago. At the Lehigh plant at Belleville, which, he stated, was the largest and most complete in the world, rock was entirely used.

REPORTS FAVOR THE NELSON RIVER

Ottawa, July 28.—M. J. Butler, Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, leaves next week for Western Canada for an inspection trip over all the new railways building under Government subsidy between Winnipeg and the coast.

At Winnipeg Mr. Butler will meet Chief Engineer Armstrong of the Hudson Bay Railway survey, and will go over reports of the field parties, that have now practically completed the surveys of the two alternate routes, via Churchill and Nelson Rivers. Reports sent into the Department so far all seem to favor the Nelson River route.

THAW WHIPPED YOUNG GIRLS STARTLING TESTIMONY GIVEN

Lodging-Housekeeper Testifies That Stanford White's Slayer Was Accustomed to Bring Young Women to Her House and Thrash Them.

White Plains, N.Y., July 28.—Harry M. Thaw sat in the Supreme Court here yesterday and heard a woman's testimony that made his pallid face flush. He saw a pearl-handled dog whip exhibited, and he heard the witness swear that she had seen him wield it on the bare flesh of young girls.

The prisoner's wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, was in court and heard most of the testimony which was of such a nature that Justice Mills preceded his presentation with the warning that "no woman should stay in the court room unless she be willing to hear everything."

The witness was Miss Susan Merrill, a buxom, pink-cheeked woman of about 35 years, and she opened a new chapter in the life of Stanford White's slayer. Her testimony was in marked contrast to that of two alienists who went on the stand and gave Thaw a clean bill of health, declaring that in their opinion he was sane. Summarized, her testimony was that during the three years named, she kept in succession two New York lodging-houses when Thaw rented rooms under assumed names and to which he brought at various times, more than 200 girls. After Thaw's imprisonment, she said she paid these women at least $26,000 as the price of their silence and to "keep them from bothering Thaw's wife or his mother." One of them, who, she said, passed as Thaw's wife, received $7,000. The money came from Thaw.

After the telling of Thaw's engaging the rooms, the mysterious package which was brought to court yesterday by Clifford W. Hartridge, Thaw's former counsel, was unwrapped and a pearl-handled whip about three feet long was flashed into view. With this before the eyes of the court and spectators, the woman related a series of stories about finding Thaw on several occasions lashing the girls upon their bare arms and bodies. Thaw, she said, had posed as a theatrical agent and had lured the girls to his rooms with promises of engagements. When she remonstrated with him, she testified, his excuse was that the girls "weren't smart enough and could not fill their positions and deserved a beating." She testified further that Thaw had frequently behaved in a violent manner in her presence and that she thought his acts irrational.

District Attorney Wm. Travers Jerome had full charge of the case for the state yesterday and it was he who brought out the damaging testimony against Harry Thaw.

Under cross-examination by Chas. Morschauser, counsel for Thaw, the witness was attacked fiercely. He succeeded in bringing out the fact that she had been recently arrested on a charge of perjury after an unsuccessful attempt to recover $10,000 damages from a man.

Aside from the Merrill woman's testimony the alienists took up the remainder of the proceedings and testified in Thaw's behalf. Dr. Britton D. Evans, who made a report two years ago declaring Thaw insane, said today that he had reversed his opinion, explaining that the report made two years ago was for the private guidance of Thaw's attorneys and had contained only such medical evidence as would tend to support the contentions that Thaw was insane at the time. In other words, he admitted that the report was prepared to bolster Thaw's side of the case when he was seeking to avoid the electric chair.

Harry Thaw may take the stand today.

AN ELLICIT STILL FOUND

Toronto, July 28.—Two Jews, one carrying a coil of hose, rushed out of the small two-storey roughcast house at 31 Dorset street shortly after fire was discovered in one of the upper rooms of that structure at 9.35 Monday night. The firemen extinguished a $25 blaze in one of the upper rooms and on leaving told Policeman Langtry that gas seemed to be escaping in the house. Shortly afterwards he went back to the place and found a completely equipped whiskey "still" and also a gas connection that was innocent of the calculating interference of a meter.

PLOT AGAINST THE MANAGER OFFICIAL NEARLY BLOWN UP

Unknown Persons Make Dastardly Attempt to Blow up Residence of Manager Simpson of Reserve Mine Family Narrowly Escape.

Glace Bay, July 28.—Shortly after midnight a dastardly attempt was made to blow up the residence of Manager Simpson of the Reserve Mine, about two miles from town. Mr. Simpson and his family were asleep at the time, but escaped uninjured.

The home is a two-storey building with a verandah running across the front and along the eastern side. A quantity of dynamite or other high explosive had been placed on the floor of the verandah opposite the front entrance and exploded with a fuse. All the windows in the front and eastern side both above and below were shattered, the front wall of the house was shaken and parts of the wall incline inwards and the frame work is so twisted that the door cannot be opened. One of the corner posts on the verandah was blown over thirty feet. One of the upper windows of the house on the next lot, some thirty feet distant, was blown in. The explosion was heard a distance of four miles.

The act was carried out with considerable deliberation. On the opposite side of the street is a large hay-field extending down to the tram lines, beyond which is bush, scrub and wilderness. The pickets were removed from the fence to give a clear run for the man who touched the fuse. By the hole in the fence the grass was beaten as if some persons had lain there some time waiting a favorable opportunity.

It seems peculiar that Mr. Simpson should have been singled out as the object of this outrage as he is a very quiet man and has ever been on good terms with the men and not made himself an object of malice to the strikers.

The general impression is that intimidation not retaliation was the motive of the perpetrators. No clue has yet been found and no arrest made.

More Men at Work.

Halifax, N.S., July 28.—It was just four weeks ago yesterday since the U.M.W. employes of the Dominion Coal Co. were called out demanding recognition. To-day shows a slight improvement for the company.

At No. 2 yesterday 1,000 tons of coal came up and three hundred men were below, a large increase in that mine.

Another steam shovel is to be initiated at the big bank at No. 2, which will largely increase the total shipments. Double shifts will probably be put on at this bank, where there is yet probably over 1,000,000 tons of coal.

Otherwise the strike is still rigid, the men are very firm and there are very few desertions from the ranks which are probably balanced by accessions to the U.M.W. There is no talk of yielding of either party, and it looks as yet like a fight to a finish.

W. A. Excursion

Coroner Jory was notified and found she had been overcome by gas fumes from a gas stove she had lighted on Saturday, but found there was still a spark of life. With the assistance of Dr. Jessop she was brought to, but is still partially paralyzed and in a precarious condition

ARRESTED THE FORMER CHIEF

Cobalt, July 28.—Archibald McCall formerly chief of police of Haileybury was arrested at Englehart on Monday afternoon on a charge of allowing a prisoner under his charge to escape in July, 1908. The prisoner declares he gave the chief $45.

The prisoner came before Magistrate Atkinson Monday night and was remanded until next Tuesday on $2,000 bail.

LABOR SITUATION GROWING WORSE

HUDSON BAY CO. WAS FINED

North Bay, July 28.—Three thousand, two hundred and forty dollars was the fine imposed upon the Hudson Bay Co. yesterday by Police Magistrate Weegar, on the charge of having unlawful possession of 15 beaver and 39 otter skins on June 28 last. This penalty is the result of a seizure made by Game Overseer Blea of the provincial department of skins at the Hudson Bay Co. headquarters at North Bay.

Crown Attorney Browning prosecuted and Provincial Inspector Greer, Overseer Blea and Chief Game Warden Tinsley were in attendance. Leighton McCarthy, M.P., appeared for the defence and contended that the skins were shipped from Osnaburg, Keewatin district, and Quebec; that the company were guilty of no wrongful act, but technically had infringed the act by shipping skins without the required affidavit.

BARCELONA PLACED UNDER MARTIAL LAW

Barcelona, July 28.—Barcelona is now under martial law. Serious rioting has occurred following the declaration of a general strike in protest against the military operations in Morocco and the despatch to that country of large bodies of troops. This, of course, would give the C.N.R. a through line from Toronto to Winnipeg.

LATHAM WAS UNSUCCESSFUL AEROPLANIST FLOPS INTO SEA

His Motor Gives Out When Almost There—Wright Bros. Establish New Passenger-Carrying Records at Fort Meyer.

Dover, England, July 28.—Hubert Latham's second attempt to fly across the English Channel ended disastrously yesterday. Almost in the moment of victory his monoplane fluttered down into the sea two miles beyond the Admiralty pier, like a bird with a broken wing. Thousands of people crowding the waterfront saw the fall, and for nearly half an hour they were kept in suspense, not knowing whether the daring aeronaut had met death or had again been rescued from the water.

A flock of large and small craft raced to the scene of the disaster and a pinnace from the British warship Russell, picked up the unlucky flyer and put him aboard the French torpedo boat destroyer Escopette. After a surgeon had attended to his injuries the destroyer brought Latham ashore, and he was taken to the Lord Warden Hotel. His face was damaged and bleeding, and his nose was broken. The machine, badly wrecked, was hoisted from the boat to the dock.

Lathams' flight to the moment of its sensational finish, in some respects eclipsed Bleriot's. He made greater speed, being only twenty minutes in the air from the time he left the coast of France. Apparently he steered a straighter course than Bleriot, as he was making directly for Dover when he fell.

Wright Breaks World's Record.

Washington, July 28.—The world's aeroplane record for two men, as to both time and distance, was broken yesterday evening, in a beautiful flight of one hour, twelve minutes and forty seconds—upwards of 50 miles and at a speed averaging about forty miles an hour—by Orville Wright at Fort Meyer, with Lieut. Frank P. Lahm of the Army Signal Corps as passenger. The former record was made last year by his brother Wilbur, joint inventor with him of the machine in which both achievements were performed, at Lemans, France, with Prof. Painleve of the French Institute as passenger. That flight was one hour, nine minutes and 31 seconds. Wilbur was an eager spectator of yesterday's flight by his brother. "You just scotched your brother's record without really damaging it much," remarked a newspaper man to Orville after the flight.

"That's all we meant to do," replied Orville, with a smile, which his big brother appreciatively duplicated.

Canadians Hear News.

Petawawa Military Camp, July 28.—Hard at work preparing the "Silver Dart" for tests to be made next week, Messrs. Baldwin and McCurdy were found, when notified that the English channel had at last been crossed by an airship. Nowhere in Canada was the news of Bleriot's monoplane flight across the English channel received with greater interest than within the rude shed miles southeast of the military camp, where the Silver Dart is being put together by Messrs. Baldwin and McCurdy.

"I'll bet it's Bleriot's," said Mr. McCurdy excitedly.

Mr. Baldwin would not venture an opinion as to whether the successful flight had been made by Bleriot or Latham.

Mr. McCurdy was delighted when he learned that it was the Bleriot machine which had flown from France to England. "He broke his first machine all to pieces, but he went right to work and built this one in which he crossed the channel, a much smaller one than the first." Bleriot is a Frenchman, Latham is an Englishman, but has been carrying on all his experiments over in France. It was quite evident that Mr. Baldwin's sympathies had been with Latham.

Warships of the Future.

Paris, July 28.—Gen. Brun, the new French Minister of War, commenting yesterday on Louis Bleriot's feat in flying across the English Channel last Sunday, says he regards the aeroplane and the submarine as the war instruments of the future.

"The aeroplane," declared the War Minister, "is less vulnerable and more rapid and cheaper than the dirigible, and as soon as it is perfect the French army will be provided with a swarm of these wasps."

THE NEWS AS TOLD IN DESPATCHES

Jealousy Prompts Shooting.

Belleville, July 28.—Mrs. William Ryan of Shannonville went to the residence of Mrs. Lizzie Dean in search of her husband. She was set upon by Dean and his wife and in the scuffle Mrs. Ryan pulled a revolver and shot Mrs. Dean in the hand. She was committed for trial on a charge of feloniously wounding. Jealousy prompted the shooting.

Soaking the Yachtsmen.

Toronto, July 28.—Levying a duty of 25 per cent. on a number of pleasure boats which have recently been brought to Canada from the United States is a problem before the Customs Department.

The customs regulations provide that vessels, dredges, scows, yachts, boats or other water-borne craft built outside Canada and destined for use in Canadian waters, not including vessels which trade between a Canadian and an American port, shall pay 25 per cent. duty. In spite of this provision the owners of such importations have so far escaped.

Three Miles of Sockeyes.

Victoria, B.C., July 28.—Three miles of sockeyes passed into the straits yesterday morning, and the island traps are being well filled.

Every four years there is sure to be a large run of sockeyes, with the result that any deferred dividends are all paid up. For the past three years the runs have been small and so this is expected to be the year of plenty.

Gets Away From Police.

Acton, July 28.—Harry Reid, the alleged forger, who after having escaped from a constable in Georgetown, was recaptured in Toronto on Monday and brought here by Constable Lawson, was sent to Milton for trial, but before the constable was ready to start for Milton jail he made his escape through a window and is again at large.

THE NEW RELIGION

The answer of the world to the encyclical of His Holiness the Pope is one of the great epoch-making marks along the course of time. The Roman Catholic Church claims, as we understand it, to be the custodian of Christian truth, made so by Christ Himself, "and endowed with the powers and attributes that such an august instrument of the Almighty's will would necessarily have. The rest of Christian mankind is without a church, properly so-called. They deny the right of any but God Himself, as they interpret Him, to guide, to love, to chasten, to warn and to punish them. They deny the vicarious instrumentality also of any designated body of men or of any man. While they themselves aspire to know, they do not aspire to punish. Necessarily, therefore, they deny the possibility of a "church," as it is usually understood.

The Catholic Church, claiming that it speaks by and on behalf of Christ, or God, issued an encyclical to mankind to mend its ways, to harness its unkempt and rebellious imagination, to remember that God's ways are not man's ways, and to turn its ear once more to the voice of the Church. The world, through its new mode of finding out things, called Science, had set itself to explain all things as if they were mechanically made and combined together, as if, in short, the universe was an expression, not of God's spirituality, of His regard for man's intention, of his desire to do good or evil, but of mere modes or methods of contrivance, as a building or a watch would be to us.

Or else that other part of mankind which professed to practise the Christian religion, had gone too far on their journey of individualism, of being responsible to no one but God Himself, and could therefore no longer be tolerated.

"These two branches of "error" had been put under the ban of no longer suspended sentence but of actual sentence by the R. C. Church, and therefore "the crisis" had arrived in the modern history of human thought and conduct, according to the light of men's reason, which Dr. Eliot claims is all they have to go by. Much has yet to be eliminated, much to be cast aside and much that has been held sacred by Protestants also is ruthlessly swept away as so many remnants of an ancient superstition and unreasonable myth.

Briefly, the new religion proposes to judge man by his conduct, by his actions, by his spirit of self-sacrifice, by his honesty, by his love of his fellows, by his "willingness to sacrifice himself, not another. It is claimed that this ideal is higher than the present Christian ideal. It does not lay sins upon another, but bears them, as having been created, not by God or by the devil, but by the bearer himself.

Henceforth Americans are invited by the president of Harvard to remember that the best a man can do is not for himself but for "the people," for the state. It seeks to eliminate unworthy ambitions and desires, and the selfishness of the money-getter. It demands of all what is now practised by some, viz.: universal charity, generosity, consideration for others, the human eye upon the suffering mass of humanity, and God and eternal life to be won by good deeds done for others and not for oneself. It is the religion of the Golden Rule.

At one stroke, Dr. Eliot claims, mankind is thus made one. The present "variety of belief" is blended in one striving, under God, for the good of all His creatures. Specific revelation is denied.

The new faith is not, it will be observed, the scientific faith. It is not the enemy against which the encyclical was especially levelled in the first instance. It is the faith which expresses faith in man. It is the religion of human brotherhood. It asks God to forgive us because we have sinned in not doing for others. It asks Him to bless others, not ourselves. It is the religion of human self-sacrifice, not the sacrifice of the Son of God.

In a word, it declares that the Church has been found wanting on its theological or doctrinal side, not only the Church of Rome, but all other forms of Christianity as well.

Coming from Dr. Eliot, and being the expression of German, American, French and British advanced humanistic thought as well, it is a matter for consideration. It cannot be viewed as the incident of a day. The churches do not so regard it. Its votaries declare it will take a miracle to overthrow it, since the freedom of humanity and its general welfare is its immediate and direct practical aim, without Biblical or other forms of imaginative criticism or interference. With Science, which professes to be the knowledge of things, and Humanism, which professes to be the knowledge of humanity, two new modern champions are in the field. Will they relegate doctrine, so far as it is theoretical, to the college and scholasticism, or will the Christian belief show its divine origin and justify its claims by triumphing, and reinstating the Bible for Protestants as the only rule of faith and the Church, with the Pope as its earthly head, tradition and the Scriptures as the guiding star and leader of Catholicism?

Did God speak to man and lay a special course of belief and conduct upon them or did He not? That is the question. If He did, the Church, is right. If not, then humanity must work out its own happiness and its own future.

A MONOPLANE, SIR?

It has been said that a son of Erin observed with scorn that the rich could ride in chaises, but the poor had to walk. Still, more recently the motor-madness has disgraced the quiet pleasure of an evening drive. But if the startling achievement of the plucky Frenchman, Bleriot, is to be the beginning of a new era, we shall see in future the upper air filled with nighthawks of a new breed. The croak! croak! of the monoplane will probably not be heard down here at all. It may vie with the squawk of the nighthawk. The light of the moon will have a new significance. The monoplane is a cheap, simple "concern." It has the body of a fly and the wings of one. It is not an immense double-decked affair, but a simple contrivance that has enough air-resistance against which the motors drive it to keep it in mid-air and make it dirigible. The Frenchman's feat in turning against the wind when he had lost his way in the fog and in spite of adverse weather conditions, lighting easily upon the cliffs of Dover, is a surprise as well as a triumph.

To own a motor is nothing. We must have a flyer. Everything will be on the fly now. The new rural mail delivery to Ennismore (with $3.00 boxes at the farmers' expense) will be a matter of but a few moments. Just as in the old days the wayside inn was a frequent and a gladsome sight, that gave way to the railway and other means of fast travelling, so will the modern hotel be a thing of the past to the travelling public. There will be fewer of them and they will be concentrated in the larger cities.

It used to be a feat to encircle the world in 80 days, but with the monoplane or even with the dirigible balloon we could go round the globe in a quarter of that time. When we go shooting, to, let the birds beware. They shall fool us no longer.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Experimenters say that giving warm water to poultry in winter time lowers their vitality, and also that of their chicks. Snow or cold water should be given.

---

It is to be hoped that the former defeat of the street extension by-law will be a lesson to those who would spend money first and consult the electorate afterwards.

---

Elsie Siegel was never a teacher in a Chinese mission, and it is said that for one American woman who has come to shame through Chinamen, hundreds of Chinese women in China have come to shame through Americans.

---

When Mr. Borden promised Free Rural Mail and Parcel Delivery to the farmers he meant what he said. At first this promise was ridiculed by the Liberals as a blunder, an impossibility, &c. Then they took a leaf out of our book and repeated the promise as if it was original. The election was held. Over one hundred routes are in operation. Where is ours that we have been demanding ever since Oct. 26th, 1908? To the curious we may say that it can be seen at any time in full and flagrant operation between this city and Ennismore. What a marvel of enterprise and fulfilment! Where is the banquet?

It Leaves the Skin Tingling With Health

There is a wonderful difference in soaps. Have you ever noticed how one kind leaves the skin soft and white while another may leave it red and rough?

Both soaps looked alike, perhaps. But the difference was in the material. Let us tell you what we put into Infants' Delight, then decide if you can continue with common soap.

Ceylon is an island in the Indian Ocean, and from there we bring pure cocoanut oil 12,000 miles to our factory. Then we go to France for vegetable oil, and often pay double what we might pay. But our oil is pure enough for your table.

These oils are doubly boiled and then milled by our own special process, after which they fall like flakes of snow into enormous bins.

Then they are crushed under a weight of 30 tons to press out the moisture. Next they pass through granite rollers and come out in miles of silky ribbons. Finally they are dried eight times and then stamped into cakes.

Could you imagine a more delightful soap than this? It lathers into a rich, creamy foam. It wears as thin as a wafer. It leaves the skin as soft as velvet and as smooth as satin. It is the very utmost in perfect soap.

The perfume is the delicate scent of the roses. We pay $100 a pound for pure Otto of Roses, but it requires 3,000 pounds of rose leaves to make a single ounce. The fragrance is simply exquisite—it brings the breath of a million flowers. Use a single cake and learn how delightful it really is—it costs no more than the common, so why not have the best?

How to Massage

Shave some Infants' Delight into a tub of hot water and let it dissolve. Then immerse your body and remain in the water several minutes. Lather the body thoroughly with Infants' Delight—rub it right into the skin, for it is so pure it will only nourish and soothe. Massage well with the finger tips and the palms of the hands and you will find a most pleasant sensation after the bath is finished.

THE Masquerader

By KATHERINE CECIL THURSTON,

Author of "The Circle," Etc.

Copyright, 1905, 1906, by Harper & Brothers

"I conclude," he began quietly, "that your idea is to spread this wild, improbable story—to ask people to believe that John Chilcote, whom they see before them, is not John Chilcote, but somebody else. Now, you'll find that a harder task than you imagine. This is a skeptical world, and people are absurdly fond of their own eyesight. We are all journalists nowadays—we all want facts. The first thing you will be asked for is your proof. And what does your proof consist of? The circumstance that John Chilcote, who has always despised jewelry, has lately taken to wearing rings! Your own testimony, unattended by any witnesses, that with these rings off his finger bears a scar belonging to another man! No; on close examination I scarcely imagine that your case would hold." He stopped, fired by his own logic. The future might be Chilcote's, but the present was his, and this present, with its immeasurable possibilities, had been rescued from catastrophe. "No," he said again. "When you get your proof perhaps we'll have another talk, but till then"—

"Till then?" She looked up quickly, but almost at once her question died away.

The door had opened, and the servant who had admitted Loder stood in the opening.

"Dinner is served!" he announced in his deferential voice.

CHAPTER XXIII.

AND Loder dined with Lillian Astrupp. We live in an age when society expects, even exacts, much. He dined, not through bravado and not through cowardice, but because it seemed the obvious, the only thing to do. To him a scene of any description was distasteful. To Lillian it was unknown. In her world people loved or hated, were spiteful, or foolish, were even quixotic or dishonorable, but they seldom made scenes. Loder tacitly saw and tacitly accepted this.

Possibly they ate extremely little during the course of the dinner and talked extraordinarily much on subjects that interested neither, but the main point at least was gained. They dined. The conventionalities were appeased. The silent, watchful servants who waited on them were given no food for comment. The fact that Loder left immediately after dinner, the fact that he paused on the doorstep after the hall door had closed behind him and drew a long, deep breath of relief, held only an individual significance and therefore did not count.

On reaching Chilcote's house he passed at once to the study and dismissed Greening for the night. But scarcely had he taken advantage of his solitude by settling into an armchair and lighting a cigar than Renwick, displaying an unusual amount of haste and importance, entered the room, carrying a letter.

Seeing Loder, he came forward at once. "Mr. Fraide's man brought this, sir," he explained. "He was most particular to give it into my hands, making sure 'twould reach you. He's waiting for an answer, sir."

Loder rose and took the letter, a quick thrill of speculation and interest springing across his mind. During his time of banishment he had followed the political situation with feverish attention, insupportably chafed by the desire to share in it, apprehensively chilled at the thought of Chilcote's possible behavior. He knew that in the comparatively short interval since parliament had risen no act of aggression had marked the Russian occupation of Meshed, but he also knew that Fraide and his followers looked askance at that great power's amiable attitude, and at sight of his leader's message his intuition stirred.

Turning to the nearest lamp, he tore the envelope open and scanned the letter anxiously. It was written in Fraide's own clear, somewhat old fashioned writing and opened with a kindly rebuke for his desertion of him since the day of his speech; then immediately and with characteristic clearness it opened up the subject nearest the writer's mind.

Very slowly and attentively Loder read the letter, and, with the extreme quiet that with him invariably covered emotion, he moved to the desk, wrote a note and handed it to the waiting servant. As the man turned toward the door he called him.

"Renwick," he said sharply, "when you've given that letter to Mr. Fraide's servant ask Mrs. Chilcote if she can spare me five minutes."

When Renwick had gone and closed the door behind him Loder paced the room with feverish activity. In one moment the aspect of life had been changed. Five minutes since he had been glorying in the risk of a barely saved situation; now that situation with its merely social complications had become a matter of small importance.

His long, striding steps had carried him to the fireplace, and his back was toward the door when at last the handle turned. He wheeled round to receive Eve's message, then a look of pleased surprise crossed his face. It was Eve herself who stood in the doorway.

Without hesitation his lips parted. "Eve," he said abruptly, "I have had great news! Russia has shown her teeth at last. Two caravans belonging to a British trader were yesterday interfered with by a band of Cossacks. The affair occurred a couple of miles outside Meshed. The traders remonstrated, but the Russians made summary use of their advantage. Two Englishmen were wounded and one of them has since died. Fraide has only now received the news, which cannot be overrated. It gives the precise lever necessary for the big move at the reassembling." He spoke with great earnestness and unusual haste. As he finished he took a step forward. "But that's not all!" he added. "Fraide wants the great move set in motion by a great speech, and he has asked me to make it."

For a moment Eve waited. She looked at him in silence, and in that silence he read in her eyes the reflection of his own expression.

"And you?" she asked in a suppressed voice. "What answer did you give?"

He watched her for an instant, taking a strange pleasure in her flushed face and brilliantly eager eyes; then the joy of conscious strength, the sense of opportunity regained, swept all other considerations out of sight.

Very slowly and attentively Loder read the letter.

"I accepted," he said quickly. "Could any man who was merely human have done otherwise?"

That was Loder's attitude and action on the night of his jeopardy and his success, and the following day found his mood unchanged. He was one of those rare individuals who never give a promise overnight and regret it in the morning. He was slow to move, but when he did the movement brushed all obstacles aside. In the first days of his usurpation he had gone cautiously, half fascinated, half distrustful. Then the reality, the extraordinary tangibility of the position had gripped him when, matching himself for the first time with men of his own caliber, he had learned his real weight on the day of his protest against the Easter adjournment. With that knowledge had been born the dominant factor in his whole scheme—the overwhelming, insistent desire to manifest his power; that desire that is the salvation or the ruin of every strong man who has once realized his strength. Supremacy was the note to which his ambition reached. To trample out Chilcote's footmarks with his own hand had been his tacit instinct from the first. Now it rose paramount. It was the whole theory of creation—the survival of the fittest—the deep, egotistical certainty that he was the better man.

And it was with this conviction that he entered on the vital period of his dual career. The imminent crisis and his own share in it absorbed him absolutely. In the weeks that followed his answer to Fraide's proposal he gave himself ungrudgingly to his work. He wrote, read and planned with tireless energy. He frequently forgot to eat and slept only through sheer exhaustion. In the fullest sense of the word he lived for the culminating hour that was to bring him failure or success.

He seldom left Grosvenor square in the days that followed except to confer with his party. All his interest, all his relaxation even, lay in his work and what pertained to it. His strength was like a solid wall, his intelligence was sharp and keen as steel. The moment was his, and by sheer mastery of will he put other considerations out of sight. He forgot Chilcote and forgot Lillian, not because they escaped his memory, but because he chose to shut them from it.

Of Eve he saw but little in this time of high pressure. When a man touches the core of his capacities, puts his best into the work that in his eyes stands paramount, there is little place for and no need of woman. She comes before—and after. She inspires, compensates or completes; but the achievement, the creation, is man's alone. And all true women understand and yield to this unspoken precept.

Eve watched the progress of his labor, and in the depth of her own heart the watching came nearer to actual living than any activity she had known. She was an onlooker—but an onlooker who stood, as it were, on the steps of the arena, who, by a single forward movement, could feel the sand under her feet, the breath of the battle on her face, and in this knowledge she rested satisfied.

There were hours when Loder seemed scarcely conscious of her existence, but on those occasions she smiled in her serene way—and went on waiting. She knew that each day before the afternoon had passed he would come into his sitting room, his face thoughtful, his hands full of books or papers, and, dropping into one of the comfortable, studious chairs, would ask laconically for tea. This was her moment of triumph and recompense—for the very unconsciousness of his coming doubled its value. He would sit for half an hour with preoccupied glance or with keen, alert eyes fixed on the fire, while his ideas sorted themselves and fell into line. Sometimes he was silent for the whole half hour, sometimes he commented to himself as he scanned his notes, but on other and rarer occasions he talked, speaking his thoughts and his theories aloud, with the enjoyment of a man who knows himself fully in his depth, while Eve sipped her tea or stitched peacefully at a strip of embroidery.

On these occasions she made a perfect listener. Here and there she encouraged him with an intelligent remark, but she never interrupted. She knew when to be silent and when to speak, when to merge her own individuality and when to make it felt. In these days of stress and preparation he came to her unconsciously for rest; he treated her as he might have treated a younger brother—relying on her discretion, turning to her as by right for sympathy, comprehension and friendship. Sometimes as they sat silent in the richly colored, homelike room Eve would pause over her embroidery and let her thoughts spin momentarily forward—spin toward the point where, the brunt of his ordeal passed, he must of necessity seek something beyond mere rest. But there her thoughts would inevitably break off and the blood flame quickly into her cheek.

Meanwhile Loder worked persistently. With each day that brought the crisis of Fraide's scheme nearer his activity increased—and with it an intensifying of the nervous strain. For if he had his hours of exaltation he also had his hours of black apprehension. It is all very well to exorcise a ghost by sheer strength of will, but one has also to eliminate the idea that gave it existence. Lillian Astrupp, with her unattested evidence and her ephemeral interest, gave him no real uneasiness, but Chilcote and Chilcote's possible summons were matters of graver consideration, and there were times when they loomed very dark and sinister. What if at the very moment of fulfillment— But invariably he snapped the thread of the supposition and turned with fiercer ardor to his work of preparation.

And so the last morning of his probation dawned, and for the first time he breathed freely.

He rose early on the day that was to witness his great effort and dressed slowly. It was a splendid morning. The spirit of the spring seemed embodied in the air, in the pale blue sky, in the shafts of cool sunshine that danced from the mirror to the dressing table, from the dressing table to the pictures on the walls of Chilcote's vast room. Inconsequently with its dancing rose a memory of the distant past—a memory of long forgotten days when, as a child, he had been bidden to watch the same sun perform the same fantastic evolutions. The sight and the thought stirred him curiously with an unlooked for sense of youth. He drew himself together with an added touch of decision as he passed out into the corridor, and as he walked downstairs he whistled a bar or two of an inspiriting tune.

THE NEW RELIGION IS IT OF GOD?

The Montreal Star.

Wherever the name of Dr. Eliot, late president of Harvard, is known, and that is almost everywhere, very general interest, and a good deal of discussion have been aroused by his recent address, in which he foretold the coming of a new religion. Dr. Eliot is noted for many things, and his fame as an educationalist is widespread.

His recent selection of a five-foot shelf of books which would provide the reader with a liberal education, caused considerable stir in many circles. But nothing has roused as much talk as his prophecy concerning a new religion, which will not be bound by dogma or creed. Already partisans have sprung up, while something more than dissent from his views has also been openly expressed.

The whole question has aroused the strongest feeling, both for and against Dr. Eliot's promulgation. The appeal in this new religion as Dr. Eliot draws it, is the idea of the elimination of thoughts of self in the service of humanity, what its fate may be, once discussion has died away, time alone can tell.

Some expressions of opinion on Dr. Eliot's new religion have been gathered by the Star from different sources and vary somewhat widely.

OMISSIONS ARE REMARKABLE.

Rev Allan P. Shatford, M.A., of the Church of St. James the Apostle, says, concerning Dr. Eliot's "Religion of the Future": "Dr. Eliot's new religion is remarkable for what it leaves out; it is by no means exceptional for what it includes. It eliminates creed and the supernatural. And both are absolutely essential to any system of religion. Where is there to be found any science or art without its creed, dogmas, principles? It would not be difficult to accuse Dr. Eliot of manufacturing a creed for his fanciful new religion. Experience ought to teach us all that creed and conduct are inseparable and that the former always precedes the latter.

"As for the abolition of everything supernatural, one might as well try to rob the stars out of the sky. Science is every day recognizing its presence. The whole of human experience is surely worth something, and its testimony is irresistible concerning the existence all around, and about us of the supernatural. Now, what is there wonderful about the positive side of this new religion? It emphasizes the discovery of God through soul consciousness. For that very truth Christianity stands, with this difference, that it does not merely make God a thing of soul. It is not pantheistic.

THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY.

The new religion makes much of the service of humanity. It will be concerned with thoughts of others more than personal safety. Those who combat pain and disease will be its disciples. Suffering for others will be its hall-mark. Is there anything new in this? Was there ever a religion with a graver passion for humanity than the Christ's? Does it not hold high the idea of vicarious sacrifice, the suffering for others? Individual salvation only comes through our sacrifices for our brother man. A religion of humanity," has a very strong appeal, but where will you find more splendid evidence of it than in the man Christ Jesus?

"I cannot see much difference between Dr. Eliot's new religion and the ancient systems of heathen morality and philosophy. As they failed because of their inadequateness to human needs, so assuredly will his. Man needs a saviour and none but Christ will prove sufficient. Dr. Eliot's new religion is like his five-foot shelf of books—unique for what is not there. It leaves out the Bible and substitutes the biography of John Woolman."

MUCH OF IT WILL PREVAIL.

The Rev. Dr. Barnes, pastor of the Church of the Messiah, referred yesterday, in his sermon, to Dr. Eliot's statements in regard to the approach of a new religion. Although agreeing only to a certain extent with the ideas of Harvard's ex-president, and saying he believed at first that some of his statements might need qualification, Dr. Barnes said he could see much that was very impressive and perfectly true in Dr. Eliot's statements. The first report he had seen, said he, had led him to believe that Dr. Eliot himself differed most radically on many points. When he had changed his mind to a certain degree and came to the conclusion that there was much in what Dr. Eliot said which sooner or later would prevail.

HAIR SLAUGHTER

KILLED BY NEGLIGENCE

Hair must have nourishment or die. If it does not have proper nourishment it will lose its vitality, grow and become an easy prey to the ravages of the vicious and destructive germs of dandruff.

Parisian Sage is a hair nourisher; it is the result of sincere study and experiment by one of the world's leading scientists.

It should be used regularly as a hair dressing by everyone with healthy hair, because it never fails to prevent dandruff, falling hair, or any scalp disease.

But Parisian Sage is not only a preventive it is a certain cure for dandruff; it stops itching of the scalp instantly; it makes hair grow thick and luxuriant. It is especially in demand by ladies, because it makes the hair beautiful, soft and fluffy. W. Madill, the druggist, Peterborough, sells it under a positive guarantee to do all that is claimed for it, or money back, 50 cents for a large bottle.

LONDON VOTES FOR ARTESIAN WELLS

The water system in London, Ont., was not satisfactory, so far as drinking-water was concerned. Hon. Adam Beck advocated artesian wells, and this plan has been adopted, as at Winnipeg, by a large majority.

Robt. McBride, a workman on the N. T. R. at Dot Siding, Man., was impaled in a pike he was holding by a sudden lurch of the train. He died almost immediately.

AFTERNOON AND EVENING SESSION OF PAINTERS' AND DECORATORS' CONVENTION

Demonstrations in Cut Out Work and Paper on Painting on Cement in Afternoon--Question Box at Evening Session

afternoon and evening

Two splendid sessions of the Master House Painters and Decorators' Convention were held yesterday, one in the afternoon and one in the evening. There was a large attendance of delegates present, and considerable business was transacted. The demonstrations and papers on the different classes of work are intensely interesting, and those who are in attendance are securing a large amount of information and ideas, which should be beneficial to them in the future.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At 2 o'clock President Booth called the meeting to order. A letter of regret from ex-president Brooks of Windsor was read to the convention. It expressed his inability to be present on account of the death of his eldest son and business partner. The convention passed a resolution to Mr. Brooks and his family.

Mr. W. J. Bolus of Toronto, gave a demonstration of cut-out work, which proved exceedingly interesting. Cut-out work is in the paperhangers' department, and means the cutting out of the pattern of the border and hanging it without the straight line effect, as has been the custom in the past.

Another interesting paper on "Painting on Cement" was read by Mr. E. J. Livingston of Toronto, president of the Toronto association, and at the conclusion a general discussion was indulged in on the two subjects, in which many of the delegates took part.

The question drawer was next dealt with. This is an important feature of the convention, as the delegates bring all their troubles to the experts in charge of the question box for the purpose of having the difficulties overcome. The box was in charge of Messrs. John. Dewer, Pittsburg; S. N. Hughes, Toronto, and W. E. Wall, Toronto.

This completed the business before the afternoon session.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening was taken up with the completion of the question features which were in charge of oil experts. This proved extremely interesting, and much information was given out to the delegates present.

J. W. Faircloth and Company and Hughes and Company of Toronto, through their representative, Mr. Pringle, gave a demonstration in glass manufacture, taking up the stained and leaded glasses. He showed how the different effects were secured in a plain and instructive manner, and the demonstration was of a most interesting nature.

The meeting then adjourned until 9 a.m. to-day.

THIS MORNING'S SESSION.

This morning's session was opened by President Booth, who afterwards read a paper on "Period Decoration" in which was included the Ionic, Doric, Corinthian, Gothic and Renaissance periods. The paper was very interesting as it showed the art of decorating many years back. Prof. Nelson gave a lecture and demonstration on "Tinting in Water Color." This was of a highly educative value and was appreciated by those present.

Greetings were received from the International President, Mr. Samuel Brown, of Milwaukee, Wis., and President George Higman, of Ottawa, was introduced to the association. He stated that it was a great pleasure to meet the members of the association and congratulated them on the success which was attending the convention.

Mr. James Finemore read a paper on "Harmony in Colors." The paper was prepared by Mr. G. W. Freeman, of Windsor, Ont., who was unable to be present.

At the conclusion it was moved and seconded that Mr. Freeman be thanked for the splendid ideas he had expressed so clearly in the paper.

The following resolution was then passed: In view of the fact that our Dominion and Provincial Government as well as most, if not all the municipal councils, are undertaking to do the painting and decorating of institutions under their control by day labor, this convention of Canadian Master House Painters and Decorators' assembled at Peterbrough, believe that this can not be done or cannot be the most economical or in the best interests of the citizens and do hereby protest against this method and petition the said governments to let out their work by tender, giving the preference to the local concerns, where said work is required to be done.

BUILD THE BRIDGE NOW

It will be a wise thing to do to carry the by-law to build a bridge of concrete at Smith street crossing of the river.

Low prices and vigorous competition have brought down the price of cement. Cement is now selling at $1.15 net, per barrel, in car lots, which is considerably lower than quotations for a great many years back. What this means in the trade is shown by the reports in the papers that it is only a few weeks since the Imperial Cement Company assigned. Now comes a report from Owen Sound to the effect that the Owen Sound Portland Cement Co. at Shallow Lake, and the Lakefield plant have shut down, while the Sun Cement Works are debating whether to follow suit or not.

The cement situation is our opportunity. Now is the time to buy and build. It will mean a big saving in the end.

Vote for the by-laws on the 29th.

SENT DOWN THIS MORNING FOR ROBBERY AT OTTAWA; WAS SENTENCED HERE

(Three O'clock Special to Review.)

Ottawa, July 28.—A man who was sentenced in Peterborough once, and has received 33 different sentences, was sent to the Central Prison today. Jeremiah Brown, alias J. Smith, was in court this morning on a charge of theft and was sentenced to six months in the Central. The goods stolen did not amount to much in value, but since 1893 there is a rather bad record against Brown, and both here and elsewhere he has been in trouble several times.

At the store of Kenneth McDonald and Sons, who sell farm and garden implements on the Byward market, they lately missed fifty cotton bags, worth around $10.00. Then police were notified, and, tracing Brown found that he had the bags.

Included in the charges against him during past years was one of robbery in connection with the residence of the late Mrs. Dunsford at Peterborough on October 11, 1906.

For his offence here, Magistrate Dumble gave Smith two years less one day in the Central on a charge of house-breaking. He committed the robbery at Mrs. Dunsford's store on September 26.

PICTURE SHOWS WORRYING THEATRICAL MANAGERS

The New York Times says the moving picture shows are becoming so popular that they are actually interfering with the business of the regular theatrical attractions. A few years ago the theatrical producers only regarded them as a passing entertainment, but such wonderful progress in the moving picture art has been made that they are patronized to such an extent that much of the money that would otherwise go to the box office of the play houses is helping swell the pockets of the film firms and the owners of theatoriums.

The opposition of the picture shows is felt keenly all over the country and as a result the booking agents are getting a better class of shows in the one night stands of the States and Canada.

MARRIED.

HOPWOOD — OSTROM.—At St. Luke's church on Wednesday, July 28th, at 1 o'clock, Howard Wil[illegible] Hopwood, to Kathleen Hutch[illegible] Ostrom, by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, [illegible] A., rector of St. Luke's church.

Weeds in the River

The weeds in the Otonabee river are becoming more and more dense every week. Launch owners are beginning to see the wisdom of keeping in the channel, instead of dashing about the whole river as heretofore. The canal, too, is suffering from the same cause, although the repeated trips and excursions of the large boats have lessened the nuisance somewhat. Several of the small launches making the trip from the lift lock up to Lakefield have been stalled, however, and are complaining of the state of the river-bed.

Good Meeting Last Night

Messrs. Whalen and Cox were the speakers at the evangelistic meeting last night. After Mr. Cox had related his experiences and testified to God's saving and keeping power, Mr. Whalen dealt with the words, "What I have written I have written." He pointed out clearly the fact that each day a record of our lives for each day is written by the recording angel in Heaven. And the speaker asked the question, "Are our records such as we can face at the judgment day or is it of such a nature that we would be afraid to face it even now?" He assured those present that the blood of Jesus Christ could wash out the worst record, and closed by making a strong appeal to those present to come to Jesus, who would cleanse us from all sin.

The meeting to-night will be in charge of Mr. A. G. Young. There will be good singing and all are welcome.

THE BY-LAWS

The city of Peterborough has gone ahead. It is ready to go still farther if the property-owners will see to it that it does. We must not be extravagant, but it is not economy to let our equipment run down. The Smith street bridge problem has been thoroughly looked into, and there is no escape from building the bridge.

A structure of reinforced concrete upon piles is the manner and style of building many of New York's great edifices, in comparison with which the Smith street bridge is not as much as a small archway. It is equally impossible to "throw down" the C.P.R. spurline fill-in. That is an excellent investment. If we don't pass the Street extensions, also, the city will, notwithstanding, remain liable for it all the same, since the money has been spent. This is the second time of asking, and must be taken as final. We are not aware that the aldermen intend to pay it themselves. It is not hard to guess who will have to pay it. Why let it drag down the others!

We are in good shape. We are growing rapidly. If we get power, property will double in value in five years.

If Peterborough stands still or goes back the citizens are themselves to blame.

WEDDING AT MT. JULIAN

Special to the Review.

Mount Julian, July 27.—A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. Layfette Reid on Saturday evening, July 17th, when his second daughter, Miss Jessie, was married to Mr. Anson Mallory, of Mallorytown, Ont. Rev. Mr. Garbutt performed the ceremony in the presence of about forty relatives and friends, and the bridal party, who were unattended, stood under a beautiful arch of ferns and marguerites. The bride was dressed in a dainty costume of white dotted Swiss muslin, trimmed with lace, and was given away by her father.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the bridal party sat down to a sumptuous repast given by the bride's mother. [illegible]

March—Under the Colors.
God Save the King.

SCHOOL HOURS TO BE CONTINUED

The local Board of Education stole a march on the new Day-Light Saving Bill, when they inaugurated the new school hours, in connection with the Collegiate Institute. Instead of starting the school work at nine o'clock, as used to be the case, the time was changed to half-past eight, this allowing the school to be dismissed at half-past three o'clock instead of at four.

The change has been a most welcome one to scholars and teachers alike and from present indications it appears as though it would again come into force during the months of September and October.

NAYLOR TURNS DOWN OFFER

What Will Promoters do For Referee Now That Expert Has Refused?

One of the best jokes in a long time in the report that W. B. Naylor had turned down an offer to referee the Gotch-Roller bout at Seattle. Naylor is all right working among his own herd, but as for officiating in a big match, the mere suggestion of it is humorous. Some people believe everything they are told.

BIG CATCHES AT ISLANDA

Some big catches of both lunge and bass are reported from "Islanda," the popular resort of Upper Buckhorn Lake. There is a large registration of New York and Pittsburg fishermen at "Islanda," and they are getting their limit of fish every day.

Mr. Wm. Moore, of New York, had an exciting time with a 22-pound 'lunge the other day, and it took him over an hour to land it. Mr. Moore was bass fishing with an eight-ounce steel rod, when the 'lunge made connections, and it was only after a very trying struggle that the big one was overcome and hauled into the boat. The fish measured 46 in.—Kawartha Tourist.

HAS ART BURN COOKED HIS GOOSE IN AMATEUR RANKS?

Special to the Review.

Vancouver, July 27—Arthur J. Burn, the well-known Marathon runner, who came from Peterborough to Calgary, and who is now residing in this city, stands a very poor chance, according to the evidence presented last night, of ever being allowed to start as an amateur in the next Olympic Marathon at Athens or in any other amateur races for that matter.

At a special meeting of the local board of the British Columbia Amateur Athletic Union, held last evening at the V.A.C., the investigation committee of that board brought in a special report on the charges of professionalism which had been preferred against Mr. Burn. After having had Mr. Burn "on the carpet" for some time on Monday afternoon, during which he was closely questioned as to what sums he had received from the promoters of the various Marathon races he had competed in since he arrived on the coast from Calgary, the committee embodied the result of its investigations in a report which showed that Burn had unquestionably received sums which they considered were in excess of actual training expenses. After discussing the matter for some time the members of the local board decided to refer the report of the investigationcommittee to the executive committee of the B.C. A.A.U. with a recommendation that they pass it along to the Canadian Amateur Athletic Union for final action as to suspension or expulsion from the amateur ranks.

Recognising that it was a serious matter to Mr. Burn, who has several times refused offers to enter the professional ranks, and who only a short short time ago announced that it was his intention to remain an amateur and compete in the next Olympic Marathon at Athens, the local board wished to give the former Calgary runner the benefit of the doubt, and decided to refer his case to the executive of the C.A.A.U. But it is doubtful if that body will pass over the circumstances in view of the evidence adduced.

According to Mr. Burn's own admissions he received two sums of $100 each for running in Marathons on the coast. The first $100 came from the Spokane Athletic Club, and was given him to defray his expenses to San Francisco to compete under the Spokane Club's colors in some races there. Burn stated tha the came to Vancouver from Spokane on a single ticket, and then bought a return ticket to San Francisco in that city, intending to come back here in any event, as he had purchased a business here. Upon his return here he admitted receiving $100 from Mr. Harry Duker, secretary of the Recreation Park Co., for competing in the Empire Day Marathon here. It is this second $100 that is considered to be in excess of legitimate expenses when Burn already had a return ticket to Vancouver paid for by the Spokane Athletic Club's funds. In explanation Burn stated that he had expended $50 of the sum in bringing a trainer from Spokane to condition him for the race here on May 24, but could give no satisfactory account of what he had done with the other $50. Other sums which he had received at different times for races on the coast, were considered not to have exceeded legitimate expenses, with the exception of certain sums paid him when he first came to the coast in the fall of 1907 to run Chandler. The matter is now up to the C. A.A.U. to deal with as that body sees fit.

BIG ATHLETIC MEET AT RIVERSIDE, CIVIC HOLIDAY

The Victoria Harriers will hold a grand amateur athletic meet at Riverside Park on Civic Holiday, August 9th, commencing at two o'clock. The meet is open to all amateurs of the county of Peterborough, and the affair should be highly successful. The Victoria Harriers have been doing some good work this summer, and their efforts to furnish some good clean sport for the holiday should meet with the co-operation of the followers of athletics in this city. For the following list of events the entries must be sent to Chas. Thorpe, secretary V.H.C., 535, Sherbrooke st.

One hundred yards, handicap; 220 yards handicap; quarter mile obstacle race; half mile scratch race; one mile scratch race; high jump, running hop, step and jump.

There will also be a number of events run off, for which entries can be made on the grounds on the day mentioned. These will be as follows:

One hundred yards boys' race and one mile boys' race, 17 years of age and under; 100 yards, married men's race, 30 years of age and over. All running club men barred in this contest.

The band will be in attendance and good prizes will be offered for the various events.

A FAN'S REQUEST.

When I have gone, friends, bury me
 Beneath the old home plate;
That I may hear a fanning bee;
 Perhaps a batter's fate.
Just put a rain check in my hand
 In case the showers fall,
That I may float back to the Land
 Of [illegible] and Old Base Ball.

Libby, a mining and lumber town on the north slope of the Cabinet mountains, in the northwestern part of Montana, northeast of Spokane, is the home of a team of non-professional baseball players, which has gone through 15 seasons without a defeat.

Experts declare there is not another team in the history of the game that can make such a showing. The Libby team has played against the best nines in northern Idaho and western Montana, and travelling organizations. So far this season it has defeated clubs from Troy, Bonners Ferry, Rexford, Whitefish and several other towns in Idaho and Montana.

This is not to be taken to mean that the club is invincible or that it has not played against superior teams, but to indicate that its team work is as near perfection as human ingenuity can make it. The club does not possess one of the original nine of 1894, though the organization has been kept up and played a regular schedule every season since that time.

Jeff Pfeffer had the satisfaction of whitewashing his old team mates yesterday. The Leafs got 14 hits off the Oriole twirler. The score was 7—0.

In the two games with Baltimore, Wohlensaul, of Toronto, was at bat eleven times, but only gets credit for one, having had six bases on balls and four sacrifices.

To-day Jim Jeffries will put up his forfeit with Johnson for their coming fight—which will probably never take place.

THE RING

To-day's the day that Jeffries promises to call Jack Johnson in the shape of a forfeit. The unbeaten champion is in New York and those who talked with him in Toronto believe he will put up the coin, and whether Tommy Burns' conqueror will toe the scratch remains to be seen. Johnson protested between showers while at the Island that he had his money up—to some he said in Chicago, and to others in New York. The black talked wildly, also otherwise, particularly when he proposed races at different distances with Longboat and Shrubb for real money.—Toronto World.

T.A.S. PLAYERS SHOW UP WELL

Yeb Flaherty Leads Team With a Perfect Average in the Field

The figures showing the work of the T.A.S. players in the field are interesting, as they show where the strength of this team lies. Quinlan, McFadden and M. O'Brien have been called upon to do the greater part of the work. Flaherty leads his team with a perfect average.—

BALL GAME WILL BE FEATURE AT PICNIC

One of the many features at the Printers' Picnic at Idyl Wyld on Civic Holiday will be the annual baseball match between the Review ball team and the nine beginners from the George street print shop, who will face the Review's artists and wallop the atmosphere before the untouchable curves of the Conservative Mathewson.

Pitchers Craig and McRae of the respective aggregations are limbering up in the rustic breezes in preparation for the battle, the former at Stoney Lake and the latter in the primitive environment of Maxville. Both are equipped with Spalding's textbook on "How to Fool the Batter," and will be in the best of form for the game.

PRUNES QUINLAN DID GREAT WORK

The following is taken from Monday's issue of the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle:—

"At the West End Park yesterday afternoon the West Ends defeated the Cardinals in an interesting and exciting ten innings game. After McQuay, of the Cardinals, had been batted for seven runs in four innings Prunes Quinlan, a pitcher from Peterborough, Ont., relieved him and held the Cardinals at his mercy for the remainder of the game. The features of the contest were the fielding of Brown, Warner and Welsher, and the batting of Brown and Kietohmer. Over 2,500 people witnessed the game. The West Ends are to play the Gubler Club next Sunday in their second game of a series of three. Quinlan struck out seven men in the six innings and gave only one base on balls, while McQuay issued six passes and struck out two men in the four innings he pitched."

ROWING

St. Catharines, July 27.—On the eve of the thirtieth annual regatta the regatta committee of the C.A.A.O. finds itself with the largest and most diversified list of entries ever received. Each year the famous local course has grown in popularity and conditions of the course are such at all times that the oarsmen in their frail shells are sure of the best possible opportunity of rowing at top speed and many records already have gone by the board over this now famous course. The mighty oarsmen from the United States and Canada have had many a hard fought battle at the Canadian Henley, and each year sees an increase in the number of entries from the American side. This year there will be representatives from Halifax on the extreme east, and Vancouver on the extreme west, from as far north at Ottawa and from the south of our sister republic from Baltimore, Md.

BASEBALL

Norwood's half holiday last Wednesday afternoon gave the merchants and clerks a choice of two places to attend sports—Hastings for baseball and Havelock for football. The majority, however, preferred to accompany their team to Hastings, where they played winning ball.

The game started on appointed time, 4 o'clock, but after the first innings was over rain commenced to fall. Norwood, however, had their second, and the game was called off till evening. The score was 2—0 in favor of Hastings.

At 6.30 the game proceeded, Hastings having things their own way. The score at the 6th innings was 8—2 in favor of Hastings.

The Norwood boys woke up, and before Frost, the Hastings twirler, could put them to sleep again they had hammered out 14 hits for a count of six runs in three innings, tieing the score.

Hastings, however, added another in the last, winning the game by 9—8.

The game was full of brilliant features, including a triple play. Pufier, one of Norwood's heavy hitters, put out a nice two-bagger with two men on bases. A fine run and a phenominal catch by the Hastings centre fielder robbed him of his hit, and putting the ball to second, and then to first, put out both runners before returning.

Despite the bad weather a fair crowd was present.

ROBBERY CHARGE AGAINST MEXICANS WAS DISMISSED

Ottawa, Ont., July 27.—After a five-hour session yesterday afternoon, Magistrate O'Keefe dismissed the charge of robbery under threat of violence preferred by John Stokes, the Bulgarian gypsy leader, against Steven George, Peter Mitchell, Peter Sterio, Stephen John and Spido John, of the Mexican gypsy camp at Hull. The alleged offence took place a week ago last night and Stokes alleged that he was robbed of $200 at the point of a pistol while his wife was wounded by a knife in the hands of Peter Mitchell. The scene as the verdict was rendered was extremely picturesque, the gypsy women and men forming an animated gesticulating mass of color.

The evidence for the prosecution was heard in the morning, and witnesses for the defence testified in the afternoon.

For the defence, Mr. L. A. Cousineau, advocate, of Hull, testified that the Mexicans designated had left his place at 11.40 on the night of Monday, July 19th, and had been driven in Max Charbonneau's auto to their own camp, several miles from Hull, after first spending some time in Mr. Gauthier's hotel across the street.

This evidence was supported by Messrs Gauthier and Charbonneau. All the defendants likewise testified and Magistrate O'Keefe decided that the alibi was sufficiently strong to dismiss the charge against the five accused.

The Hull gypsies were found by Recorder Desjardins not to be vagrants and the charges against sixteen of their number, twelve men and four women, were therefore dismissed this morning.

Meanwhile the complicated charges brought by the Hull gypsies against several of the Ottawa tribe crawl along in the Hull magistrate's court. Two cases have already been heard and the defendants sent to take their trial at the court of King's bench, but two are yet to be heard. This morning Magistrate Goyette commenced the hearing of the evidence in the case of Eli Stokes, of Ottawa, who is accused of using insulting language towards Peter Sterio of the Hull tribe. Sterio complains that Stokes accused him of stealing some money from the Ottawa gypsies. The case is still in progress this afternoon.

The Hull gypsies are greatly elated over their victories in the Ottawa and Hull courts.

THE BY-LAWS

To Be Voted on Thursday, July 29th.

Why You Should Vote For the Smith Street Bridge By-law.

1. BECAUSE the old bridge is "Condemned".
2. BECAUSE the northern part of the city cannot exist without this means of communication,
3. BECAUSE the loss in assessable values in one year would pay for the new bridge.
4. BECAUSE the proposed concrete bridge is just as cheap to build and far less expensive thereafter than any other sort of bridge. All but the cement is "Local Industry".

Why You Should Vote For the Street Extension and Filling-in By-law.

1. BECAUSE the money for street extension had to be spent and has been spent. Do you want it on the debenture rate or on next year's rate? If on the debenture rate, vote for the By-law.

Why Vote for the Filling-in?

1. BECAUSE this large strip of land along the C.P.R. spur is worth $20,00000 to Peterborough. We get it for ten thousand. It will be the future market-place for the wives of our workers. The present market property is too valuable for merely market purposes.

JOHNSTON BROKE WANTS A FIGHT

San Francisco has many fighters at present, but none of them seem to have any great desire to fight. Only a championship match would draw here now. Battling Nelson has sent word that he will rest for some time, and under no conditions will he fight here in September.

Jack Johnson is apparently broke, as he has wired local promoters to get him a match at once. Al Kaufman does not want the negro's game, and Ketchel will soon go into the hills with his manager, Willus Britt. So it looks bad for Little Arthur.

EXCITED HOLLAND.

Amusing Scenes Prior to the Birth of the Princess.

Some amusing stories are told of the popular excitement in Holland prior to the birth of the queen's baby. In more than one place false alarms were given by the premature distribution of handbills printed in advance for issue as soon as the birth occurred. Some of these got into circulation even at The Hague. A stationer who had a stock of them ready was called up on the telephone. "Who is there?" he asked. The reply came, "Prins," a fairly common name in Holland.

He did not stop to hear any more. His mind, running constantly on the event awaited at the palace, jumped to the conclusion that this was the announcement all Holland was expecting so eagerly. He rushed off to a cupboard, pulled out the handbills on which was printed in bold letters "Prins" (prince) and began giving them away. Ten minutes later a sad stationer was locking up that cupboard again and reflecting on the Dutch proverb which says, "Make sure the bell is ringing before you start for church."

In a little town of north Holland an even greater confusion was caused. A bundle of these handbills was dispatched to a shopkeeper from Amsterdam. There were three different kinds. One said "Prince," another "Princess" and a third "Twins." The shopkeeper opened the parcel unsuspectingly and saw that the top bill announced the birth of a male heir. Instantly he seized an armful of the papers and ran out, distributing them as he went. For a few minutes all was joy and exhilaration. But then there arose disputes. "Long live our little prince!" cried one. "Prince?" said another. "Why, man, it's a princess." "What are you talking about?" inquired a third in amazement. "It's twins. Look here."

The shopkeeper, it may be imagined, had a bad quarter of an hour before the mystery was cleared up by the discovery of the letter of explanation which he had overlooked.—Argonaut.

The Old Fashioned Doorplate.

"Doorplates are going out of fashion," said a man whose business it is to make plates of all kinds. "Twenty years ago every man of prominence had his name graven upon a plate and that plate affixed to his front door that all might know who dwelt within. The daily task of the negro houseman was to rub the doorplate until it shone. It took the place of the lares and penates of the Romans and was attended to just as carefully as were the ancient household gods. Everything is changed now, though, I suppose the reason is that people don't have homes as they used to. They simply live in houses and apartments and move around so much that a doorplate couldn't possibly endure the peripatetic existence. A collection of brass doorplates screwed to the portal of a big apartment building would, I confess, look rather odd."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Precocious Art.

Marcel Lavallard, the French boy artist who has just had a picture accepted for the salon within a month of his twelfth birthday, has probably established a new record in artistic precocity, although he had a formidable rival a few years ago in Henri Edonard Cortes, who had a picture exhibited at the salon when he was only six months older. Even Millais was seventeen (within a month) when he made his first appearance at the Royal academy, and Watts and Marcus Stone were the same age.—Landseer was more precocious, for he had his first picture on the academy walls at thirteen. Mr. Walter Crane was similarly honored at sixteen, Mr. Briton Riviere at seventeen and Mr. Frith at twenty-one.—Westminster Gazette.

Sutton Inquiry Adjourned.

Annapolis, Md., July 28.—The Sutton inquiry was adjourned yesterday indefinitely. This action was taken on a ruling of the court that Mrs. Sutton was a complainant in the case, and all the officers concerned in the affair were made party defendants.

Train Hits Hand Car.

Welland, July 28.—A Grand Trunk yard engine struck a handcar on which were several men in the yards yesterday morning, killing an Italian named Eppenalone, the man's head being crushed. The rest of the men escaped by jumping.

Pension for Lady Wylie.

London, July 28.—The Government has granted a pension of $2,500 annually to Lady Wyllie, widow of Lt.-Col. Wyllie, who was assassinated recently by Madarial Dhingri, an Indian student, in the Imperial Institute.

Read what one of the GREATEST NEWSPAPERS IN AMERICA has to say on this subject:

"The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. # FUTURE OF THE AIRSHIP NATIONAL BOUNDARIES MAY DISAPPEAR

Count Zeppelin explains their possibilities and their general value.—In my newest type of airship I have a vessel which can rise from the Lake of Constance with twelve persons on board and remain four days in the air, covering in this period some 2,500 miles. If I were to start from a point in lowlying northern Germany—somewhere, for instance, near Berlin—I could carry twenty men. Should I desire to make a shorter voyage—of only three hours, say—I could take even more passengers, or the same weight in goods (mail matter, money, valuables, instruments, etc.)—in short, a large quantity of valuable articles of light weight; and in time of war I could transport munitions, or, in case of need, distribute infantry ammunition to the army I was fighting with. It is not true, as certain newspapers have affirmed, that I propose to build an airship which will carry a hundred passengers, although such a monster is by no means beyond the resources of modern technical science. But it is quite certain that in a future, already visible, there will be airships running forty miles an hour, which will cover 2,000 miles in two days; or, if travelling at a lower speed, 4,000 miles in four and one-half days.

Objection has been raised that my airships are too expensive to allow of their frequent use. Certainly only a very few rich men could use them for pleasure, but the number will be greater than those who can purchase ocean-going steam yachts. An airship cannot be too costly, however, which in all weathers, by day or by night, can inform the general or admiral of his foe's doings, which can pass to the extreme frontiers of the enemy's domain, and thus materially assist toward final victory. The fact is that the costliness of airships is much exaggerated; the smallest warship, a squadron of cavalry, a battery of artillery, costs considerably more. And nothing will be thought of the outlay on an airship when, by its means, a colony can be acquired and unexplored territory opened up to civilization.

As commercial undertakings, airships will prove perfectly practical. I assume, for instance, the foundation of airship communication between Berlin and Copenhagen. The capital needed for one airship, a main station at Berlin, and a landing station at Copenhagen, would be about $250,000. The revenue allowing for one hundred flights to Copenhagen and back to Berlin each year (the time of the trip one-half that of the present system), with an average of twenty-five travellers, each paying $12.50, would amount to $62,500 a year. For insurance, depreciation, and cost of running, the outlay would be $37,500. This would leave a profit of $25,000, or ten per cent. on the capital. Better still, I can imagine a line from Stuttgart to Lucerne, passing over the monuments of Germany's former greatness, the ruins of the Hohenstaufen and Hapsburg imperial seats, and the newly-restored Hohenzollern burg,—and thence into Switzerland.

These speculations finally suggest the question whether flight over political frontiers and customs boundaries will be left free to travellers. As the closing of the air is quite unthinkable, and the landing of passengers and goods in foreign lands cannot be prevented, the prohibition of international airship communication is impossible. The effect of airships will rather be to create a bond of union between the nations. Aerial travel will be regulated by international treaty. This will not be so hard, as it seems at first sight. Already we have international maritime conventions, and maritime law. In the same way, treaties will be made, fixing the points from which airships bound for foreign countries must start, and those where they must land. Air navigators, before starting, will obtain from consuls regular ship's papers, giving the number of passengers carried and the amount of mail matter, merchandise, etc.—Count Zeppelin in Trade Review.

HER REBEL HEART.

An Incident That Brought It Into Loving Submission.

By ALEXANDRA DAGMAR.

[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Oh, I spoke once, and I grieved thee sore!
I remember all that I said!
—Jean Ingelow.

"Oh, it's you!" commented Reeda ungraciously.

She looked up from the basin of soapsuds on the dining room table. She was washing her great-grandmother's belleek—a task which she was averse to intrusting to hands less careful than her own. Inwardly she was meditating the reprimand she would bestow upon Janet for permitting this particular visitor to enter unannounced.

"You don't appear overwhelmingly glad to see me!" returned Aubrey Bowden.

She sent him a swift glance—one of obvious annoyance. He was standing in the doorway. Tall, athletic, in his leather coat, corduroy knickerbockers and high rubber boots, she was forced to admit that he made a gallant figure.

But she dropped her eyes and went on with her task.

Not so Aubrey Bowden. He kept his gaze fastened upon her—a gaze at once whimsical and adoring. Certainly she looked extremely pretty, her blue morning gown enveloped in a blue apron, her sleeves rolled up over the bewitching dimples in the elbows, a flicker of angry color showing through the fairness of her cheek.

Bowden made a fresh conversational plunge.

"I'm going down to the Kankakee marshes shooting," he said. "There are a lot of the fellows going—my cousin, Andrew, and some more. Reeda," quizzically, as she still evinced no sign of interest, "aren't you going to wish me good sport? I came six blocks out of my way to tell you about it."

She found it hard to resist him when his voice had that husky note in it—half teasing, half loving. But she hardened her heart and replied coldly:

"GOODBY, DEAR," HE SAID BROKENLY.

"Only this, Aubrey Bowden—that I don't wish to know for the future where you go or what you do. After the outrageous way you acted Tuesday evening, going away and leaving me alone for half an hour at the theater while you flirted with that odious Bella Wier, I've decided that I do not wish you to call here any more!"

"Oh, I say, Reeda!" He laughed protestingly and took a step forward. "You don't mean that, you know! I was not gone more than ten minutes. I used to go to school with Bella Wier. And I hadn't see her for more than a year."

"You may see her as often as you desire after this!" said Reeda significantly.

There was no smile in the young fellow's handsome eyes now.

"Reeda," he said quietly, "look at me!"

He was beside her. She felt herself forced to obey that grave command. She lifted to his face her gray, black fringed eyes, filled with a sullenness foreign to them.

"Say you don't mean to break with me for such a trifle," he pleaded. "Why, I love you, Reeda. You know that."

"I have nothing to reconsider." She never knew afterward how she managed to enunciate the cruel words. "I want you to go away and never come to see me again."

For one breathless moment they stood looking into each other's eyes. And there was that in his face that dumbly reproached her. Before she could bring herself to make retraction he was striding to the door.

"Goodby, dear," he said brokenly. "I—I hope"—

The sentence trailed off into silence, and he was gone.

The girl stood staring at the closed door. It looked like the door of fate itself—shut fast in her face. She saw it through a gush of belated, futile tears.

The day wore on—a dull, wretched, aimless day. She could settle to nothing. Every object brought some memory connected with the man she had sent out of her life.

When she dressed for the evening she found herself selecting the gown he best liked and realized with a wretched pang that he would no more murmur praise of it—or of her. She hated that pretty rosy silk, with its ecru silken laces and coquettish little black velvet bows.

So forlorn she felt, so lonely, so bereft, it was with slight surprise that, picking up the evening paper, she scanned a tragic headline. But as the full significance of what that ghastly line of type indicated became plain to her she gave a cry—a faint, weak, desperate cry—and her mother, rushing to her, found her, face downward, on the floor, the paper clutched tightly in her hand.

To bring her back to consciousness was the first thing to do—to find out what had shocked her, the second. And the paragraph in the paper, telling of the accidental discharge of a gun among a party of hunters bound for the Kankakee marshes revealed the latter. For the name of the man fatally wounded was given as that of Aubrey Bowden!

The physician, bending over the girl as the fits of unconsciousness succeeded one another, shook his head gravely. "I am very much afraid"—he began.

A queer, glad cry from Reeda startled them. She was sitting straight up, her arms extended. The man at the threshold sprang forward and caught her in his arms.

"It was Andrew—poor Andrew!" he explained. "The reporter got the names mixed. I've a flesh wound from the explosion, nothing more. I hurried here. I feared you might learn of the accident. And, Reeda, darling, did you care, then, so much?"

The terrible tension over, she gave way, sobbing convulsively. The doctor beckoned to her mother. They left the room.

"There is nothing more for me to do, thank God," the old man said.

Reeda put her arms around her lover's neck and clasped her hands tightly and held him as though she would never let him go.

"Forgive me!" she entreated. "I was sorry while I was speaking—I was sorry when you went. All day long I knew that if you never came back I should want to die. Then when I saw the paper I thought that I was being punished and that indeed you never would come back. Dearest, forgive me!"

"When a man loves as I love you," he said, "he has never anything to forgive. He can only keep on loving—always."

A Faithful Dog.

Many hundred years ago there lived at Athens a dog whose faithfulness has caused him to be mentioned in history, and in the Grecian city his story is often repeated.

The dog guarded one of the heathen temples at Athens. One night a thief stole into this building and carried off some of the most valuable treasures. The dog vainly barked his loudest to frighten the thief and to rouse the keepers as the man went off with the jewels. But the faithful dog did not mean to lose sight of the rascal, and all through the night he followed him.

By daybreak the poor animal had become very weary, but still he kept the robber in sight. The latter tried to feed him, but as he made friends with the passersby he took it from them instead. Whenever the thief stopped to rest the dog remained near him, and soon a report went through the country of the animal's strange behavior.

The keepers of the temple, hearing the story, went in search of the dog, and they found him still at the heels of the thief at a town called Cronyon. The robber was arrested, taken back to Athens and there punished. The judges were so pleased with the dog's sagacity and faithfulness that they ordered him to be fed every day for the rest of his life at the public expense.

Animals That Weep.

"He cried like a calf" is a remark sometimes heard. It is no disgrace for a calf to cry, and he sheds tears in quantities when his emotions justify them. It is even easier for him to cry than for many other animals, because his lachrymal apparatus is perfect and very productive.

A scientific writer in Nature says that the ruminants are the animals which weep most readily. Hunters have long known that a deer at bay cries profusely. The tears will roll down the nose of a bear when he feels that his last hour is approaching. The big, tender eyes of the giraffe fill with tears as he looks at the hunter who has wounded him.

Dogs weep very easily. The dog has tears both in his eyes and voice when his beloved master goes away and leaves him tied up at home. Some varieties of monkeys seem to be particularly addicted to crying, and not a few aquatic mammals also find it easy to weep when the occasion requires it. Seals in particular are often seen to cry.

Elephants weep profusely when wounded or when they see that escape from their enemies is impossible. The animals here mentioned are the chief ones that are known to weep, but there is no doubt that many others also display similar emotion.

Evolution.

Johnny was spelling his way through a marriage notice in the morning paper.

"At high noon," he read, "the clergyman took his stand beneath the floral bell, and to the music of the wedding march the contradicting parties moved down the"—

THE ROMANTIC CAPTURE OF JOHN PICHE AFTER TWO YEARS

The Ontario Goverrment is Determined That Those Who Defy the Law Shall Not Escape—Perjury and Disregard of Subpoenas to be Brought to Certain Punishment.

The capture of John Piche by the detectives of the Provincial Government after a two years' chase and an expenditure of twenty thousand dollars is intended as a warning to those who had an idea that it only required a little dare-devil pluck in going away and treating subpoenas and legal ordinances with contempt, to secure a safe escape from all the inconveniences of attending at court and undergoing cross-examination. It closes the door to probery of witnesses. It never was easy to commit perjury, hence it was thought easier to run away than to run the risk of being caught lying.

Both are now, however, to be punished as perhaps never before. The edict has gone forth. Neglect of summonses to trial and lying under both will be pursued even for ten years. The wilds of the north, the muskegs of the Abittibi district, and the wastes of the great stretches known as the Barren Lands, had no terrors for sleuths of the government, who went overland to the Yukon and back before they got their man. It took two years of the hardest kind of work, for Piche rivalled the wolverine in cunning and daring. But it was no go. He was caught and he collapsed. The following is clipped from the Toronto World:—

The arrest of Angus McKelvie, vice-president of the company, on a charge of giving a bribe to John Piche to clear the country, by which the company was able to get title to the property, has caused much excitement. He was one of the most prominent men in this northern country. He was mayor of New Liskeard for two terms, and was the Liberal candidate in the last provincial election, being being defeated by R. T. Shillington. He is also superintendent of the Presbyterian church, and is said to be worth close to a million dollars. With Thomas McCamus, another director, he owns a large sawmill and tracts of lumber berths in this country.

Piche claims that he received only $6,000 for skipping the country, and that he was to receive $10,000 a year while away. It is said Piche is ready to expose the whole transaction.

Neither Deputy Attorney-General Cartwright nor Provincial Inspector Rogers, who arrested Andrew McKelvie, the Temiskaming and Hudson Bay Mining Co. director, was willing to discuss the matter at the parliament buildings yesterday, though it was virtually admitted that Piche's confession led to the arrest. They would neither say whether Piche's confession implicated anyone else nor if McKelvie had made a statement when arrested. The attorney-General is out of the city and could not be seen.

Piche will be the star witness at the hearing of McKelvie's case on Thursday, and it is said he will tell all he knows.

The arrest it is said, undoubtedly followed a full confession by John Piche, a prospector, who was charged with accepting a $25,000 bribe to abstain from giving evidence in an action between the attorney-general and one Henry Thompson, a real estate man of New Liskeard, regarding the title to the Hudson Bay Mine.

Other arrests are expected to follow.

BIRTH

COMSTOCK.—At the Nicholls Hospital, on Friday, July 23rd, to Mr. and Mrs. J. Comstock, a daughter.

CHAIRMAN TO MR. BREWER

To the Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir:—

I have read the letter of Mr. Brewer regarding the proposed Smith street bridge. His whole objection is founded upon a supposition that piles will be needed in the foundation. This is a mistake. The foundation will not—indeed, could not—be piled, and the location is one suitable for a concrete bridge. I enclose a report from the city engineer which shows this, which I wish you would publish with this.

Yours truly,
HARRY PHELAN.
Chairman Board of Works.

NATURE OF THE BED OF RIVER

City Engineer Makes Report After Careful Examination

Ald. Phelan,
Chairman Board of Works.

Dear Sir:—

RE SMITH STREET BRIDGE.

In reply to your inquiry of to-day as to the nature of the bed of the river at the site of the Smith street bridge, I beg to say that, having made careful investigation, I find as follows:

The eastern span, where the water is deepest, is mostly exposed limestone rock; the central and western spans are boulders, and gravel on top of rock.

Provision is made in the specification to ensure a good foundation by excavating within the caissons until a satisfactory bottom is attained.

It is impossible to drive piles in this bed.

Yours truly,
R. A. S. HAY,
City Engineer.

VISITORS SAW BRIGADE RESPOND

An alarm was sent in from box 22 this morning in order that the delegates attending the convention here might witness the fire department in action. The brigade arrived at the corner of Queen and Simcoe street in two minutes 10 seconds, according to the time taken by one of the visitors. On returning to the fire hall the brigade stopped at the Foresters' Hall, and a photo was taken, in which was included a number of the delegates, and afterwards the fire hall was inspected.

ANNUAL REGATTA IS PROPOSED

A few years ago some agitation was set on foot to inaugurate an annual regatta for the river enthusiasts of this city. For some unknown reason, however, the project was soon dropped, and nothing more was heard of it. It seems too bad that this should be the case, as there were many people in this city who for various reasons are unable to attend the Stoney Lake, Chemong and Sturgeon Point regattas. Could not something be done about it? A fine course could be mapped out along the open stretch in front of the Otonabee boathouse, and if some one would only take hold of the matter a good programme could be arranged.

Here and There

A reporter of one of the local papers was threatened with expulsion from the police station this morning by one of the policemen. For a newspaper man to be addressed in this manner by an ordinary "cop" is certainly robbing journalism of all the dignity that may have been hitherto attached to it.

A man from Wayback visited a local picture show the other day for the first time and was so astounded by what he saw that he beat a hasty retreat and said that "the devil was behind it all." His statement was not accepted by the management as a direct compliment.

Art Burn has been corralled by the Vancouver Amateur Committee for taking money in connection with amateur Marathon races. To think that Mr. Burn would do a thing like this will come as a direct shock to the sport followers of Peterborough.

The city editor writes from Maxville, where he is spending a holiday after a two weeks' stringent quarantine. In comparing Maxville with the Little Lake cemetery he gives his home town the preference.

Gertrude Hoffman was arrested in New York the other day after her performance of the Mendelssohn Spring Song dance. It is said to be the most Eve-like performance on the New York stage this year.

The tall weeds around the armories are in unfavorable contrast to the nicely-kept flower beds on the Collegiate premises. It has been suggested that the regiment has its next march-out around the building instead of on the streets, in order that the weeds may be trampled down and the armories seen to advantage from George street.

PLACES HIS LOSS AT $3,000

Mr. D. Florence stated to the Review this morning that his loss as a result of the fire yesterday morning amounts to $3,000. He carried insurance to the amount of $2,000, but the insurance men have not yet arrived to make any settlement, so Mr. Florence cannot say just what he will do in regard to the business in the future.

OBITUARY

MRS. JANE BEATTY JOHNSTON.

The death occurred in Otonabee today of Mrs. Jane Beatty Johnston, relict of the late James Johnston, at the age of 54 years. The funeral will leave the family residence on Thursday afternoon, at 2.30, and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery.

The death occurred yesterday evening at the Nicholls Hospital of Mary Ann Picken, aged 65 years, widow of the late Adam Peters of Percy township. The late Mrs. Peters had been ailing for some time with a lingering illness. She was highly respected in the community in which she had lately resided, and her demise will be regretted by a large number of friends and acquaintances. A grown-up family survive her. Mrs. C. Brewer, Alfred street, city, is a sister.

The remains will be taken to Hastings this morning for interment.

THIS VISITOR GOT IN WRONG

A resident of Cavan imbibed too freely of the cup that cheers this morning and entered a house on Charlotte street, much to the alarm of its owner, who came in shortly after and found the unwelcome visitor sitting on a chair. A police officer was summoned and escorted him to the bosses' headquarters, Water street.

LITTLE CHILD BURNED TO DEATH

Special to The Review.

Cannington, July 28.—While Mrs. Chas. Hill was out shopping yesterday afternoon her three years old daughter, Pearl, got hold of some matches and set fire to her clothing. The neighbors, hearing the child's screams, went to her assitance, but before the fire could be put out the child was badly burned and died early this morning.

CANADIANS WIN DOUBLES AT BISLEY

London, July 28.—Sergt. Kelly of Toronto and Color Sgt. Freeborne of Hamilton won "Doubles" at Bisley.

SMALLPOX IN WOODSTOCK

A mild form of smallpox similar to the kind that broke out in the recent epidemic in Peterborough has developed in Woodstock.

The St. Thomas Times says: Woodstock General Hospital is at present under quarantine. On Friday last a case developed which kept the doctors speculating as to its origin. On Saturday a consultation of city medical men decided that the patient should be removed to the isolation hospital. The case is considered to be a light type of smallpox. A medical man from Toronto came up to attend the patient in the isolation building. The most serious circumstance is that the patient was in the public ward of the general hospital, and this institution is now necessarily under quarantine for a time.

CASE AGAINST MISSISSAUGAS

The Chemong and Rice Lake Mississaugas are very much interested in the case against their fellow tribesmen in Western Ontario. A western despatch says:

Andrew G. Chisholm, a London solicitor, holds a judgment for $10,710, against the chief councillor and councillors of the Mississaugas of the Credit, living on the Brant and Haldimand reserves, and on Monday at Osgoode Hall members of the tribe petitioned against the judgment, which was delivered by Judge Elliott, of London. This litigation arises from an agreement of retainer entered into by Chisholm and head men of the tribe in 1896, as a result of which Chisholm petitioned for the full annuity granted to the Mississaugas of the Credit under their treaty with the king in 1818, and the department of Indian affairs paid the Indians $8,940 as due under the annuity.

ARE SCOURING THE WOODS SEARCHING FOR HORRIGAN

All Efforts to Find Missing Ex-Alderman, Who Was Lost on Sunday Last, Have Proved Unavailing—Trying to Keep the News From His Mother.

Port Arthur, July 29.—More than one hundred men are now engaged searching for ex-Alderman George Horrigan, the prominent citizen who on Sunday last became separated from George Hodder and W. C. Dalton in the woods of Black Bay Peninsula.

They rushed across the forty-mile strip of water between here and Black Bay. The tug Picket is in constant commission carrying men and supplies.

Yesterday the big tug Whalen took out a whole military company and returning yesterday afternoon brought word that no trace had yet been found. The Picket left again with a full load of supplies. An unsuccessful effort was made to get bloodhounds from Duluth.

The disappearance of Horrigan under such dramatic circumstances and the energy with which the search is being carried on has created great excitement in this city. Every incoming boat is greeted by crowds looking for news.

Country, pure wilderness, thickly wooded, low and wet in places and not devoid of bear, lynx and other such animals, while it is the height of the fly season. Some believe flies alone would make it impossible for a man to live in the woods, added to which Horrigan was lightly clad and without provisions.

A pathetic feature of the case is the effort made to keep the news of his disappearance from Horrigan's aged mother. Telephone lines to the residence have been cut and a man is on guard on the street to prevent the possibility of anyone taking in word of the affair. Local papers have been requested not to publish facts in order to assist in this way and no word of it has appeared in print yet in the Port Arthur newspapers. Horrigan is about 35 years of age, a prominent Liberal and a close friend of James Conmee, M.P.

ARRESTED BY DETECTIVE IN HAMILTON BARBER SHOP

Young Man Who Stole Valise and Suit of Clothes From Alex. Fleming of This City Caught at Last.

Herbert Somerville was arrested this morning by Detective Sayer on a charge of stealing a valise and a suit of clothes from Alex. Fleming, in February last. The alleged offense was committed in a boarding house in which the two men stayed, it being alleged that Somerville, who is about 30 years of age, walked off with the articles. He went to Chicago and remained there for some time. Lately, he decided to return to Hamilton and this morning stepped off the train from Chicago. He went direct to a local barber shop to be shaved. Detective Sayer was in the chair at the time, and he recognised Somerville as the man for whom a warrant had been issued several months ago. After being shaved, the detective waited in the shop until the barber finished shaving Somerville, who was then placed under arrest and taken to the police station. His valise was taken along too. Somerville appeared before the magistrate and was remanded until Monday. Fleming, the complainant, is in Peterborough, and the police will send for him.

MUST SUBMIT RIFLE TO N.R.A.

London, July 29.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The National Rifle Association Council have decided that no service rifle of any pattern other than of the official pattern in use by the British army, will be admitted in service rifle competitions, unless an officially certified specimen of such rifle be deposited with the N.R.A. at least three months before the commencement of the Bisley meeting, and be approved for use at the Bisley meeting.

Sergt. W. Kelly of the Toronto Grenadiers, and Freeborn of Hamilton, were first in the doubles at Bisley, winning 80 shillings. McVittie and Lieut. Smith were sixth, 40 shillings.

In the Wantage, Blackburn was 13th, with 30; Mortimer 21st, with 29; Stack, 55th, with 20; Blackburn of Winnipeg was seventh in the Pixley match; Mitchell 54th, and Mortimer 55th. Each won 20 shillings.

ICEBERGS ARE CAUSING TROUBLE

St. John's, Nfld., July 29.—The menacing presence of icebergs in the path of the ocean steamers off Cape Race has again been manifested, the Canadian Pacific Railway steamer Montrose, from London via Antwerp, for Montreal, having proceeded only yesterday morning after an enforced halt of four days for the purpose of effecting temporary repairs following a collision with a giant ice pillar.

The plight of the steamer, which is carrying passengers and freight from Europe to Montreal, was not known here until yesterday when the British warship Brilliant arrived and reported standing by the Montrose for four days off Cape Race and helping to repair the damage.

Both bows of the Montrose are telescoped and the hawser pipes entirely destroyed. The forepeak was flooded.

REVOLUTION IS SERIOUS

Rioting in Barcelona Necessitates Artillery Volleys

Madrid, July 29.—The revolution in Catalonia has reached a serious stage.

There is much bloodshed, and artillery has been employed in the streets of Barcelona to quell the outbreaks. The city is terror-stricken. The revolutionists are reported to be fighting desperately behind barricades. The troops include mounted artillery and the defences of the rebels have been raked with shot.

The greatest inquietude exists in Madrid.

King Alfonso was closeted until a late hour with Premier Maura, and an official note was issued, saying that the situation was exceedingly grave, and that the rebellion must be repressed with an iron hand, as the Catalonians were struggling to end all Spanish revolutionists.

The armored cruisers Amperador Carlos V. and Prince de Asturias, and three destroyers have been ordered to Barcelona.

BLACK HAND IS FEARED AT TOWN OF MICHEL, B.C.

Citizens of Mining Town Are Threatened by Italian Desperadoes and Great Excitement Prevails Among White Residents.

Vancouver, July 29.—Michel, B.C., one of the larger coal mining towns in the Crow's Nest district, was an armed camp yesterday because of the activity of the Black Hand Society. Great excitement has prevailed since Sunday, when five leaders of the foreign miners and business men were threatened with instant death by the Black Hand unless they paid $200 each. In the letters received places for deposit of the money were designated, one of them being alongside a large rock, which is a landmark at the rear of the Roman Catholic Church.

Tuesday night the threatened men turned over the letters to the police and Provincial Constables Stevenson and Bulger immediately made an investigation. The time set for deposit of the money was between 10 o'clock Tuesday night and 2 o'clock Wednesday morning. Several men were posted at the designated places and fake parcels were placed in the hiding places by the recipients of the letters, but no attempt was made by the Black Hand gang to claim the bounty.

Everyone in town is ~~armed and~~ the Italian people are out to assist the police in protecting the lives of the threatened men.

No member of the big colony of Italian miners is working. Three hundred and fifty armed Italians held a meeting yesterday afternoon and discussed the situation. The police force is being doubled by the swearing in of specials. Several Italians are under suspicion. They are being closely watched and any attempt to leave the city will result in their immediate arrest.

PEACH BASKETS HAVE GOT TO GO

Newest Hat Has Arrived and is 13 Inches High

New York, July 29.—A consignment of 200 of the monumental hats for women which it is predicted will displace the wide-spreading peach baskets got here Tuesday from Paris on the steamship Kronprinz Wilhelm. The hats are made of fur and suggest the bearskins of the Old Guard. They are called Russian toques.

The toque does away with rats and the spreading coiffure that makes a lady's head a good enough umbrella in a rainstorm. On the other hand, it is a skyscraper. The loftiest may be slightly over a foot and a half—more than three times the height of a man's silk hat—from the foundation at the forehead to the apex, which is crowned with an aigrette. The lady who wears the hat must comb her hair upward and secure it in a ball—a high ball—on the very top of her head. Little ladies may wear the very tallest hats but tall ones can soften the grenadier effect by wearing one foot high creations and reducing the spray of feathers. Viewed from a rear elevation, the toque fits the head snugly. When the lady takes it off, as she is expected to do at the theatre, she will reveal a bunch of hair tightly coiled that will not be wide enough to obstruct the view of the stage of any two-eyed man.

You can pick your fur and pay $1,000 for a hat, but it is not doubted that girls with on thousand dollar bills to spare will be towering over their sweethearts in that looklike fur that will have cost not more than $3.98.

TWO FATALITIES IN HAMILTON

Hamilton, July 29.—John Flynn was fatally injured at 4.30 in the Stuart street yards of the G.T.R. last evening, while unloading piles, and an unknown man was run down near the Jockey Club, and his body badly mangled by the G.T.R. flyer from the east.

Flynn was the victim of a very peculiar accident. As a pile was being rolled off a car it broke the skid, one end of which flew up and struck him on the head, giving him such a terrific blow that he died a short time afterwards.

THREE MONTHS FOR SELLING LIQUOR

William Boyer of Wallaceburg came up charged with selling liquor to a minor. The case is adjourned. If he is found guilty it will be his third offence.

Salvatore Tino of Fort Frances, father of Thaveiso Tino, the Black Hand leader, who has already been sent to Stony Mountain, was yesterday sent to the same penitentiary for three years by Magistrate Holland.

Nearly every white resident and settler in the Hazleton, B.C., district has signed a petition asking for the establishment of mounted police patrols immediately for the preservation of peace along the Grand Trunk Pacific construction in the northern interior.

EARNINGS OF C.P.R. FOR JUNE

Montreal, July 29.—Following are the earnings of the C.P.R. in June: Gross earnings $6,550,154; working expenses $4,661,728; net profit $1,888,425.

For twelve months ended June 30, 1908, there was a net profit of $21,792,366.

The increase in net profits over the same period last year is, therefore, for June, $212,929, and for 12 months ended June 30, there was an increase of $1,163,207.

DROWNING AT SNUG HARBOR

Rochester, N.Y., July 29.—Mrs. Gordon Hoyt and Miss Clara Hoyt, mother and daughter, were drowned yesterday at Snug Harbor, near Hammondsport. The daughter had gone in bathing and being seized with cramps called to her mother, who was on the bank nearby. Mrs. Hoyt, who is an expert swimmer, went to the rescue.

The daughter was so frightened that she threw her arms about her mother and her rescuer's efforts were thus so hampered that both drowned before help could reach them.

WEST PETERBORO' ELECTION PROTEST

On the 29th of June, Mr. Burnham, the complainant, was examined by the respondent, Mr. Stratton, through his counsel, Mr. R. R. Hall, for three hours and three-quarters. An adjournment was necessary and it was sought by the respondent to secure an adjournment to July 6th, being a date in Long Vacation. The Rules of Legal Procedure and Practice it was contended by counsel for Mr. Burnham, expressly forbid examination in Long Vacation except by order of the court. The order of the court has been obtained and the examination will continue. Mr. Burnham, under the advice of counsel, also refused to answer certain questions and to produce certain documents, tending to disclose his witnesses and evidence. This refusal was appealed against on behalf of the respondent and came up for argument yesterday (Wednesday) on enlargement from Tuesday and Friday of last week and judgment was reserved.

PRESENT CONDITION OF CEMENT TRADE

J. M. Kilbourn, president of the allied Lakefield, Shallow Lake and Montreal plants, wired the World from Owen Sound as follows: "Statements in your paper, copied from Owen Sound Sun as to shutting down of cement plants at Shallow Lake, Lakefield and Montreal are stupid or malicious falsehoods without any foundation on fact. Plants are all running as usual. Please contradict."

Following this telegram, Leigh C. Todd, agent of the Lakefield Company, stated that the production and sales of the two companies specially referred to are in a position to fill all orders as heretofore. Mr. Todd stated further that he believes the report to the effect that these plants had shut down was inspired by competing American interests.

Over-production and economy exercised in manufacturing by the larger and more up-to-date plants have brought about the present situation in the cement industry, according to D.J. Johnson, manager of the Lehigh Portland Cement Company.

He points out that in 1908 2,665,289 barrels were sold in Canada, and that on January 1st of this year there was a surplus stock on hand of 1,214,021 barrels, or 859,586 barrels more than the stock on hand the year previous. This large stock added to the 1909 production by an increased number of plants, he remarked, could not do other than glut the market and lower the price. The consumption was rapidly increasing, but had not been so rapid as the production during the couple of years.

One reason for the present low quotation, Mr. Johnson, said, was the fact that the rock was being used by the larger plants now, while marl, a more expensive article was almost entirely used in the production of cement a few years ago. At the Lehigh plant at Belleville, which, he stated, was the largest and most complete in the world, rock was entirely used.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Cement sold | 2,436,093 | 2,665,289 | 229,16 |
| Cement manufactured | 2,491,513 | 3,495,961 | 1,004,448 |
| Stock on hand Jan. 1.. | 299,015 | 383,349 | 84,334 |
| Stock on hand Dec. 1 | 364,435 | 1,214,021 | 850,586 |
| Imports of Portland cement ...... ... | 672,630 | 469,049 | .............. |
| Total consumption ... ... | 3,106,723 | 3,134,338 | |
| No. of completed plants operated ...... ... | 17 | 23 | ........... |
| Total daily capacity:..... ... | 14,400 | 27,500 | ........... |

An interesting revelation afforded by the table is that while the number of plants has increased from 17 to 23 in 1908, the daily production was practically doubled. In other words the plants increased 35 per cent. in number and the production increased 91 per cent., which shows that the new plants were larger and more up-to-date thann those previously in operation.

It is stated by cement dealers that no cement is being imported this year the entire supply being manufactured in Canadian plants.

The total daily capacity, according to the government return, is therefore set at over $8,000,000 barrels a year.—Toronto World.

ANOTHER OUTRAGE AT GLACE BAY

Glace Bay, July 29.—An attempt was made to blow up the house of one James Strange, a coal culler, residing at Old Gardner mine, Tuesday night. Gardner is a sparsely settled farming district, lying about two miles to the westward of Dominion Mine, on the shore of Lingan Lake. The S. & L. Railway runs through the rear of the farm. Some of the men in the district work in the mines, but no mine is now operated at Gardner.

THE DELEGATES ARE DINED CANADA PREPARED TO HELP

Britain Must Have Not Only a Home Defence But Also a Long Range One, Says Mr. Haldane—Earl Crewe Presides at Banquet.

London, July 29.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Imperial Defence Conference was opened yesterday, the Earl of Crewe presiding. The conference will last a fortnight.

At a banquet given by the British Empire Club at the Guild Hall last night, Mr. Haldane, Secretary of War, proposing the toast of the club, said:

"There is only one maxim which we can lay down, that the British Empire is one and indivisible on this question of defence (cheers). I believe it to be on that maxim that the conference is really concentrated. We recognize the command of the sea must come first place, and that the army, which to protect the Empire must be an army chained to these shores, but an army of long range suited to deal with problems at long range.

Sir Frederick Borden, replying, said while Canada stood upon her rights, and insisted upon her freedom, it was untrue and unfair to Canada for any man to say, as has been said, that Canada's patriotism and loyalty depended on the slightest degree upon what the fiscal policy might be (hear, hear). He thought true imperialism was that which led different nations along lines of the development of their own resources, but they realized their imperial responsibilities. The people of Canada were prepared to pay their share of cost in thoroughly preparing themselves for local defence; they were preparing best to take their part in the defence of the Empire.

With the guidance of Mr. Haldane, a plan had been adopted in Canada, by which he believed local means of defence would be carried out that should any one dominion wish at any time to send a division of force to assist the Mother Country, it would be easy to carry out that end. 'Why could not the same thing be done in regard to the navy? Canada would be prepared to spend its last dollar to assist in the maintenance of the integrity of the Empire. (Cheers.)

The Times, referring to the imperial defence conference, lays down three principles, one, that each dominion must develop naval resources of its own; two, the training material of this naval force must be as far as possible the same; three, that all individual efforts must be co-ordinated to a common end.

"If," says The Times, "Canada, for instance, in the course of years, were to make the north Pacific her naval sphere, she would do so in the Empire's interests as well as her own in combination with the common naval policy covering all parts of the world," and adds, "the three principles mentioned are broadly accepted."

HAMILTON PAIR ARE ACCUSED

New York, July 29.—Lester Franklin Barry, and his wife Theresa Muller Barry of Hamilton, Ont., were arraigned in the Yorkville Police Court here yesterday, on a charge of attempted blackmail, brought by Samuel Meyers, a former deputy sheriff of Schenectady, N.Y.

Four letters alleged to have been written by the couple, in which money was demanded from Meyers, form the basis of the complaint.

According to Mr. Meyers, who is 78 years old, he met Mrs. Barry, who is only 20 years old, in Broadway about five weeks ago. He saw her several times within the next few days. Then letters came to Meyers purporting to be from Mrs. Barry's father, demanding $10,000. Barry and his wife were held in $3,000 bail for examination on Friday.

AN OVERWHELMING VOTE FOR STRIKE

London, July 29.—The balloting of the members of the Miners' Confederation of Great Britain to decide whether or not a national strike should be declared in support of the Scottish miners, who are resisting a wage reduction of sixpence a day, was concluded yesterday and resulted in 518,361 men voting in favor of a general strike. Only 62,980 voted against the strike.

This unmistakable determination of the men to support their Scottish colleagues and the apparently equally determined refusal of the employers to agree on the miners' terms render the work of intermediaries most difficult.

Another conference between the employers and the men will be held at the Board of Trade to-day, under the chairmanship of Winston Spencer Churchill, and unless a compromise is then reached a general industrial upheaval appears inevitable.

RUSSIAN CITY IS IN A PANIC

St. Petersburg, July 29.—Despatches received here yesterday from Polotsk, in the government of Vitebsk, the only city in Russia aside from St. Petersburg where the cholera has made much headway, say that the city is full of panic owing to the inefficiency of the sanitary administration and the shortage of physicians.

Forty cases of the disease are reported daily and to cope with this situation there are only five doctors, who are so overwhelmed with work that they are obliged to refuse their services. At night heartbreaking scenes are witnessed at the physicians' offices, where relatives of the stricken of the city fail to get any attention.

Many stores have been closed and all well-to-do persons are fleeing from the city.

Small Crowd Last Night

On account of the many attractions in the city last night the meeting in the tent was small, but it was very enthusiastic. Mr. Young was the speaker, and Mr. Batten leader.

THE NEWS AS TOLD IN DESPATCHES

Tries to Hang Himself.

Guelph, July 29.—Hanging by his neck from a strap which he had fastened to the knob on the other side of the door, with a chair kicked away from under his feet, and almost dead from strangulation, Charles Dempsey, an elderly and well-known resident of this city, was found by his son Albert, yesterday morning at 8 o'clock, in a bedroom over his shoe store on Cork street.

The old man is on the "Indian list," and had been served with another summons to appear in court. He is in a critical condition.

McKelvie Case Adjourned.

Cobalt, July 29.—Owing to the death of the infant daughter of A. G. Slaight, legal adviser to Andrew McKelvie, the Temiskaming and Hudson Bay Co. director, arrested in connection with the Piche bribery case, the trial of McKelvie has been adjourned until Tuesday next.

Oliver Mowat Memorial.

Kingston, July 29.—The General Hospital governors have decided to erect a sanitarium building to serve the dual purpose of a sanitarium and memorial to the late Sir Oliver Mowat. The building will be two storeys and cost $12,800.

will not go through.

Montreal, July 29.—It is learned that a New York syndicate has offered par for a controlling interest in the International Coal & Coke Co., whose property is at Coleman, Alberta, and although large holders are favorable to the deal, enough of the stockholders cannot be induced to part with their stock at that price and the probability is that the sale will not be accomplished.

Drowned at Brockville.

Brockville, July 29.—Walter Conlon, an employe of the steamer Island Belle, was drowned at the C.P.R. wharf here yesterday morning. The boat left here with a full complement of passengers, and as Conlon was in the act of handling a stern line he fell overboard, and in view of a hundred or more people was drowned, but a few feet from the wharf.

Child Dies From Burns.

Cannington, July 29.—While Mrs. Charles Hill was out shopping Tuesday afternoon her little three-year-old daughter Pearl got hold of some matches and set fire to her clothing. The neighbors hearing the child's screams, went to her assistance, but before the fire could be put out the child was badly burned and died early yesterday morning.

THE NEW BRITISH NAVY

The Liberal Government in Great Britain has suddenly capitulated to the super-Dreadnought idea. The policy of its critics, which Liberal newspapers at home and in Canada have been ridiculing, has now been adopted. "After close and careful investigation" the sea lowe say that it must be done, and the old bluff that everything is all right has had to "go by the board." The "wholly Canadian navy" idea, which is the pet policy of the Laurier Government will have to go by the board also. It may be "wholly Canadian," but it is not Imperial, and Canada is anxious to draw closer to the Empire, not farther away.

AN AMERICAN CONFESSION

There is no denying the fact that we are a nation of materialists. With most of the common folk there materialism has good family ends, which somewhat redeem it. But as a nation we are still in that infancy which represents little more than a stomach and lungs.—Detroit News.

This confession applies equally to Canadians. We have grown to think that everything else than "making money" is "silly guff." But making money in the Canadian and American sense, does not mean, necessarily, making it fairly and squarely, in other words, honestly. Most of it is made by appropriating the lion's share wherever the opportunity offers. This we call "finance."

It is in no sense connected with industry. It is not the result of being industrious. It is simply greed. To amass wealth by noble means for noble ends is to be of service to mankind. To amass it on 'change, and by the power of cunning or through accident, is not industry. It is using the lungs for the benefit of the stomach. The heart and the head rarely appear in it, or if they do, it is merely as a bait to catch the innocent or so-called innocent. That this is what is referred to by the Detroit News, is evident. We are young, lusty, unsophisticated, uncultivated, irreligious and largely unscrupulous. The materialism of our make-up is responsible, and until we regard money as we regard food and drink merely as a means to an end, we shall continue to merit the News's scorn.

WHAT A TARIFF DOES

There is a probability of an important Edinburgh company erecting a factory in Germany to avoid the German tariff on their products.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Theorists are those who deal wholly with general principles. Their praise lies in their reflective propensities. Their shame in their ignorance of how and when to apply the proper theory. It is all very well to lay down a law, but if it is the wrong law, what then?

The formula of the chemist is not applicable to the differential calculus, neither is the spectroscope a solution of the problem of predestination. It is, we must admit, all a question of fitness, a matter of reason and common sense.

In other words, as the quotation at the top of these remarks indicates, it is all a question of fact. Does the German tariff build up German manufacturing at the expense of Scottish industry. Doesn't the [illegible] plainly say, "Yes."

While the tariff is not perfect, it is sometimes necessary. While F. T. is not perfect, it is sometimes wise. The question is when should we adopt one of them. It is nonsense for the advocates of either to refuse recognition of a plain necessity.

HYPER NOT HIGHER CRITICISM

S. H. Blake is at it again, and wants war declared on those theologians who have a mind of their own and are willing, and, shall we say, daring enough to use it. If the men of other days—Calvin, Luther, Wesley—had been as S. H. Blake, and had followed blindly, where would religion and the world have been to-day! Mr. Blake should stop blocking the road to progress.—Kingston Standard.

Well! Where is religion to-day? Besides, for the Standard's information we may say that Mr. Blake, et al are not denying anybody's right to believe what he pleases, but simply that person's right to break up everybody else's belief. Surely the Standard must acknowledge that an innovator or critic must show cause before being admitted to public approval.

The "Avocato del diabolo" is an institution even of the Catholic Church and why should a higher critic be admitted to fellowship and full communion on easier terms than that required for a dogma already decided upon by that church.

HOW WE ARE DRIFTING

"There is nothing in the Constitution, says the 'Patrie,' against choosing the Governor-General from among the Canadians, and it would be one more satisfaction to a great people to do so." What constitution does our contemporary mean? If he is speaking of the British Constitution, under which we are supposed to live, there is everything against it. The British Constitution is a limited monarchy, not a republic. It has a king, not a chosen president. If a Canadian was to be chosen as Governor-General, it would go almost without saying that he would be selected at the recommendation of the Canadian Government. He would no more represent the Crown, but the Canadian people. He would not represent the Canadian people, but the Canadian party which happened to be uppermost when he was appointed. In quality he would be too much as our provincial governors now are, and with all respect to these, we do not think the Canadian people would prefer the most respectable party statesman to a viceroy representing the empire as a whole, who is a link—the only visible tie left—between Canada and the great empire on which the sun never sets. These are days of aggregation, not of disintegration.—The Montreal Witness.

The whole trend of French-Canadian public opinion is towards an excessive autonomy for Canada. Are we making for a closer union with the other parts of the empire, or are we not? The "wholly Canadian navy" idea of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and the hint thrown out by La Patrie show, wither we are drifting plainly enough. Germany is watching the game of empire closely. She is most anxious that Canada shall do just exactly what the Laurier administration is doing for her — talking nonsense about a wholly Canadian navy. What good to the British empire would a navy like Uruguay's be? It is plain that it must be part and parcel of a great system if it is to be any good.

EDITORIAL NOTES

La Patrie says that the Laurier policy is to provide naval protection for Canada and indirectly for the Empire. This is not making the cause of Empire a first consideration.

Even if we didn't win the King's prize, it was a Canadian who carried off the gold cup for being the best all-round shot at Bisley.

Bleriot's success in navigating the air passage of the channel, puts one more plume in the already well-laden headgear of the French nation. They are a wonderful people.

Why don't the Liberal papers headed by the Globe, come out, now that Asquith has decided to build the super-Dreadnoughts with an apology for saying that the war scare was merely an invention of the Tory tariff-reformers and Satan.

"Behind the times," is the legend written by Fate over the tombs-to-be of the little Canadians who want a 'holy' Canadian navy, and are against the formation of a united Empire.

The fact that the Ontario Government retains a ten per cent. royalty on the output, is scarcely mentioned by those engaged in chucking over the great Gillies Limit strike.

A great deal has been said of the Earl Grey competitions in amateur theatricals. Any fame that may hang on such a competition as that will be hanged all right enough.

GOMPERS PAYS VISIT TO UNIONS

Mr. Samuel Gompers Tells of What he Sees Among the Labor Ranks of Great Britian

On Wednesday I visited the "House of Call" at the London Society of Compositors, and addressed several hundreds of its unemployed members. I did what I could to inspire those present with hope and determination, but really in this country where one sees so much enforced idleness and distress, the words of encouragement we are wont to utter with truth at home, are arrested on one's lips. This printers' organization has all the praiseworthy features that characterise the best of trade unions. Last year the unemployed benefits amounted to $115,000 with 3,655 recipients; besides to 474 superannuated members $47,000 was paid. In 198 cases of death $13,500 was given to the next of kin. The total number of members in this local union is 12,292. The society's freehold building in St. Bride's street is valued at $77,000. Secretary T. E. Naylor told me that last year the expected annual fluctuation in membership and means proved the great stability of this society. He said: "When the industrial history of the year comes to be written, 1908 will be ranked as one of the worst ever experienced in this country, not only in the printing trade, but in all industries and occupations. We have been visited by a trade depression, the like of which has not been witnessed for many years, bringing in its train the usual dearth of employment and its accompanying distress. In such circumstances, it is not surprising that the London Society of Compositors, in common with almost every trade union, should suffer some diminution of its prosperity." During the present year, however, business has picked up. The amalgamation of the London society, the Provincial and the Scottish Typographical unions is an event quite certain now. But the Dublin and other Irish typographical unions, said Secretary Naylor, "Will not join."

A few squares from the society's headquarters is the fine establishment of the London branch of the Co-operative Printing Society; other branches being in Manchester and Newcastle. Building and plant are owned by the society. When, during a visit to it, our party reached the company room on the fifth storey, we were greeted by that peculiar rattle and bang of composing sticks when rapped against the type cases, which to the compositors, I am told, is the substitute for hand-clapping and applause. Since silence is the strict rule in all well conducted printeries, this explosive and long-sustained and almost deafening sound of iron beaten upon sounding wood is startling. I was called upon to address the men. Though I responded in words, I did it briefly, remembering that every minute's suspension of the click, click of type setting meant a loss of pounds, shillings and pence to the men and the co-operation. The 175 employees of this office have a 48-hour week, whereas, the general rule, which is also the union scale, calls for 52 to 54 hours a week. The union scale of wages provided a minimum of 39 shillings per week ($9.75). The entire force of the co-operation receive a higher amount. In ownership and operation the English system of co-operation is followed; that is, the stock is held by trade unions, co-operative and other societies, and excellence of output is aimed at rather than dividends, while profits are shared with the employees. The society has had a steadily progressive success since its first year, its dividend of trade has averaged above $8,000 for the last ten years.

Another union, whose headquarters I visited, was in the far east end, the Dockers and General Labor Union, of which Ben Tillett has been General secretary for twenty years. The organization grew out of the Dockers' strike of England nearly a quarter of a century ago. At the time of my visit, the Executive Board and the business agents for the entire country were in session; there were about thirty of them awaiting to greet me. The cordiality of their greeting was only surpassed in their hurrah shouts for American trade-unionism and American people. The lot of the Dock workers is not to-day by far what it was before the union was organized. The union statistics, just issued, show that its benefit features are highly appreciated by the members. Hours of labor have been decreased, wages increased, and comparatively speaking their social life has much improved. Eighty-two members of the Dockers' and General Labor Union are Borough Council men and Justices of the Peace. The expression of the Board members with regard to Ben Tillett, indicated a deep feeling of respect for his valued services, and showed his popularity after long years of service. Hale and hearty "Jim" Wignall was also a member of the Executive Board. Both Wignall and Tillett were fraternal delegates from the British Trade Union Congress to conventions of the American Federation of Labor.

On Thursday I visited the headquarters of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers and there saw the Executive Board of that great organization of engineers and machinists. Many subjects were discussed affecting the interest of the workers, particularly the relations between the machinists of America, Great Britain and other countries. Owing to the awful state of unemployment even among the members of this highly skilled trade, the organization had lost several thousand members during the past year. The institution and the membership as well as its financial standing are, however, unimpaired.

Later in the afternoon I visited the headquarters of the Parliamentary Committee of the British Trade Union Congress—this committee is about on a par with the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor. The subjects of strikes, lockouts, boycotts, were discussed, and the inevitable question asked me, what would be the outcome of the decision and sentence imposed upon Frank Morrison, John Mitchell and me by Judge Wright of the Court of the District of Columbia. It is quite evident that the feeling of indignation at that decision and sentence was as keenly felt on this side of the Atlantic as it was upon our own. It takes quite some of my time to try and explain the ground, or rather the phantasy upon which Judge Wright based his conclusions, decision and sentence.

The most interesting spot in London just at present to a touring American Trade Unionist is the House of Commons. I made several visits to it, dinners being given me in its restaurant halls by the Labor party members of the House, and on another evening by the Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Union Congress. On the first of these occasions, thirty odd M.P.'s were present. All these members no doubt had subscribed to the immediate Labor programme, but the diversity of their views and sentiments regarding present activities as well as the future ideal commonwealth was not concealed. I was given the opportunity to describe our American Federation of Labor, and to tell why it is and what it is. The men before me were not of a character to wish me to mince my words, what the fact of the matter required me to say may not have been to the liking of some of them, but they were all prepared to take my words in good part. In fact, the dinner proved to be, not a mere convivial function, but the means of bringing about, on the part of my hosts a better understanding of the spirit and methods of the Trade Unionists of the United States and and Canada, who are doing in their own way the best possible work for their own members and their own countries. I am not prepared at this stage to set down definite opinions as to the British Union Trade Politics; I wish to pursue my inquiry further, but I have positive views regarding the necessity of the agreed policies of American Trade Unionism, and it will require something more than what I have yet seen or learned to warrant a change of front. It seems to me that the moment was at hand at that dinner to state clearly, fully and definitely and as concisely as possible, the history, struggles and policy of the American Trade Union movement.

At the Parliamentary Trade Union Congress dinner, two evenings afterward, all but five men present had been fraternal delegates at American Labor Conventions; naturally the event was largely social in character. The enthusiasm over America of those who had attended our conventions, exhibited itself in hearty words of greeting, many expressions of goodwill for the delegates they had met in various cities in our country.

One incident of the evening seemed to be an echo called forth from the meeting of the dinner two nights before. It was the speech which the Chairman of the Parliamentary Committee, David J. Shackleton, delivered; he brought up one illustration after another of those extremists among social reformers, both in and outside of the ranks of our wage earning masses who continually call for legislation as a substitute for Trade Union action. For example, the previous week had seen an attempt by the coal mine owners in South Wales to take every advantage of the eight hours act on its going into effect July 1; they claimed that the law itself set aside all existing agreements between the Unions and themselves, and therefore tried to enforce new rules preliminary to a reduction of wages. The men threatened a strike and the claim was dropped. As the act says that "the eight hours per day may be extended," on not more than sixty days in any calendar year by not more than one hour a day "the employers decided that on one day every week, the men should work nine hours instead of eight." This clause, the men argued, was optional to both parties, and as they had a strong Union, well prepared to sustain the men in their claim both sides concluded to leave the matter to the Court of Conciliation for settlement. Next, the employers made a demand for a shift of eight hours in every twenty-four. This, also, the men opposed; night work was an unnecessary burden upon the men; the gaseous nature of South Wales coal mines does not permit a mine to be operated in safety sixteen hours daily; the machinery both for mining, safety and ventilation would be overtaxed, increasing the danger to life. For a week the conference between the representative of the miners and employers continued, and the attitude of the miners gave the newspapers of Great Britain an opportunity to ascertain the difference between operating or enforcing a law according to the interpretation of employers and operating and enforcing it in its real intent in the interests of the workers. The miners were determined not to surrender their rights to control their own labor—and won.

In the morning room Eve was already waiting. She looked up, colored and smiled as he entered. Her face looked very fresh and young, and she wore a gown of the same pale blue that she had worn on his first coming.

She looked up from an open letter as he came into the room, and the sun that fell through the window caught her in a shaft of light, intensifying her blue eyes, her blue gown and the bunch of violets fastened in her belt. To Loder, still under the influence of early memories, she seemed the embodiment of some youthful ideal—something lost, sought for and found again. Realization of his feeling for her almost came to him as he stood there looking at her. It hovered about him. It tipped him, as it were, with its wings; then it rose again and soared away. Men like him—men keen to grasp an opening where their careers are concerned and tenacious to hold it when once grasped—are frequently the last to look into their own hearts. He glanced at Eve, he acknowledged the stir of his feeling, but he made no attempt to define its cause. He could no more have given reason for his sensations than he could have told the precise date upon which, coming downstairs at 8 o'clock, he had first found her waiting breakfast for him. The time when all such incidents were to stand out, each to a nicety in its appointed place, had not yet arrived. For the moment his youth had returned to him; he possessed the knowledge of work done, the sense of present companionship in a world of agreeable things; above all, the steady, quiet conviction of his own capacity. All these things came to him in the moment of his entering the room, greeting Eve and passing to the breakfast table; then, while his eyes still rested contentedly on the pleasant array of china and silver, while his senses were still alive to the fresh, earthly scent of Eve's violets, the blow so long dreaded—so slow in coming—fell with accumulated force.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE letter through which the blow fell was not voluminous. It was written on cheap paper in a disguised hand, and the contents covered only half a page. Loder read it slowly, mentally articulating every word; then he laid it down, and as he did he caught Eve's eyes raised in concern. Again he saw something of his own feelings reflected in her face, and the shock braced him. He picked up the letter, tearing it into strips.

"I must go out," he said slowly. "I must go now—at once." His voice was hard.

Eve's surprised, concerned eyes still searched his. "Now—at once?" she repeated. "Now—without breakfast?"

"I'm not hungry." He rose from his seat and, carrying the slips of paper across the room, dropped them into the fire. He did it not so much from caution as from an imperative wish to do something, to move, if only across the room.

Eve's glance followed him. "Is it bad news?" she asked anxiously. It was unlike her to be insistent, but she was moved to the impulse by the peculiarity of the moment.

"No," he said shortly. "It's—business. This was written yesterday; I should have got it last night."

Her eyes widened. "But nobody does business at 8 in the morning"— she began in astonishment, then she suddenly broke off.

He passed through the hall hurriedly, picking up a hat as he went, and, reaching the pavement outside, he went straight forward until Grosvenor square was left behind, then he ran. At the risk of reputation, at the loss of dignity, he ran until he saw a cab. Hailing it, he sprang inside, and as the cabman whipped up and the horse responded to the call he realized for the first time the full significance of what had occurred.

Realization, like the need for action, came to him slowly, but when it came it was with terrible lucidity. He did not swear as he leaned back in his seat mechanically watching the stream of men on their way to business, the belated cars of green produce blocking the way between the Strand and Covent Garden. He had no use for oaths; his feelings lay deeper than mere words. But his mouth was sternly set and his eyes looked cold.

Outside the law courts he dismissed his cab and walked forward to Clifford's inn. As he passed through the familiar entrance a chill fell on him. In the clear, early light it seemed more than ever a place of dead hopes, dead enterprises, dead ambitions. In the onward march of life it had been forgotten. The very air had a breath of unfulfillment.

He crossed the court rapidly, but his mouth set itself afresh as he passed through the doorway of his own house and crossed the bare hall.

As he mounted the well known stairs he received his first indication of life in the appearance of a cat from the second floor rooms. At sight of him the animal came forward, rubbed demonstratively against his legs and with affectionate persistence followed him upstairs.

Outside his door he paused. On the ground stood the usual morning can of milk—evidence that Chilcote was not yet awake or that, like himself, he had no appetite for breakfast. He smiled ironically as the idea struck him, but it was a smile that stiffened rather than relaxed his lips. Then he drew out the duplicate key he always carried and, inserting it quietly, opened the door. A close, unpleasant smell greeted him as he entered the small passage that divided the bed and sitting rooms—a smell of whisky mingling with the odor of stale smoke. With a quick gesture he pushed open the bedroom door. Then on the threshold he paused, a look of contempt and repulsion passing over his face.

In his first glance he scarcely grasped the details of the scene, for the half drawn curtains kept the light dim, but as his eyes grew accustomed to the obscurity he gathered their significance.

The room had a sleepless, jaded air—the room that under his own occupation had shown a rigid, almost monastic severity. The plain dressing table was littered with cigarette ends and marked with black and tawny patches where the tobacco had been left to burn itself out. On one corner of the table a carafe of water and a whisky decanter rested one against the other, as if for support, and at the other end an overturned tumbler lay in a pool of liquid. The whole effect was sickly and nauseating. His glance turned involuntarily to the bed and there halted.

On the hard, narrow mattress, from which the sheets and blankets had fallen in a disordered heap, lay Chilcote. He was fully dressed in a shabby tweed suit of Loder's; his collar was open, his lip and chin unshaven; one hand was limply grasping the pillow, while the other hung out over the side of the bed. His face, pale, almost earthy in hue, might have been a mask save for the slight convulsive spasms that crossed it from time to time and corresponded with the faint, shivering starts that passed at intervals over his whole body. To complete his repellent appearance, a lock of hair had fallen loose and lay black and damp across his forehead.

Loder stood for a space shocked and spellbound by the sight. Even in the ghastly disarray the likeness—the extraordinary, sinister likeness that had become the pivot upon which he himself revolved—struck him like a blow. The man who lay there was himself, bound to him by some subtle, inexplicable tie of similarity. As the idea touched him he turned aside and stepped quickly to the dressing table. There, with unnecessary energy, he flung back the curtains and threw the window wide. Then again he turned toward the bed. He had one dominant impulse, to waken Chilcote, to be free of the repulsive, inert presence that chilled him with so personal a horror. Leaning over the bed, he caught the shoulder nearest to him and shook it. It was not the moment for niceties, and his gesture was rough.

At his first touch Chilcote made no response—his brain, dulled by indulgence in his vice, had become a laggard in conveying sensations—but at last, as the pressure on his shoulder increased, his nervous system seemed suddenly to jar into consciousness. A long shudder shook him; he half lifted himself and then dropped back upon the pillow.

"Oh!" he exclaimed in a trembling breath. "Oh!" The sound seemed drawn from him by compulsion.

Its uncanny tone chilled Loder anew. "Wake up, man!" he said suddenly. "Wake up! It's I—Loder."

Again the other shuddered; then he turned quickly and nervously. "Loder?" he said doubtfully. "Loder?" Then his face changed. "Good God," he exclaimed, "what a relief!"

The words were so intense, so spontaneous and unexpected that Loder took a step back.

Chilcote laughed discordantly and lifted a shaky hand to protect his eyes from the light.

"It's—it's all right, Loder! It's all right! It's only that I—that I had a beastly dream. But, for heaven's sake, shut that window!" He shivered involuntarily and pushed the lock of damp hair from his forehead with a weak touch of his old irritability.

In silence Loder moved back to the window and shut it. He was affected more than he would own even to himself by the obvious change in Chilcote. He had seen him moody, restless, nervously excited, but never before had he seen him entirely demoralized. With a dull feeling of impotence and disgust he stood by the closed window, looking unseeingly at the roofs of the opposite houses.

But Chilcote had followed his movements restlessly, and now as he watched him a flicker of excitement crossed his face. "God, Loder," he said again, "'twas a relief to see you! I dreamed I was in hell—a horrible hell, worse than the one they preach about." He laughed to reassure himself, but his voice shook pitiably.

Loder, who had come to fight, stood silent and inert.

"It was horrible—beastly," Chilcote went on. "There was no fire and brimstone, but there was something worse. It was a great ironic scheme of punishment by which every man was chained to his own vice—by which the thing he had gone to pieces over, instead of being denied him, was made compulsory. You can't imagine it." He shivered nervously and his voice rose. "Fancy being satiated beyond the limit of satiety, being driven and dogged by the thing you had ran after all your life!"

He paused excitedly, and in the pause Loder found resolution. He shut his ears to the panic in Chilcote's voice, he closed his consciousness to the sight of his shaken face. With a surge of determination he rallied his theories. After all, he had himself and his own interests to claim his thought. At the moment Chilcote was a wreck, with no desire toward rehabilitation, but there was no guarantee that in an hour or two he might not have regained control over himself and with it the inclination that had prompted his letter of the day before. No; he had himself to look to. The survival of the fittest was the true, the only principle. Chilcote had had intellect, education, opportunity, and Chilcote had deliberately cast them aside. Fortifying himself in the knowledge, he turned from the window and moved slowly back to the bed.

"Look here," he began, "you wrote for me last night." His voice was hard. He had come to fight.

Chilcote glanced up quickly. His mouth was drawn and there was a new anxiety in his eyes. "Loder!" he exclaimed quickly. "Loder, come here! Come nearer!"

Reluctantly Loder obeyed. Stepping closer to the side of the bed, he bent down.

The other put up his hand and caught his arm. His fingers trembled and jerked. "I say, Loder," he said suddenly, "I—I've had such a beastly night—my nerves, you know"—

With a quick, involuntary disgust Loder drew back. "Don't you think we might shove that aside?" he asked.

But Chilcote's gaze had wandered from his face and strayed to the dressing table; there it moved feverishly from one object to another.

"Loder," he exclaimed, "do you see—can you see if there's a tube of tabloids on the mantelshelf or on the dressing table?" He lifted himself nervously on his elbow, and his eyes wandered uneasily about the room. "I—I had a beastly night; my nerves are horribly jarred, and I thought—I think"— He stopped.

With his increasing consciousness his nervous collapse became more marked. At the first moment of waking the relief of an unexpected presence had surmounted everything else, but now, as one by one his faculties stirred, his wretched condition became patent. With a new sense of perturbation Loder made his next attack.

"Chilcote," he began sternly.

But again Chilcote caught his arm, plucking at the coat sleeve. "Where is it?" he said. "Where is the tube of tabloids—the sedative? I'm—I'm obliged to take something when my nerves go wrong." In his weakness and nervous tremor he forgot that Loder was the sharer of his secret. Even in his extremity his fear of detection clung to him limply—the lies that had become second nature slipped from him without effort. Then suddenly a fresh panic seized him, his fingers tightened spasmodically, his eyes ceased to rove about the room and settled on his companion's face. "Can you see it, Loder?" he cried. "I can't; the light's in my eyes. Can you see it? Can you see the tube?" He lifted himself higher, an agony of apprehension in his face.

Loder pushed him back upon the pillow. He was striving hard to keep his own mind cool, to steer his own course straight through the chaos that confronted him. "Chilcote," he began once more, "you sent for me last night, and I came the first thing this morning to tell you"— But there he stopped short.

With an excitement that lent him strength, Chilcote pushed aside his hands. "God," he said suddenly, "suppose 'twas lost—suppose 'twas gone!" The imaginary possibility gripped him. He sat up, his face livid, drops of perspiration showing on his forehead, his whole shattered system trembling before his thought.

At the sight Loder set his lips. "The tube is on the mantelshelf," he said in a cold, abrupt voice.

A groan of relief fell from Chilcote, and the muscles of his face relaxed. For a moment he lay back with closed eyes, then the desire that tortured him stirred afresh. He lifted his eyelids and looked at his companion. "Hand it to me," he said quickly. "Give it to me. Give it to me, Loder, quick as you can! There's a glass on the table and some whisky and water. The tabloids dissolve, you know"— In his new excitement he held out his hand.

But Loder stayed motionless. He had come to fight, to demand, to plead, if need be, for the one hour for which he had lived—the hour that was to satisfy all labor, all endeavor, all ambition. With dogged persistence he made one more essay.

"Chilcote, you wrote last night to recall me"— Once again he paused, checked by a new interruption. Sitting up again, Chilcote struck out suddenly with his left hand in a rush of his old irritability.

"D—n you!" he cried suddenly. "What are you talking about? Look at me! Get me the stuff. I tell you it's imperative." In his excitement his breath failed, and he coughed. At the effort his whole frame was shaken.

Loder walked to the dressing table, then back to the bed. A deep agitation was at work in his mind.

Again Chilcote's lips parted. "Loder," he said faintly—"Loder, I must—I must have it. It's imperative." Once more he attempted to lift himself, but the effort was futile.

Again Loder turned away.

"Loder"—

With a fierce gesture the other turned on him. "Good heavens, man!" he began. Then unaccountably his voice changed. The suggestion that had been hovering in his mind took sudden and definite shape. "All right!" he said in a lower voice. "All right! Stay as you are."

He crossed to where the empty tumbler stood and hastily mixed the whiskey and water, then crossing to the mantelpiece where lay the small glass tube containing the tightly packed tabloids he paused and glanced once more toward the bed. "How many?" he said laconically.

Chilcote lifted his head. His face was pitiably drawn, but the feverish brightness in his eyes had increased. "Five," he said sharply. "Five. Do you hear, Loder?"

"Five?" Involuntarily Loder lowered the hand that held the tube. From previous confidences of Chilcote's he knew the amount of morphia contained in each tabloid and realized that five tabloids, if not an absolutely dangerous was at least an excessive dose, even for one accustomed to the drug. For a moment his resolution failed. Then the dominant note of his nature—the unconscious, fundamental egotism on which his character was based—asserted itself beyond denial. It might be reprehensible, it might even be criminal to accede to such a request made by a man in such a condition of body and mind; yet the laws of the universe demanded self assertion—prompted every human mind to desire, to grasp and to hold. With a perception swifter than any he had experienced he realized the certain respite to be gained by yielding to his impulse. He looked at Chilcote with his haggard, anxious expression, his eager, restless eyes, and a vision of himself followed sharp upon his glance. A vision of the untiring labor of the past ten days, of the slowly kindling ambition, of the supremacy all but gained. Then, as the picture completed itself, he lifted his hand with an abrupt movement and dropped the five tabloids one after another into the glass.

TOO MUCH WATER NOT DESIRABLE

North End Man Has His Lawn Ruined

While the recent heavy rains have no doubt done a great deal of good in more ways than one, still a number of people are complaining that they have had just about enough of them. A story is going the rounds of a north end citizen, who is building a new house, in that part of the city. In order that he might have a nice lawn before the end of the season, he raised the level of the ground in front of the house about a foot and sowed a large quantity of grass seed. During the first day's rain the citizen went around the streets with smiling face and happy forbodings. Nothing could be better, he said, than that grass seed should be well watered immediately after it had been sown.

Other interests kept him away from the house until some time on Monday morning when he decided to go up and gloat over his new lawn. He was doomed to disappointment, however, for when he hove in sight of his future abode, instead of the nicely growing sprouts of young grass he had expected he found that the whole surface of the ground had sunk to within six inches of the pavement.

As Coleridge says:
"A sadder and a wiser man,
He rose the morrow morn."

PETERBORO' BAND FOR EXHIBITION

May Play at Fair at Ottawa This Fall

There will be an abundance of music at the Central Canada exhibition next September. The G. G. F. G., 43rd D. O. O. R., Hull, Municipal and Perth bands have already been engaged, and will be signed later on. These may include St. Catharines and Peterborough regimental bands. The two local military bands will play alternately at the morning, afternoon and evening performances. A band stand will be erected on the grounds, and a band will be playing all the time.

Arrangements have been made for the accommodation of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, who will give performances in fancy musical drill for which the contract has now been closed. Messrs. W. H. Dwyer and Co. will supply straw for bedding for the various exhibits, and W. C. Bedingfield & Co. will supply the feed, which they have been doing for some years.

For Aeronaut Nassar five tons of iron borings have been secured from the Grand Trunk railway. This will be used in the preparation of gas.

A good programme of trotting and running races has been prepared and will be published shortly.

NEW TEACHER FOR COLLEGIATE

The teaching staff of the Collegiate is again complete. The vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. J. H. Adams has been filled by the appointment of Mr. G. H. Hoffard in his place. Mr. Hoffard will take charge of the junior science department, and will teach largely in the lower school. He has had six years teaching experience in other collegiates and high schools, and comes well recommended.

As announced some time ago, Miss Ethel Alford, of St. Catharines, will fill the position recently vacated by Miss B. Bauer.

PAINTERS TAKE TRIP UP LAKES

As a final wind-up to the painters' convention, the various delegates this morning boarded the steamer, Stoney Lake and took the trip through the canal up to the lakes. While a few of the delegates left for their homes by this morning's trains the majority of them stayed over for the trip, and the large steamer was pretty well loaded. A section of the 57th Regimental Band was on board and provided music for the excursionists en route.

On arriving at Stony Lake the delegates were taken to the cottage of Mr. Jas. Acton of Toronto, where they were hospitably entertained by Mr. Acton before commencing the return voyage.

BANKS BEING PUT IN SHAPE

The banks of the Trent Canal between Lake Simcoe and Kirkfield are receiving some attention just at present. The Hubert and a large staff of men are at present engaged in putting them into shape to withstand the ice and snow of the coming winter. Work will likely be continued until the end of October, when it is expected that the best part of the job will have been finished.

NEW CHANNEL AT CAMERON LAKE

The dredge Emerson, is at present engaged in the vicinity of Cameron Lake, in making a new steamboat channel between that point and Fenelon Lake. The channel will be about three thousand feet long, one hundred feet wide and ten feet deep. As the dredging will have to be done through the solid rock it is expected that the work will not be completed until late in the fall.

ACTUAL DISTANCES ON THE OTONABEE RIVER

Some Interesting Figures of a Survey on Ice as Made Some Years Ago.

Mr Dave Eason, of the Trent canal staff, has given the Review the following table of distances on the Otonabee river. This will enable the various launch owners to more closely gauge the relative speeds of the boats, and at the same time will settle several disputes which have lately arisen concerning the above. The figures are taken from those of the actual survey made in winter on the ice, and are approximately correct. The line of survey starts from a point 160 feet north of the Wolfe street wharf, and follows the steamboat channel as nearly as possible to Rice Lake.

The following is the table:

From Wolfe street wharf — To Rye's boat house—1.75 miles.

From Wolfe street wharf — To north of Crawford's Grove — 1.77 miles.

From Wolfe street wharf — To Bensfort bridge—15.7 miles.

From Wolfe street wharf — To Wedlock's—18.7 miles.

BUSINESS WAS CONCLUDED AT YESTERDAY'S SESSIONS

Mr. Fred. Cook Elected Vice-President and Ald. G. H. Duncan Appointed a Representative to the International Convention—Other Business.

The sixth annual convention of the Master House Painters and Decorators was concluded yesterday afternoon by a very appropriate address by retiring President Booth, of London, which followed the election of officers and the passage of several votes of thanks. The convention has been a most successful and satisfactory one, and has been largely attended although this is a hard time of the year for painters to get away from their work.

Mr. Fred. Cook, of this city, was elected vice-president, and Mr. G. Duncan was appointed one of the representatives to the International Convention.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

President Booth occupied the chair and called the meeting to order. The first item on the programme were the practical oil tests by Mr. A. McKenzie, of Hamilton, and Mr. John Dewer, of Pittsburg, gave an excellent talk on legislation. These two took up the greater part of the afternoon.

A discussion was held on the place for the next meeting. Invitations were received from Niagara Falls, Ottawa, and Montreal, but the matter was left in the hands of the Executive Committee.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

President—Benj. J. Goodfellow, Galt.

Vice-President—Fred. Cook, Peterborough.

Sec.-Treas.—A. W. McKenzie, Hamilton.

Executive—Messrs. Hughes, Toronto; Wetheraway, Tillsonburg; Stamp, Hamilton; Delaney, Niagara Falls; Morley, Winnipeg.

Representative on the International Executive Committee—Livingstone, Toronto.

Secretaries—Messrs. Wall, Faircloth and Dewar.

Organization Committee—Messrs. J. J. O'Hearn, Toronto; Livingstone, Toronto; Faircloth and Finemore, Toronto; McKenzie and Metcalfe, Hamilton.

Representatives to International Convention—Messrs. Morley, Winnipeg; Faircloth, Toronto; Duncan, Peterborough. On behalf of the Peterborough Association, Mr. Fred. Cook made a presentation, in the form of a signet ring, to Mr. J. Hahn, Toronto, for his indefatiguable work.

The recipient in a few well-chosen words, made a fitting reply, and stated he would be only too glad to do anything he could for either the local or International Association.

A vote of thanks was passed to Fire Chief Howard and men, and Ald. Duncan for the demonstration given in the morning.

Votes of thanks were tendered to the American visitors, the local press, the trade journals, the Peterborough Association, Barry Bros., of Walkerville, International Varnish Company, of Toronto, and Mr. James Acton, of the Acton Publishing Co., Toronto, for the part they took in the convention.

The meeting was then adjourned by Past President Booth, and the singing of God Save the King.

HIS HONOR JUDGE HUYCKE WAS SWORN IN LAST EVENING

A large number of the official and general representatives of the city and county gathered in the spacious County Council Chamber at the Court House last evening to assist in the swearing-in of Mr. E. C. S. Huycke, recently appointed to be county judge. Amongst those present were Mrs. Huycke, Judge Roger, W. H. Moore, K.C., D. W. Dumble, K.C., A. P. Poussette, K.C., Geo. Edmison, K.C., L. M. Hayes, K.C., R. Ruddy, K.C., his Worship the Mayor, City Clerk Armstrong, Mr. Ed. Elliott, representing the Warden of the County, Sheriff Hall, Mr. B. Morrow, registrar, and Messrs. E. A. Peck, John Green, Walter Davidson, S. T. Medd, F. D. Kerr, R. F. McWilliams, Basil Hall, R. R. Hall, Geo. Hatton, W. F. Johnston, J. H. Burnham, Ald. Morgan, R. Fair, E. S. Clarry, H. Nesbitt, A. E. Coulthard, A. E. Dixon, P. Campbell, J. A. Culverwell, C. E., R. J. Winch, Gaoler Rae, J. Coyle Brown, J. W. Bennett, Ald. Turner, Ald. Gillespie, G. N. Gordon and others.

Mr. Hayes, K.C., President of the Law Association, cordially welcomed Mr. and Mrs. Huycke to Peterborough and then read the warrants of Mr. Huycke's appointment as County Judge and local judge of the High Court. Mr. B. Morrow then advanced to the table and administered the oath of office to the new judge. The interesting ceremony being concluded amid hearty applause. Mr. Dumble, K.C., on behalf of the local bar, the Mayor on behalf of the city, Mr. Elliott on behalf of the county, and the Sheriff on behalf of the court officials addressed his Honor and welcomed him to his new sphere of duty. Judge Huycke on arising was received with long continued applause. He said:

"I shall always cherish the remembrance of your kind welcome.

Although I am pleased to come to Peterborough, I leave many kind friends and pleasant memories in Cobourg. Although I was not born there I got my wife there (Applause) and I received nothing but kind treatment from the people of Cobourg. To President Hayes I wish to extend my obligations for his cordial welcome to my wife and myself on behalf of the bar. Peterborough is a fine city and county. It is known as a progressive city. I shall do the best I can to faithfully discharge my duties. I wish also to thank the Mayor, Mr. Elliott and Sheriff Hall for their kindly official greeting. I have come to Peterborough, to be a citizen of Peterborough and I shall feel and act accordingly."

NOBODY IN CANADA WILL LIKELY TRY TO DETAIN THEM

The Mexican gypsies intend returning to California immediately after the trials in which they appear in the Hull courts. They will go to Montreal, and there take boat and go around to California, where they will again mine in the gold fields.

The Ottawa Free Press had an interview with Stephen George, chief, and Peter Sterrio, sub-chief of the Mexican gypsies this morning, and was informed that the Mexicans are travelling through the country filling contracts for a firm in Winnipeg to supply them with horses. They buy up heavy horses in large numbers and ship them west. This is their source of wealth at the present, but, as published in the Free Press, they made almost $50,000 in the gold fields of the Rockies in California.

THE PROUD CHIEF.

"I am chief of three tribes," said Stephen George proudly. Each of the tribes contains 50 men and women. One of them is in Winnipeg and distributes the horses that we send out. The other tribe is travelling in Ontario and will likely follow us in a few weeks. No, they won't stop in Hull, they will go right ahead. Each of the tribes are under sub-chiefs, but our tribe is the main body, and is the most wealthy. The others have lots of money, though."

Asked where they intended to go from Ottawa, Chief Stephen George replied that as soon as the trials were over they would pack their tents and move.

"We will go to Montreal. Then we will get on a boat and go away round to California, because soon it will be winter here. The sub-chief, Peter Mitchell, will go to Winnipeg to take charge of the tribe there, but I will stay in California, where I will get gold.

"Perhaps then we come back."

The trials in the Hull courts today will complete the list of charges against the gypsies, except the civil proceedings against Eli Stokes and John Stokes of the Bulgarian camp.

FLAHERTY LOST GAME THROUGH TEAM'S ERRORS

Haileybury Was Ahead in Seventh by 7-2, But Fielders Blew up in the Last Two Innings.

Yesterday's Cobalt Daily Nugget has the following to say in regard to the Haileybury-New Liskeard game played in Cobalt Tuesday:

Haileybury and New Liskeard hooked up at Liskeard yesterday in the Temiskaming ball league series, the home team winning by 8-7, a series of errors contributing largely to the result. Both teams lined up with imported batteries, Liskeard pinning their faith to our old friend, Fred Hickey, and the veteran backstop, Tom Benson, who has been playing around Toronto since the days before the flood. Tom has lost none of his cunning, and his great generalship yesterday was a big help to his team. Burton, who was to pitch for Liskeard, has been taken seriously ill, so Hickey was substituted.

Yebbie Flaherty of Peterborough and Bill Cinnamon of Lindsay were in the points for Haileybury, and it was by no means their fault that Haileybury lost.

The visitors were ahead 7-2 up to the seventh inning, when Montgomery and Hill started to boot them all over the field. Others joined in also to make foozles, and before they let up Liskeard had tied the score adding the winning run on a hit and a wild throw in the last inning.

The teams were:

Haileybury—Montgomery, 2b; Baker, lf; Young, 1b; Cinnamon, c; Hill, 3b; Dunbar, 2b; O'Neil, ss; McCrossen, c; Flaherty, p. Runs, 7.

Liskeard—E. Binkley, 3b; Mackay, lf; F Binkley 2b; Roy Grills, ss; Benson, c; Hickey, p; Woodward cf; Egan, 1b, Salmon, rf. Runs, 8.

LEAGUE STANDING.

The result of this game places New Liskeard in the lead. The next game is scheduled for this afternoon in Cobalt between Cobalt and Haileybury, while New Liskeard will be here Saturday. The standing:

| | W. | L. | P.C. |
|---|---|---|---|
| New Liskeard | 2 | 1 | .666 |
| Haileybury | 1 | 1 | .500 |
| Cobalt | 0 | 1 | .000 |

T.A.S. TEAM DEFEATED HASTINGS IN GOOD GAME

In seven innings of well-played ball the T.A.S. team defeated the Hastings nine yesterday afternoon by 10 to 5 in the presence of nearly 500 fans, who were well pleased with the exhibition. The Hastings team proved to be a fast one. The twirling of Jimmy Trent and the backstopping of Uncle Jim Graham were of a high order. Jimmy cannot remember when he played his first game, but it must be back about the time of Columbus. Twenty-five years ago he was catching Danny McCabe's shoots, and to-day he is as spry and gingery as ever. The local battery, Gorham and McFadden, had a shade the better of the argument, and the fielders supported them in fine style. Several wild throws and a little looseness at times raised the score to 15 runs in all. The T.A.S. team was as follows: Gorham, p; McFadden, c; Kendry, ss; Callaghan, 3b; Weatherstone, 2b; M. O'Brien, 1b; Doherty, cf; H. O'Brien, rf; Giroux, lf.

LINES ON SPORT

"Bill" Cinnamon and "Yebbie" Flaherty have been retained in Haileybury to play several games of ball. The first game, which was to have come off on Monday was postponed. Herb Hopkins, who has been up in that country states that they play ball in the old-fashioned style around those diggins, and that some of the contests are pretty warm.

Burton and Scott, the Barrie battery, are on the firing line for Cobalt, and our old friend, Fred Hickey, is pitching for New Liskeard. Bill and Yebbie will meet many old acquaintances in the silver country. The Haileybury team play Cobalt and afterwards New Liskeard.—Lindsay Warder.

Peterborough Reader: A bets B. Toronto ball team will win three out of five games. Toronto loses two games and ties one. Does the tie count a loss in reference to this bet, or not?

Answer: No.—Toronto Star.

Gillies of Toronto has played 37 games without an error.

Something went wrong yesterday, at Hastings, and as a result the boat left before the ball team had time to dress, which necessitated the players taking the train for the return trip.

Yeb Flaherty lost his game Tuesday. New Liskeard, with Fred Hickey pitching, won by 8 to 7. After the first inning the game was a pitcher's battle.

Fighting Dick Hyland and Johnny Frayne were matched last night to fight 20 rounds at the Mission Club in San Francisco on the night of August 20. They will weigh in at 133 pounds at 3 p.m.

The Lindsay Warder publishes an article headed, "revival of the art of walking." This may be successfully done in Lindsay, but it is a question if it can be accomplished here.

Leo Quinn, captain of the Lakefield hockey team, champions of the Peterborough City League, is leaving for Oshawa, saturday, where he has secured a good position with Grady Bros., and will also be found on the hockey team of that place the coming season. His departure will mean a big loss to the Lakefield hockey club, and he will also be missed by the followers of the winter sport in this city, as his work was always a pleasant feature of the game in which his team played. He has a bright future before him as a puck-chaser, and many friends in this city will wish him all success in his new home.

Harry C Pulliam president of the National Baseball League, attempted to commit suicide last night. Standing in the centre of his room, he held a revolver to his temple, but only fired one shot, the bullet entering near the right temple, destroying the right eye and coming out on the left side of the head. It is thought that he will recover.

Toronto won both games from Baltimore yesterday. Grimshaw made made two home runs. The Leafs batted the four Oriole twirlers hard.

GREATEST BOUT OF THE YEAR

Will be the One in England Between Driscoll and Moran

Really the greatest battle of the year—from a scientific boxing standpoint—will take place in England on September 15, when Jem Driscoll and Owen Moran will meet in the ring to decide the featherweight championship of Great Britain. The winner of the battle will come to America for a match with Abe Attell, the world's champion.

Driscoll and Moran will meet at 126 pounds, weigh in six hours before the contest. That is the legal limit in England. In America the featherweight limit is 122 pounds. It is not known yet where the fight will take place, although an offer of $12,500 has already been made by the managers of the Wonderland. The boys are waiting for the highest bid.

This match, following on the heels of the Welsh-Josephs battle for the championship of the lightweight division, has stirred up the fight fans abroad to a high pitch of excitement. For some years there has been a question as to the respective merits of Driscoll and Moran. When the boys were in this country last winter the fans were anxious to see them clash in the ring. Both met Attell. Driscoll outpointed Abe in ten rounds in New York and Moran secured two draws, one of 20 and one of 25 rounds with the champion. The boys had promised to meet in their native country, and when one sailed away the other followed to fight it out on their native heath.

DORANDO WEDDED TO THE TRACK

Milan, July 28.—Dorando Pietri, the champion runner, arrived at Milan from the United States with seven gold medals and £4,000, which he has won in [illegible] races.

Dorando says his perfection depends upon his maintaining the weight of 123 pounds, neither more nor less, to which end he has abstained altogether from intoxicating drinks. He lives on a diet of meat, broth and fish.

The demands of the sporting world have driven him to forego the dream of settling at Capri, his birthplace, and of marrying there the girl he was engaged to, whom he was to have wedded on his return from the English Marathon race last year.

"I am just taking a couple of months' holiday," he said, "and in September go to London, whence in November I leave for New York again. At the beginning of the new year I have to turn up in California, and am due in Buenos Ayres in March. I am deluged with proposals for the future from all parts of the world, and I shall probably give my preference to South Africa and Australia."

Mark Baniam, an Italian on the Kitwingal reserve, near Vancouver, was acquitted on a charge of intimidating A. W. Harvey, a Victoria surveyor. The Indian claimed he fired the shots Harvey complained of as a signal to his squaw to cross the river.

WALTER JAYES WINS WARM PRAISE FOR STELLAR WORK

The Wilmington Evening Dispatch of Wilmington, N.C., speaks in appreciative terms of the playing of Walter Jayes, son of Mr. son of Mr. John Jayes, of the Munro House, and the brilliant left fielder of the Wilmington nine. The following are clippings from the Dispatch:—

In one of the prettiest games of the season featured with sensational and thrilling plays, by both teams, the Raleigh Red Birds defeated Wilmington yesterday afternoon by the score of one to nothing. The contest went to ten innings before the Red Birds salted away the contest with the run which defeated the Sailors.

"The Dead Sure" Jayes, than whom there is no better fielder in this league, made a brilliant catch of a screaming drive in the fifth. The wallop looked good for two sacks, but Jayes' yell of "Oh, you ball, I'll get you yet," came true after a Marathon race across country by the "Tiny One!"

"Nifty" Nichols and Little Jayes were the only sailors to secure safe swats. The Tiny Star attached an extra sack to his [illegible] long drive in the left section of the garden.

RETURN MATCH WITH LINDSAY

The town team will be selected from the following players: G. A. Little, G. H. Hopkins, Rev. J. Wallace, E. J. Kylie, Rev. J. W. McMillan, J. D. Flavelle, C. V. O'Connor, J. G. Edwards, Dr. J. L. Sutton, F. A. McDiarmid, F. Knowles, G. H. M. Baker, R. Kylie, C. D. Barr, Judge Harding, Judge McMillan, A. Higinbotham, M. H. Sisson, B. Sylvester, R. Murdie, A. Simpson and Mr. Heinman. All of the above players are requested to be on hand promptly on time.

JERRY BROWN GOES DOWN

Was Known in Town—Of Robbery Renown

The Ottawa Citizen says, in referring to Jerry Brown, who was sent down from here in 1906, and sentenced in Ottawa yesterday:—

Jerry Brown got the third degree this morning at the police court. It was for six months in the Central—and Mr. Brown will emerge from the Toronto lighthouse when the frost is off the pumpkin and the fruit is disguised as pumpkin pie. Jerry first had his picture taken in 1903, since when he had been a visitor no fewer than 32 times. To-day his record resembled the roll call of the nation on the first draft for volunteers.

"Is this the Brown—Jerry Brown?" asked the magistrate.

Jerry swelled up with pride till he looked like a sack of yeast dough buttoned up the back.

"Uh-huh," he grunted.

"Six months in Central," remarked the bench.

"Uh-huh," grunted Jerry.

"Hard labor," commented the court.

"Oh, Gee!" ruefully exclaimed Mr. Brown.

Jerry was bagged by Detective O'Meara for stealing fifty bags tied up in a large bag, the property of Kenneth McDonald & Sons.

JEFFRIES PUT UP HIS FORFEIT

The Fight to be Held Before Club Offering the Greatest Inducements

New York, July 28.—Actual steps looking to a fight between James J. Jeffries and Jack Johnson for the heavyweight championship of the world were taken to-day, when Jeffries, on his arrival from the west, posted $5,000 as a forfeit to bind a match with the negro pugilist for a fight of anywhere from twenty to [illegible] The one-time boiler-maker insists that the fight shall be held before the club offering the largest purse, and when articles are signed an additional forfeit of $5,000 shall be posted. The one-time boiler maker insists that the fight shall be held before the club offering the largest purse, and that when articles are signed an additional forfeit of $5,000 shall be posted. The whole sum of $20,000 is to go to the winner.

Jeffries will leave for a short European trip in a few days. He will visit the springs at Carlsbad, in Bohemia, and will do a little preliminary training there. He plans to be ready to fight within five months.

"There is absolutely nothing the matter with me, anyway," said Jeffries after posting the forfeit, and added that he hoped the fight would be held in America.

On posting his forfeit, Jeffries issued the following statement:—

"After decisively convincing myself that it is easily possible for me to defend my title as champion of the world, as I am in as good condition as ever before in my life, I am to-day posting my forfeit to meet the claimant of the title, Jack Johnson.

"In reference to those who have been skeptical about my intention of meeting Johnson, I wish to say that when first called from retirement I said I would never agree to oppose anybody in the prize ring until I was convinced that I could regain my former physical condition. After being absolutely satisfied of the same, I stated I would post my forfeit at the expiration of my theatrical contract.

"My theatrical contract having expired, I am posting my money, sincerely hoping that Johnson is as anxious for the match as he has made it appear, and that he will be ready to live up to his public statements as I am."

JACK JOHNSTON HEARS OF IT

Jackson, Mich., July 28.—"I'll leave Chicago Monday night for New York and cover the forfeit," said Jack Johnson, the colored champion pugilist of the world this evening, when shown a despatch to the effect that Jeffries had posted a forfeit in New York of $5,000 to fight Johnson and again place the honor of championship among the white race.

Johnson said he was not surprised to hear that Jeffries had posted the forfeit. "I expected he would do something of the kind," said Johnson, "as a sort of bluff, and to make good his statement that he would fight.

"I will be ready to fight almost any time. I think I am in condition now to clean up Jeffries within fifteen rounds."

Johnson said he preferred to meet Jeffries in San Francisco. "That is the best place in the country," he said.

Johnson reached this city by automobile late this afternoon en route to Detroit.

PULLAM TRIED TO SUICIDE

New York, July 28.—The police reported that Harry C. Pullman, president of the National League of Baseball Clubs, attempted suicide to-night in his rooms on the third floor of the New York Athletic Club. He was given medical attention there, the police say, and remained at the club.

Standing in the centre of the room Mr. Pullman held a revolver to his right temple. He fired only one shot. It went in at the right temple and came out seven inches away, on the left side of his head. The bullet destroyed the right eye and passed through the upper part of the left. It is now believed that Mr Pullman can recover, although he continued unconscious for some time after the shooting.

The August Rod and Gun

The holiday feeling pervading the land during the hottest month of the year is well represented in the August issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor at Woodstock, Ont. How the people in the Maritime Provinces, known by reason of the sea breezes as the "Kingdom of Cooldom," enjoy the beautiful summer weather is told in a profusely illustrated article. A delightful paper is "Still Hunting With a Camera," while of equally absorbing interest is one on similar lines—"Shooting Wild Geese with a Kodak." In detail the list of "good things would be to repeat the table of contents, but the article on Voracious Eaters, by Martin Hunter, is worth attention from all sportsmen. The King of Furbearers is a story of a successful attempt at fox-rearing for the sake of pelts. Blood hounds and trailing will appeal to all dog lovers, and Mr. Bartlett's paper on the Wolves follows up the interest created through the Magazine in this important subject. This number should accompany every sportsman on his vacation, for in its pages he will find much to make his leisure time pass pleasantly.

CHIEF ROSZEL GIVES PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

Pointed Out Educational Side of Chief Constables Convention—Able Papers by Prominent Police Officials—Questions of Importance.

Niagara Falls, July 28.—The Police Constables' Association of Canada met in convention here to-day. The attendance was the largest in the history of the association, nearly 100 being present from points as widely separated as Rimouski and Victoria. The proceedings were opened by a graceful speech of welcome from Mayor Slater.

President George Roszel of Peterborough, in the president's address, reviewed the work of the past year.

CHIEF ROSZEL'S ADDRESS

Chief Roszel's address was as follows:

To the Members of the Chief Constables Association of Canada.

Gentlemen,—I bid you welcome to the fifth annual convention of our association, and in doing so would express the hope that our coming together in this city of historic association and world-wide fame may prove pleasurable and interesting to us personally and profitable to us as an organization.

I desire at the outset to thank you for the honor implied in my election to the highest office in your gift, and while the duties of the position are not onerous, I have undertaken them with a determination to discharge them in such a manner as to reflect credit upon myself, and give you no cause to regret having honored me with your confidence.

The necessity for such an organization as this becomes more apparent day by day. The extent to which the police of the various cities, towns and rural districts have to rely upon each other for assistance makes it incumbent upon us to come together at intervals in order that we may know each other, and mature plans, and lay down lines along which we may co-operate as units of one vast organization in the interests of the public service.

I am probably voicing the sentiments of a considerable proportion of our membership in expressing the regret that more of our old and experienced members do not take a more active and aggressive interest in the affairs of the association. It is from these battle-scarred veterans of the profession that the younger and less experienced members hope to learn, and we are probably not asking too much when we urge them to give us, through the medium of these police matters, the benefit of their experience and ripe judgment in police matters, which we so much need in order that we may the better serve the community in which our respective lots are cast.

The lack of interest in the affairs of the association by too many of the police governing bodies of the Dominion is to be deplored. Usually those who exact the highest standard of police efficiency are the ones who are content that their municipality should enjoy all the benefits resulting from these meetings at the personal expense of their already underpaid officials, and in some instances we have reason to believe, in addition to permitting their chief or high constable to pay out of their own pockets the expenses incident to membership and attendance insist on taking from their already meagre holidays the time spent at the convention.

As every municipality in Canada is interested in the efficient and honest administration of the law, Police Boards, Police Committees and County Councils everywhere should make such financial arrangements as would not only secure to their chief and high constable membership in the association, but also insure his attendance at our conventions, where he would have the opportunity of meeting the leading police officers of the Dominion, and taking part with them in the discussion of matters pertaining to the administration of the criminal law, and the general improvement of the police service in Canada.

These meetings are intended to be educational in their character, and as the municipalities derive the benefit it is reasonable and fair that the municipality, rather than the individual officer, should bear the expense incident to membership and attendance.

The success of the association is likely to be in proportion to the interest manifested in its work by police governing bodies throughout the Dominion. An earnest appeal is therefore, made for their sympathy and co-operation, without which all efforts at best, no matter how wisely directed, can be only partially successful.

I commend to your best consideration the work before us. Our time is short and many important matters demand our attention. The temptation to indulge in pleasure and amusement will be strong and the opportunities numerous, but we must be careful to do nothing that would afford ground for suspicion that these meetings are merely pleasure jaunts. Many of us travel long distances at the expense of our governing bodies, and we owe it to them as we owe it to ourselves, that we give every possible moment to the consideration of those questions that will prove of practical value to the municipalities which we have the honor to represent.

Yours respectfully,
GEO. I. ROSZEL,
President.

Peterborough, July 20, 1909

ABLE PAPERS READ

Criminals, as a scientific study, the virtues of the much-maligned policeman, and the inefficiency of the present law governing race-track gambling, were the subjects of able papers from Dominion Parole Officer Archibald, Toronto, and Chief Genest, Hull, gave a paper on "The Conservator of the Peace."

Officer W. P. Archibald's paper on the classification of criminals and preventive detention dealt in an able manner with the question of criminality as a scientific study. He divided criminals into their several classes and gave each class its particular features. He suggested that a preventive act similar to that in effect in England should be placed on the statute books of Canada.

According to Chief Smythe, the virtues which an ideal policeman must possess are as manifold and as diverse as those which make a diplomat successful. A policeman is expected at all times to be dignified, tactful and of cool temper, with an inexhaustible well of patience. He is expected to be a judge of human nature, a walking bureau of information, and an animated check on the fickleness of the electric light. He must be ready to turn in an instant from an incipient street row to politely assist some nervous lady across the street, play the part of genial grandpa, and a few minutes later be engaged in a rough-and-tumble with some individual spoiling for a fight. Chief Smythe said the police are numerically insufficient, and, considering the qualities they must possess, are poorly paid.

Inspector Archibald, Toronto, gave a paper on "Race-track Gambling" and reviewed the legislation relating thereto enacted during the past twenty five years. He complained that convictions which had been made had been quashed by higher courts, and thought that the act governing gambling should be capable of only one interpretation.

Deputy Chief William Stark, of Toronto, secretary-treasurer of the association, in reading his annual report, gave an interesting summary of the work accomplished during the year by the special committee on legislation in the direction of securing much-needed amendments to the criminal code. Two years ago, the Deputy Chief pointed out, the convention took advanced ground in the matter of carrying offensive weapons, and as a result of strong representations to the Minister of Justice by the special committee the sections dealing with the matter have been amended by giving the convicting magistrate or judge power to impose imprisonment in addition to or without a money penalty. The imprisonment may be any term up to three months.

Since the last convention, the Deputy continued, a particularly aggravated case of having in possession immoral literature and obscene pictures came under the notice of the Toronto authorities, in the prosecution of which serious difficulties were encountered, as no penalty was provided by law for simply having such matter in possession.

Continuing, Deputy Chief Stark said that, accompanied by a representative of the Social and Moral Reform Council of Canada, he had gone to Ottawa and had asked for an amendment to the code which would make it an offence for any person to have such literature or pictures in their possession. As a result the section dealing with the matter was amended along the lines suggested.

Another amendment which had been strongly endorsed by the association of the code relating to the produring of girls for immoral purposes. The maximum imprisonment for this offence had been increased from two to five years. A new section had been added to the code defining an opium joint, and an amendment to the section dealing with disorderly houses, permits of keepers and inmates of opium joints being prosecuted under this section.

ONE ON THE DOCTORS.

Madame J. Rioux, St. Moise, Que., says:—"Fruit-a-tives cured me of severe Liver Disease. Neither doctors nor any other remedy did me any good, but Fruit-a-tives promptly cured."

"Fruit-a-tives" always cure Liver Trouble, Biliousness and Constipation because they act directly on the liver. They stimulate the secretion of Bile, which decreases the quantity of blood in the liver and thus relieves the Congestion or Biliousness. With plenty of Bile to move the Bowels, there is an end to the Constipation.

"Fruit-a-tives" are a positive cure for all troubles arising from a disordered liver.

"Fruit-a-tives" are the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes—prepared by a newly discovered process, and combined with valuable tonics and antiseptics. They are, without doubt, the most popular remedy in Canada to-day.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. If you can't get "Fruit-a-tives" in your neighborhood, these wonderful tablets will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by addressing Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

BAND UNION FRICTION

The Reason Why the 57th Has Not Had Annual Call for Toronto Exhibition

The 57th Regimental Band has not yet been engaged to play at the exhibition at Toronto. Mr. Gliddon stated to the Review that the reason of this was because the management of the Fair was employing largely non-union band. There has been some friction with the Fair directors on the union score and for this reason the 57th and 19th of St. Catharines, which are two of the bands among the most appreciated by the exhibition directors of any that play at the Fair, have not been asked to play this year.

This year is the first in ten that the 57th has not been one of the bands picked for an engagement.

FORBIDDEN TEA PARTY.

What Happened at Function Given by a Rebellious Woman.

Tea was not brought over by the first settlers. When the pilgrims landed at Plymouth tea was selling in England at from $10 to $50 a pound. It was a luxury that had been known to Englishmen only a few years.

Early settlers got along without India or China tea for a long time. They used roots, herbs and leaves found in the fields and woods as a substitute for tea. Sassafras tea was a common drink.

Tea was advertised for sale in Boston in 1762 for the first time, according to historians. In 1766 patriots began to take the pledge not to drink tea because of the tax that the English government placed on it. It became fashionable for patriotic ladies not to serve India tea, but as substitutes therefor "Labrador tea" and "Liberty tea."

Captain Page of Danvers forbade his spouse to taste tea beneath his roof as long as the tax remained, but the strong minded and ingenious lady ascended to the flat roof of the house, invited her friends to follow, and there she served tea to them.

Some other ladies of the town fared less fortunately. They used to borrow for their tea parties the big teapot of the once famous Bell tavern. One day after drinking the forbidden beverage the master of the house unexpectedly walked in, jumped to the fire, grabbed the teapot and turned it over, and out rolled a big frog. The jovial patriots at the Bell tavern, suspecting the use of the pot, had placed the frog in it. Some of the dames never drank tea afterward, for it made them sick.

Isaac Wilson of Peabody persisted in selling tea, so the Sons of Liberty seized him and compelled him to walk about town penitently repeating:

I, Isaac Wilson, a Tory be.
I, Isaac Wilson, I sell tea.

The celebrated Boston tea party was followed by tea parties in other New England towns. In Salem soon after the Boston party David Mason was suspected of having had his negro servant smuggle two chests of tea into the home. Patriots entered and searched his house. They found the tea. They gave it to boys, who paraded with it to Salem common and there burned it.

Even after the Revolution the trade in tea was not wholly unrestricted. It appears that in some New England places dealers in tea were required to take out a license.

PSYCHIC HOUSEKEEPING.

In Which Everybody Works, Including Father.

The latest fashion in housekeeping is the psychic variety. Psychic housekeeping is simply a practical system that a Chicago woman has invented, wrought out and made an effective solution of the servant girl problem. In her house everybody works. The guests are hosts, and the hosts are guests, and all take turns at the dishpan and the washtub.

If you should happen to drop in at 5:30 a. m. you would see men and women in the kitchen, with aprons on and sleeves up to elbows, preparing breakfast. You would see one man serving the meal today and another tomorrow. In the evening the same scenes would be repeated.

Between the two meals one man is away painting portraits and landscapes and seascapes in oil, another is healing the sick, others are at the counting house, while the women are entertaining or shopping or calling.

Saturday afternoons men and women sweep, beat rugs, wash and iron and bake dainties for Sunday. And all this reduces the cost of living to $8 apiece a month.

Hitherto the management of the household has been considered woman's especial prerogative. Man has been general manager of railroad and factory and store and mine, but under the psychic system he becomes a general manager of housekeeping, a working manager in name and deed. The first man to hold the office and administer culinary and other domestic affairs is John Forsell, an artist, who lives in a big, square house at 1041 Waveland avenue, Chicago. The mistress of the mansion is Mrs. Forsell, yet she does not say "my home" when she speaks of it, but rather "our home," thereby wishing it understood that every occupant of this unique habitation is as much the "boss" as she herself. She is the inventor of psychic housekeeping, a kind which she asserts is adaptable to two or more families or to one family and its relatives or friends.

A Dainty Pincushion.

A charming little pincushion for baby's table is fashioned to look like a baby shoe or bootee with the cushion fitted into it. It can be made of white, pale blue or pink canvas, the cushion to be of silk in the same color and the lacing of the shoe in bebe ribbon to match.

Any worn out shoe can be ripped apart and used as a pattern. Where a tiny one is the only model available it will be necessary to cut the new goods larger, while following the general outline, as the cushion should not be too small.

Sleeper Sleeping Robe.

Challis is one of the best materials for making a little sleeping robe when traveling on a sleeper. It can be made as roomy and comfortable as a wrapper, with all the appearance of a pretty dress. Select a bordered effect—tan with a brown border or white with blue. The corals with oriental borders are handsome, and you can find dark colors that are as handsome as the very best figured materials on the market.

While riding a bicycle across a bridge over the Rideau river at Ottawa, Charles Lecomte, aged 20, fell over the edge and was drowned.

PLEASING CONCERT BY BAND; SONG CAUGHT THE CROWD

The most pleasing number in connection with last night's band concert, given by the 57th Band at Victoria Park was the excellent singing of "Love's Old Sweet Song," by Mr. W. McIlroy. Mr. McIlroy's solo was thoroughly appreciated by the large audience, and he was forced to give the song again in response to the continuous applause. Last night was Mr. McIlroy's first appearance at the park concerts, and as he was given such a cordial reception it is to be hoped that he will appear on some of the other programmes this summer.

The selections given by the band were of the popular order and were much appreciated by the crowd. A large number of the visiting painters were present, and their references to the playing of the band were of a decidedly complimentary character.

R. for Berlin, where he will discuss with his partner of the Crystal Amusement Co., Mr. Oscar Rumple, the advisability of enlarging the Crystal or building an entirely new house in this city with a seating capacity of 800. In case the addition is made to the present Crystal or a new one constructed, the most metropolitan improvements will be effected.

While Mr Edwards is in Berlin he and Mr. Rumple will visit Guelph and Owen Sound to look for picture show locations in those towns.

LUMBER COMPANY MAY REBUILD IN LAKEFIELD

The Peterborough Lumber Company will rebuild just as soon as arrangements towards that end can be conveniently made. The company has not decided where they will locate this time, and Lakefield may be given the preference to this city.

On excellent authority the Review learned this morning that the company would have to be given water protection before putting up another mill here.

HOW TO SECURE GOOD WATER; LATEST METHOD OF PURIFYING

Drinking water is now being sterilized on a large scale—that is, the bacteria are actually being killed instead of removed by filters or otherwise—at the great reservoir of the East Jersey Water Company at Boonton, N.J. In a description of this plant contributed to the Municipal Journal and Engineer (New York, July 7), the author notes that, in future the methods employed in water purification will depend entirely upon the special conditions that it is proposed to remedy. He writes:—

"A sand filter can frequently be operated to remove all the suspended matter which is desired, excepting the bacteria, at a rate very much higher than that required for a high grade of bacterial efficiency. In other words, if bacteria are not considered it may be possible to employ double the rate of filtration and thus save one-half the cost of the filters. There are two objections to such rapid filtration; the fact that sufficient bacterial efficiency is not obtained, and that in many cases the filters will clog too rapidly with the coarser suspended matters. These objections can be met, the former by a preliminary treatment, for the removal of such suspended matters, as by sedimentation, preliminary filters, etc.; the latter by a destruction of the bacteria by some method other than filtration. The actual amount of suspended matter contributed by the bodies of dead bacteria is insignificant. Preliminary filters (or 'pre-filters') are now becoming more or less common; and the destruction of bacteria in filtered effluents is rapidly advancing from the theoretic to the practical stage. Such destruction is commonly known as the sterilization of water, although strictly speaking only an approximation to sterilization can be obtained. The problem of sterilizing sewage effluents involves chiefly the matters of efficiency and of cost. In the sterilizing of potable water, however, an added difficulty is encountered in that the sterilizing agent must be such as will neither impart to the water anything injurious to the human system, nor make it objectionable for use in boilers or for manufacturing purposes. The ideal method of effecting this would apparently be the oxidation of the bacteria, by which they, being organic matter, would be destroyed. To a certain extent this can be effected by aeration; but the amount of oxygen required will not ordinarily be absorbed by water and artificial supplies of oxygen must be provided. The most effective forms of oxygen for this work are ozone and nascent oxygen, the latter being sometimes called atomic. Ozone has been successfully used in a number of European plants for this purpose, and in this country several experimental plants have been operated."

The use of chemicals for this kind of sterilization, the writer goes on to say, is not new, lime acids, copper, chlorin, and other compounds having been suggested, and to some extent experimented with. During the past year hypochlorite of lime ("bleaching-powder") has been considered, and it is this that has been used since September last at Boonton, with success. It is believed, the writer states, that this is the first practical use of the method as a prominent system on a large scale. The results may be seen from the statistics of a single month—that of December, 1908. Says the writer:—

"In December the amount of water treated varied from 38,000,000 to 43,000,000 gallons. The number of bacteria in the raw water varied from 210 to 1,600, averaging 571. Those in the water below the sterilizing plant varied from nothing to 30, averaging 2.9, while those found in the city by the physicians before mentioned averaged 18.3 in one case and 6.4 in the other. These figures indicate a bacterial efficiency of 96.8 per cent. in November, and 99.5 per cent. in December.

This test seems to have demonstrated that by adding hypochlorite of lime or soda to a water, its organic color will be reduced; there will be an oxidation of organic matter; the carbonic acid will be reduced; the total solid matter in the water will be increased, and, in the case of hypochlorite of lime, the total hardness of lorite of lime, th etotal hardness of the water will be increased. With hypochlorite of soda there will be no increase in hardness, the most important chemical change which is brought about in this process being the reduction of carbonic acid. The last has considerable practical significance from the standpoint of encrusting and corrosive action of water on iron and steel pipe brought about by the action of carbonic acid. Objections to this method based upon the liberation of free chlorin are invalid, since free chlorin cannot be liberated from hypochlorite of either lime or soda in a natural water; and even if it could be, the chlorin would immediately recombine with the hydrogen of the water, and thus cease to be free."—Lit. Digest.

STRUCK GAS LAST NIGHT

On Kincaid's Farm Otonabee—Good Prospects

Another promising find of gas was located on the Kincaid farm, Otonabee. During operations in search of oil two pockets of gas were found, the first at a depth of 160 feet, and the other ten feet lower. Messrs. Dutton and Leary are the gentlemen interested in the operations and are in the city to-day, much pleased at the results of the gas being struck last night.

ONE MONTH FOR CHARLES CLARKE

Did Not Act on Advice of Magistrate Dumble and Suffers Accordingly

Charles Clarke neglected to settle an account with a real estate agent after being told to do so by Magistrate Dumble, and also forgot to be present at the police court this morning. His negligence in both matters cost him dearly, as he will be called upon to renew old acquaintances at Castle Nesbitt for the next month.

Meetings Tonight

There will be a meeting of the Legal Committee to-night at 8 o'clock and a Council meeting at 8.30.

PREPARATIONS FOR UPPER STONEY LAKE REGATTA

Special to the Review.

Crowe's Landing, Stoney Lake, July 27.—The arrangements for the third annual regatta of the Upper Stoney Lake Campers' and Cottagers' Association to be held next Monday, August 2nd, have been completed. The committee in charge have done everything that could possibly add to the pleasure or comfort of the onlookers or competitors. In previous years the regatta has been one of the most popular held throughout the season, and in 1907 and '08 immense crowds attended. The Stoney Lake Navigation Company is running an excursion from Burleigh, calling at Juniper, Mt. Julian, and Glenwood. Returning the boat leaves at six o'clock. A long and tempting list of prizes has been prepared, including cups, medals, pennants, paddles, etc., not to mention the 40 pound cheese, value $6.50, for first prize in the war canoe race.

The new pavilion and Bellevidere summer resort overlook the course, from which an excellent view can be obtained. Also the shore at this point is very high, and the entire course may be viewed from almost any point on either side of the judge's stand.

In the evening there is to be a concert given by some of the most talented entertainers and musicians who are at present holidaying at the lake. The prizes will be presented at the concert, which will be followed by a dance.

The badge that the committee has selected for admission to the pavilion in the evening embodies a distinctly new feature. It consists of a large button, on which is a photo of the first regatta at Crowe's Landing, and a red, white and blue ribbon bearing the date of the regatta and the name of the association.

The judges are:—Messrs. John Davidson, Dr J. C. Rogers, W. L. Craig, Alex. Gibson.

BIG MERGER OF CANADIAN CEMENT MILLS ANNOUNCED

J. S. Irving Engineers a Consolidation to be Capitalized at Twenty-five Millions and Charter is Applied For —Big Men Interested.

Montreal, July 30.—Announcement was made last night that plans have been completed for the consolidation in one company of all the cement companies in Canada.

The new company will include all the principal cement manufacturing companies in Canada, and the consolidated company, which will be known as the Canadian Consolidated Cement Co., will have a capitalization of $25,000,000.

Application has been made to Ottawa for a charter for the company, and the unwriting arrangements are pretty near completion, some of the strongest men in the country being among the underwriters. The organization and underwriting arrangements are in charge of Rodolphe Forget, M.P.

It has not yet been decided whether a public issue will be made or whether it will be retained by the underwriters and their friends, but these are details which will be decided upon later.

The consolidated company will take over the principal cement plants in the Dominion, representing about two-thirds of the total output of the existing mills. In all, some seven or eight mills will be included in the merger, including the plants of the International Cement Co., which has been such a great success, and the founder and managing director of which, J. S. Irving has been the moving spirit in bringing about the merger. Among some of the leading men who are interested in the merger are: Sir Sanford Fleming, K.C.M.G.; Rodolphe Forget, M.P.; Senator W. C. Edwards of Ottawa; C. H. Cahan and W. M. Aiken and others.

ONE MAN ACQUITTED

Ottawa, July 30.—The case against the McMillan diamond thieves was called in the Police Court yesterday. Maward, alias Howard, was first arraigned, but the crown announced that it had no evidence to offer, and consequently he was acquitted, but he will have to answer later to a charge of vagrancy. The other two, Conrad and Woods, were then arraigned on the robbery. They pleaded guilty, but G. F. Henderson, their counsel, put up a strong plea on their behalf, laying stress upon the claim that the robbery was the idea of a moment, that their records were clean, that they were morphine victims, and that they had made restitution.

He asked for suspended sentence, but Crown Attorney Ritchie objected, and after a conference between counsel and the magistrate it was decided to remand them until to-day to allow a medical examination as to the effects of morphine upon the accused.

A CANADIAN IS HONORED

Toronto, July 30.—Rev. Arthur Lea, M.A., of Tokio, Japan, has been appointed Bishop of the Diocese of Kiushu, Japan, by the Archbishop of Canterbury. It is expected that he will proceed at once, accompanied by Mrs. Lea, to England, where his consecration will take place, returning to Japan by way of Canada.

The bishop-designate is a son of Joseph Lea of Balmy Beach. He was a student of Wycliffe College, and graduated from Toronto University in 1892. Having been rector of St. George's, New Glasgow, N.S., he volunteered for missionary work in 1897, and proceeded to Japan.

Labor Meeting Postponed

Owing to some misunderstanding about the Foresters' hall, where the labor meeting was to have been held last night is indefinitely postponed.

TAKE ENTIRE BAND OF GYPSIES; ARRESTED ON PERJURY CHARGE

Ottawa, July 29.—The camp of the Ottawa gypsies at the end of Wellington street is deserted, and every man, woman and child in the outfit is in the Hull jail. This is the latest development in connection with the litigation that has been going on for the past two weeks in the Hull and Ottawa police courts between the rival bands in these cities.

Yesterday afternoon the Ottawa people scored a decisive victory when Magistrate Goyette dismissed the Stokes on the charge of kidnapping little Katrina Alexis from the Hull camp. The Mexicans claim that they paid $1,000 for the girl. This was denied by the Stokes. When the court ruled that Katrina was to remain in the custody of the Stokes, the Mexicans were furious. Immediately after the adjournment of court they filed into the magistrate's office and demanded warrants for the arrest of their enemies on the charge of perjury, claiming that they had sworn to what was not true when they testified that they had not received $1,000 for the little girl when both parties were encamped at Peterborough.

Magistrate Goyette refused the angry gypsies' request. The old chief then left for Aylmer and there interviewed Magistrate Rainville, who promised to give them an order for the arrest of the Hull gypsies if Magistrate Goyette did not.

BABY DYING.

Then the gypsies came back to Hull and, going to the Hull magistrate again, had warrants sworn out for John and Eli Stoke and Miguel Alexis and their wives. Sheriff Wright executed the warrants this morning, and amid wailing the gypsies were placed behind the bars, taking their children with them. They will receive a hearing this afternoon before Magistrate Goyette.

This morning John Stoke was fined $10 for assaulting Mrs. Sterio, of the Mexican band, and $5 for using insulting language towards the members of the Mexican band during a truce some days ago.

Mrs. John Stoke carried into the Hull jail this morning a little baby several months of age. The child is ill, and Sheriff Wright believes that it is dying. The little one has been rather neglected since the beginning of this quarrel, its father explains, and has contracted influenza. It was treated with gypsy medicines, but for the past few days has been waning. The sheriff has ordered a doctor to attend to the child.

THE OUTING OF THE YEAR

LATE NEWS FROM MANY LOCALITIES

Succeeds Senator Perley.

Ottawa, July 30.—Benjamin Price, Battleford, Sask., has been appointed to the Senate in place of the late Senator Perley. Mr. Price was a member of the Legislative Assembly of the Northwest Territories and was a pioneer of the west. There are now sixty-three Liberals and twenty-one Conservatives in the Senate, with two vacancies for Nova Scotia of two years' standing.

Channel Flights Off.

Calais, July 30.—Hubert Latham and Count de Lambert, the French aeronauts, are shipping their flying machines to Rheims and it is understood they have abandoned the idea of making any further attempts to cross the English Channel until after "aviation week," which is the latter part of August.

Killed by Hayfork.

Shelburne, July 30.—Samuel Tweely was killed instantly on his farm on Wednesday night while operating a hayfork. He was drawing back the fork to reload when it slipped the hook and fell, hitting him on the forehead. He was a prosperous young farmer.

Ottawa's Population.

Ottawa, July 30.—The new Ottawa city directory places the population at 86,689.

As a manufacturing centre it says Ottawa is more favorably situated than any other city of North America. Possessing 100,000 horse-power within its limits, 230,000 within ten miles of the city hall, and 800,000 within a radius of forty miles.

Italian's Arm Taken Off.

Hamilton, July 30.—Monsott Peronay, 187 West Barton street, an Italian, was the victim of a horrible accident about four o'clock yesterday morning. His right arm was cut off by a big pair of red-hot shears used for cutting iron and steel in such a way as to expose the lungs. He will likely die.

Leaving the Soo.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 30.—D. D. Lewis, superintendent of the rail mill of the Lake Superior Corporation, and would associate himself with certain industries at Lorain, O., in which it is said he has financial interests. Lewis turned out the first steel rails made in Canada.

CAN RAISE MILLIONS OF BUSHELS

Montreal, July 30.—The statement is made on good authority that the completed Grand Trunk Pacific, from the City of Winnipeg to Edmonton is tributary to wheat lands capable of producing a little less than 300,000,000 bushels of wheat, or a good deal more than enough in itself without calling upon any other section of the great Canadian west to feed the British Isles in case of need.

Before leaving for Ottawa, E. J. Chamberlin, vice-president and general manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific, was asked if he ever had made a calculation as the percentage of the land on both sides of the new railway now approaching completion between the Alberta and Manitoba capitals, suitable for wheat raising purposes. He said he had not, but Mr. Chamberlin was under the impression that 75 per cent. would be a conservative estimate.

THE SWEAT-BOX CHANGES SENTENCE

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 30.—At yesterday's session of the Police Constables Association, the following officers were elected: President, Capt. Emil Trudel, chief of police of Quebec; secretary, William Stark, deputy chief of police, Toronto; treasurer, Inspector McClelland, Toronto; executive committee, Col. A. P. Sherwood (Dominion police Ottawa), Chief Detective Silas M. Carpenter (Montreal), Chief R. G. Chamberlain (Vancouver), Chief W. T. Williams (London), and Chief John Kimmins (Niagara Falls, Ont.).

The convention will meet next year at Vancouver.

An important resolution was passed protesting against adverse comment directed against the police for their sweat-box methods. The executive committee state these charges have no foundation in fact, that their rights in these matters are established by law, and they protest against attacks on the integrity of the force.

PAYNE BILL COMPLETE

Conferences on Tariff End and Senate Will Vote To-morrow.

Washington, July 30.—The Payne-Aldrich tariff bill to-day stands completed. An agreement on all disputed points was reached yesterday afternoon, and at 4.55 p.m. the conference report was signed by the Republican conferees.

It went to the House to-day and will be voted on by that body to-morrow. The Senate will begin consideration of the measure as agreed to by the conferees on Monday.

[illegible] by the mandate of President Taft, the tariff conferees were compelled to turn back and revise their rates on lumber and gloves. In a communication to Senator Aldrich and Representative Payne, the President demanded that the high rates on gloves, as fixed by the House, and the high rates on lumber, as fixed by the Senate, should not be made a part of the conference report.

After struggling over these questions throughout the entire day, the conferees surrendered to the President's view and signed the report. The House may be called to meet at 10 o'clock on Saturday, for it is the intention of the leaders that the report shall be pushed through in one legislative day. Probably a week will be required to dispose of the conference report in the Senate.

The Senate fixed the rate on pig lead at 2 1-8 cents per pound, but this was reduced in conference to two cents. In view of the dissatisfaction of the Idaho Senators this subject was re-opened yesterday and a rate of 2 1-8 cents a pound on pig lead in bars was restored.

In view of the action of the conferees in putting hides on the free list, a concession also was made to the cattle industry yesterday by taking tallow off the free list, where it had been placed by the conferees, and restoring it to the dutiable list.

Tallow had been put on the free list by the House, but the action of the conferees yesterday makes it dutiable at 1 1-2 cents per pound.

SIR WILFRID APPROVES OF THE SCHEME

Ottawa, July 30.—R. S. Neville, K.C., of Toronto, secretary of the 1912 Centennial Celebration Association, saw Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday and explained to him the plan which the association has in view for the celebration of the conclusion of the war of 1812 and the century of peace.

Sir Wilfrid expressed his personal approval of the scheme, but withheld his official approval until the plan has been exhibited in concrete form.

Mr. Neville had a long interview with Earl Grey, who was enthusiastic over the proposal and said it had his heartiest sympathy subject to the approval of the Government.

Dr. Doughty, the Dominion archivist, offered to place his services at the disposal of the association so far as possible.

Mr. Neville said last night that they hoped to co-operate with the Winnipeg-Selkirk Centennial Exposition Commission and make the celebration truly national.

THINK THE MAN WAS MURDERED

North Bay, July 30.—The finding of the dead body of C. A. Ardell, C.P.R. brakeman, near Markstay, on the morning of July 1, and the circumstances surrounding the tragedy, occasioned considerable suspicion at the time that his death was not the result of an accident. No inquest was held and the body was buried without examination.

Ardell's train was held up by a wreck ahead and he took advantage of the wait to visit a farm house about a mile away, where a dance was in progress, but the inmates deny that he ever reached there. In any event, his body was found next morning near the railway tracks in a mangled condition. In Markstay the impression is general that Ardell met with foul play and was placed upon the railway tracks.

OLD SPAIN AGAIN FACING ANOTHER BLOODY WAR

Bloodshed at Home and Abroad Cause Great Anxiety—Moorish Force of 6,000 is Attacking Albucemas and Fears Are Expressed for Fate of Army—Streets of Barcelona Are Spattered With Blood.

London, July 30.—The desperate condition of Spain, both at home and abroad, was disclosed yesterday when the Spanish Government officially admitted the defeat of Government troops in a great battle in Morocco, and at the same time reports showed that Barcelona was completely in the hands of a revolutionary mob, the streets running with blood and the Spanish are still using machine guns in a vain attempt to check the onslaught of the revolutionary element.

The battle in Morocco has brought a crushing defeat to the Spanish forces. The casualties on the Spanish side reached 3,000, giving the defeat an aspect akin to that which the Italians met in invading Abyssinia.

The Moors, flushed with their victory, are advancing to attack the Spaniards at another strategic point, Albucemas.

The latest despatches indicate that Melilla, the Spanish stronghold is so pressed by the Moorish forces that its safety is in danger, and its capitulation to the Moors would not cause surprise.

The internal condition of Spain is bordering on anarchy. Barcelona, the second largest city of Spain and the commercial rival of Madrid, is a centre of riot, pillage, the burning of public and religious institutions and of bloody fighting between the Spanish troops and rioters entrenched behind high barricades. The gravity of the situation, as related from points along the Spanish frontier, suggests the bloody days of the Paris commune.

The Government at Madrid is meeting the situation with stern repressive measures. But the report indicate that the military garrison at the capital is disaffected, and the popular sentiment is shown by reports that a vast crowd has held an anti-war manifestation in front of the royal palace.

Rent by Two Fears.

Madrid, July 30.—Spain to-day is rent by two fears—the fate of the army in Morocco and the situation in the Mediterranean provinces in Catalonia.

At the outskirts of Melilla the Spanish arms have suffered a serious check. Three thousand soldiers have either been slain or wounded, and the Moorish hordes are fighting at the very walls of the city itself.

News from Barcelona, the centre of the revolutionary outbreaks is extremely meagre and unsatisfactory. From Lisbon comes the report that the revolutionists are using bombs and that 100 persons were killed and 200 wounded during the earlier stages of the conflicts.

Insurrectionary outbreaks are reported from many points in Spain. At Granollers two convents have been burned, while at Cassadelaselva the civil guard was disarmed and imprisoned in the barracks. The revolutionists are active at Llahansa and Firuras where the railroads have been dynamited. Financial institutions are sending their funds across the frontier.

Albucemas Attacked.

Albucemas, Morocco, July 29.—An army of 6,000 Moors is now attacking this place.

Albucemas is a small island fortress and prison settlement belonging to Spain. It is situated in the Mediterranean on the coast of Morocco, five miles south of Cape Morro.

Fighting at Barcelona.

Paris, July 30.—Special despatches received here yesterday say that the fighting Wednesday in Barcelona was more sanguinary than previous despatches indicated. Machine guns and grape were used against the rioters. The sidewalks and buildings are spattered with the blood of the victims. Everywhere women and children are wandering in search of their husbands and fathers. Incendiarism is rampant.

ELECTRIC STORM DOES DAMAGE

Petrolea, July 30.—This district was visited by a violent electric storm early yesterday morning. A barn belonging to Mr Aikens, about a mile south of the town was struck by lightning and completely consumed. The loss is not known.

T. H. Wigle's general store and postoffice at Ruthven was struck by lightning at midnight and considerable damage was done by fire.

At Essex, the house of J. W. Cockburn was struck by lightning, but not much damaged, but the house of Wm. Robinson was struck and burned to the ground, the occupants just escaping in their night clothes. One of the girls was burned and cut on the face by falling plaster.

E. J. CHAMBERLIN GOES TO WINNIPEG

Montreal, July 30.—One of the first important things done by C. M. Hays of the Grand Trunk on his return from England this week, was to complete arrangements for the decentralization of authority in connection with the company's western enterprise.

To this end he, yesterday, issued a circular announcing that the office of E. J. Chamberlin, vice-president and general manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific, has been permanently transferred from Montreal to Winnipeg, and that all communications to that officer should in future be addressed to him at that point.

NORDICA MARRIED IN LONDON

London, July 30.—George W. Young, the banker of New York, and Mme. Lillian Nordica were married in King's Weigh House Church in Grosvenor square at 2.30 yesterday afternoon, in the presence of a few friends, most of whom are well known in American and English society. Mme. Nordica wore a gown of pale gray satin, the corsage being covered with rare old Venetian lace. She wore no hat nor veil, but instead a chaplet of laurel leaves. Her only ornament was a string of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom.

Japs Immigration.

Ottawa, July 30.—Up to the end of May the total Japanese emigration to America was 718, as compared with 2,275 for the same period of last year. Emigration to Canada totalled only 184, and of these 56 were classed as non-laborers. The number of Japanese in Canada who returned home during the same period was 163, leaving the net increase only 21.

Though it is raining heavily here yesterday, we are at work getting the engines ready to put in the Silver Dart, and I think we will begin putting them in position this afternoon. It will take some time, as the bearings, propellers, etc., have to be very thoroughly tested after they are in."

It is rumored that a movement is on foot to get the Dominion Government to imitate the action of the Whitney Government.

Reports Say Yield in Southern Part of Province Equals and May Surpass Previous Years—35,000 Box Cars and 750 Locomotives Are Ready.

Calgary, Alta., July 30.—From all sections of Southern Alberta most encouraging crop reports are being received and indications are equal, if not superior, to any previous year.

Railroads, while preparing to handle enormous crops of wheat, are also making every effort with a view to handling rush of land-seekers, which will result from harvesting of crops.

All of the railways of the west are concentrating their attention just now to the handling of grain shipments offered along their lines and it can be safely said that in point of adequate dispatch and in a more satisfactory manner than ever before.

BE FAIR

Have you ever noticed, remarked a writer in this week's America, the breed of the young tough, that has been developed in recent years. "He is pig-eyed, pointed-eared, strong-jawed, bullet-headed, stunted, but stocky with the devil's marks all over his face!" Yes; we have, and we have noticed, too, that he is altogether too common. Sometimes, however, looks are deceptive and we have found fellows with good hearts and clean souls under a very rough and villianous exterior. Vice and sin, however, surely set their seal upon a young man's face, but it sometimes happens that the stamp is derived from ancestors, who were not all they should be. The young Catholic tough is merely the grown-up boy, whose parents could not see the necessity of having him approach the Sacrament frequently. He had the same longings for righteousness and the same innate love of goodness which good young men have, but his early training was neglected. This tells the whole story. The tough is a product of the careless and badly-governed home. As we look about us and see some of the material of which fathers and mothers are made, the wonder is that there are not more toughs.—The Catholic Register.

We have no desire to defend the "Pig-eyed young tough," but there are others. Let us have a few words from the Register on clerical humbugs, for with all our respect for the cloth and the many noble men of all denominations in it, we are aware of the hideous fact that materialism in the common form of love of money has long since overgrown the original spirituality (if any) of the men in question. There are those who know that there is no such things as "taint" when applied to money in the estimation and esteem of many a befrocked cleric, who is a greater traitor to the cause he besmirches than the pig-eyed tough the Register describes.

It is impossible to deceive the people in the long run, however, and he who preaches one thing and practises the other, is the object of the wholesale scorn of many of those who are, as he supposes, victims of his guile.

It is useless to damn the already damned. Let us speak a word of those who, as Dante describes them, will occupy the highest seats in the mansions of Hell.

THE TRAGEDY OF LIFE

(Memphis News-Scimitar.)

That was a short story but truly pathetic and filled with human interest that came over wires from Central Texas, in which the tragic death of two children, aged respectively 7 and 2, was told.

Allen Wesley Pierce, a small farmer, had the misfortune to lose his wife. This is a tragedy in itself. The wife of the small farmer is truly a helpmeet. She is housekeeper, cook, laundress, school teacher, seamstress, and when necessary, assistant in the field.

There is perhaps no more helpless and confused mortal on earth than the man who is suddenly called upon to discharge the household duties formerly attended to by his wife.

His 7-year-old son saw this and valiantly attempted to remove some of his father's perplexities by preparing the evening meal. In doing this the gasoline stove exploded and he and his baby sister lost their lives. While the little hero was stretched upon his bed of pain in sight of his dead sister, he explained that he was "cooking supper for papa." It was the simple act of a little child, hazardous and fatal as it happened; but the motive behind it glorified it. And it may be — who knows?—that when the obits, great and small, and the services rendered here on earth by those who [illegible] of consequence [illegible] hall of fame are scanned and weighed and measured in heaven's chancery, that "cooking supper for papa" will not be found among the least.

It is generally maintained that the good are rewarded both here and hereafter. Since many build their trust in the hereafter on what they see in the "here," they are naturally a little shy of the promise of reward in the "here," and consequently in the hereafter. The suffering imposed, if imposed as an example, apparently fails of its effect. Besides, to many it seems so horrible and so unnecessary. If, however, life is regarded as the scientist regards it, the "mystery" is explained, for there is no mystery about it, no [illegible] and no pity. It is "difficulties" such as these that prove the barrier to faith with many.

A NEW TIMBER POLICY

(Ottawa Journal.)

The Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines in Ontario has given notice by advertisement that timber and tie berths situated in the districts of Algoma, Sudbury, Thunder Bay, Kenora and Rainy River will be offered for sale by public tender on Wednesday. This is a new way of doing things. The right to cut ties on crown lands heretofore has been granted either by permit or by public tender. Now the Government announces a new policy. Henceforth the right is to be granted only upon public tender. This policy, if administered strictly, should eliminate all favoritism in the distribution of these rights. It should provide also substantial increases in the public revenues. And there is in the record of the Whitney Government convincing assurance that the policy will be administered strictly. The action of the Government in this regard should meet with approval. "Moreover," as the Toronto News remarks, "the change is wholly in keeping with the traditional honesty and straightforwardness of the Whitney administration."

In an analysis of changes made in the process of timber sales in the province, the News remarks that in the past all timber, including tie timber, has been sold by the thousand feet, measured according to the Doyle rule. The Doyle rule is a standard of measurement agreed upon by the former Government for ascertaining the number of feet of timber in a log. From the standpoint of the provincial exchequer, the objection to this standard has been that as applied to all logs up to 20 inches in diameter, it worked out strongly in favor of the large purchaser. The big miller who cut hundreds of thousands of ties paid for them by the thousand feet. The man who hewed out a few hundred with his own axe bought them by the piece. He paid 20 cents for a 16-foot log ten inches in diameter, for which the miller was assessed only nine cents.

But beginning with the coming sale of timber berths, all logs less than 11 inches in diameter will be sold by the piece instead of by the thousand feet. The large lumberman will pay 20 cents for his 10-inch 16-foot log the same as the small man with the axe who gets out only a few hundred ties. As the number of railway ties annually cut in Ontario is very large the addition to the provincial revenue thus secured should be considerable.

It looks like a square deal, a square deal of the sort through which the Whitney Government has made itself invincible in the province. Slipshod methods of administration are succeeded by business methods. Favoritism is abolished. An equality of opportunity is to be enforced. The interests not only of the large operator but of the whole people are to be conserved. It is said that the change in policy had been postponed by reason of depression in the lumber trade. Now there should be few shrewder observers of lumber conditions than Sir James Whitney, and his minister, Mr. Cochrane. They are not the men to do anything to hurt such an important industry. The new policy is apparently designed to advance the interests of the province as a whole, and it doubtless will receive popular approval.

Who was John Woolman?

Samuel Gompers, who is paying a visit to England, says that 1908 was a veritable black year in England.

Notwithstanding the Reform tariff, sugar is going up with the general cost of living to the region of the upper air.

Ald. Phelan, chairman of the Board of Works, is looking as pleased as a boy with a 12x4 piece of watermelon, over the passing of the by-laws.

Three men from the Irish township of Douro, hardby this city, stood talking near the Review Office the other day. One of them, in reply to another, remarked: "Well, that's so. If a man don't civilize himself he'll never be civilized." There's a lot of truth in that.

The Contemporary review contains Professor Weismann's address at the University of Freiburg on the occasion of the Centenary of Darwin. It is a lucid and quiet statement from the pen of a master. Weismann thinks that Darwin got his views, not from his grandfather or from Lamarck, but from his own observations of nature. He says that he himself first read "The Origin of Species" in 1861 at a single sitting, and with ever-growing enthusiasm. "When he finished it he stood firm on the basis of the evolution theory, and he has never seen reason to forsake it. Weismann thinks that it is the discovery of the principle of selection that will make the name of Darwin immortal. Weismann believes that grace is not destined to undergo any essential changes in a physical sense, but he thinks that ethical improvement is not only possible but probable on the principle of selection. It is decisive in the selection of the human race.—Church Newspaper.

OF INTEREST

From the Toronto Evening Telegram's "Gems of Prose"

"The evil of civil war," a speech delivered by Lord Palmerston, in the British House of Commons, March 28, 1829, is as follows:—

Then came we to the last remedy—civil war. Some gentlemen say that sooner or later, we must fight for it, and the sword must decide. They tell us that, if blood were but shed in Ireland, Catholic emancipation might be avoided. Sir, when honorable members shall be a little deeper read in the history of Ireland, they will find that in Ireland blood has been shed—that in Ireland leaders have been seized, trials have been held and punishments have been inflicted. They will find, indeed, almost every page of the history of Ireland darkened by bloodshed, by seizures, by trials, and by punishments. But what has been the effect of these measures? They have, indeed, been successful in quelling the disturbances of the moment; but they never have gone to their cause and have only fixed deeper the poisoned barb that rankles in the heart of Ireland. Can one believe ones' ears, when one hears respectable men talk so lightly—nay, almost so wishfully—of civil war? Do they reflect what a countless multitude of ills those three short syllables contain? It is well, indeed, for the gentlemen of England, who live secure under the protecting shadow of the law, whose slumbers have never been broken by the clashing of angry swords, whose harvests have never been trodden down by the conflict of hostile fleet—it is well for them to talk of civil war, as if it were some holiday pastime, or some sport of children.—

"They jest at scars who never felt a wound."

But that gentlemen from unfortunate and ill-starred Ireland, who have seen with their own eyes, the miseries which civil war produces—who have known, by their own experience, the barbarism, ay, the barbarity, which it engenders,—that such persons should look upon civil war as anything short of the last and greatest of national calamities—it is to me a matter of the deepest and most unmixed astonishment. I will grant, if you will, that the success of such a war with Ireland would be, as signal and complete as would be its injustice. I will grant, if you will, that resistance would soon be extinguished with the lives of those who resisted; I will grant, if you will, that the crimsoned banner of England would soon wave, in undisputed supremacy, over the smoking ashes of their towns, and the blood-stained solitude of their fields. But I will tell you that England herself never would permit the achievement of such a conquest; England would reject, with disgust, laurels that were dyed in fraternal blood; England would recoil, with loathing and abhorrence, from the bare contemplation of so devilish a triumph!

TAYLOR'S BORAX SOAP

Save 25 Bars of Soap

Ordinarily you use at least one bar of laundry soap every week—more than fifty bars in a year.

That's twice as many as you need, for Taylor's Borax Soap goes twice as far as any other soap.

Please prove this for yourself—we invite the test. Try one bar of this soap with one bar of any other. See which soap lasts the longest—learn which is the cheapest.

We know what the result will be, for we have made this same test many times over—our soap lasts twice as long.

Taylor's Soap

Don't think that all soaps are alike—there is a wonderful difference in Taylor's Borax Soap. Let us show you some of the ways in which this soap differs from others.

First we use only the purest cocoanut oil from the Isle of Ceylon. Then we boil it doubly long and mix in the borax. While boiling we run thousands of gallons of clean water through the soap which carries away all impurities.

We require twenty-one days to make a single cake. The labor of more than 200 people is needed. We crush every bar under a weight of 30 tons to press out the moisture. We put every bar through an ageing process equal to standing six months in your pantry. So you don't have to age this soap.

When finished the bar is hard and firm, so it wears much longer. The borax softens the water which also reduces the amount of soap by almost half that ordinarily required.

This pure soap is utterly harmless to the skin—it leaves the hands whiter and softer than ever before. If it is so harmless to the skin, then think how harmless it must be to the clothes.

CHAPTER XXV.

HAVING taken a definite step in any direction, it was not in Loder's nature to wish it retraced. His face was set, but set with determination, when he closed the outer door of his own rooms and passed quietly down the stairs and out into the silent court. The thought of Chilcote, his pitiable condition, his sordid environments, were things that required a firm will to drive into the background of the imagination, but a whole inferno of such visions would not have daunted Loder on that morning as, unobserved by any eyes, he left the little courtyard with its grass, its trees, its pavement—all so distastefully familiar—and passed down the Strand toward life and action.

As he walked his steps increased in speed and vigor. Now, for the first time, he fully appreciated the great mental strain that he had undergone in the past ten days—the unnatural tension; the suppressed but perpetual sense of impending recall; the consequently high pressure at which work and even existence had been carried on. And as he hurried forward the natural reaction to this state of things came upon him in a flood of security and confidence—a strong realization of the temporary respite and freedom for which no price would have seemed too high. The moment for which he had unconsciously lived ever since Chilcote's first memorable proposition was within reach at last, safeguarded by his own action.

The walk from Clifford's Inn to Grosvenor square was long enough to dispel any excitement that his interview had aroused, and long before the well known house came into view he felt sufficiently braced mentally and physically to seek Eve in the morning room, where he instinctively felt she would still be waiting for him.

Thus he encountered and overpassed the obstacle that had so nearly threatened ruin, and, with the singleness of purpose that always distinguished him, he was able, once having passed it, to dismiss it altogether from his mind. From the moment of his return to Chilcote's house no misgiving as to his own action, no shadow of doubt, rose to trouble his mind. His feelings on the matter were quite simple. He had inordinately desired a certain opportunity. One factor had arisen to debar that opportunity, and he, claiming the right of strength, had set the barrier aside. In the simplicity of the reasoning lay its power to convince, and were a tonic needed to brace him for his task he was provided with one in the masterful sense of a difficulty set at naught. For the man who has fought and conquered one obstacle feels strong to vanquish a score.

It was on this day, at the reassembling of parliament, that Fraide's great blow was to be struck. In the ten days since the affair of the caravans had been reported from Persia public feeling had run high, and it was upon the pivot of this incident that Loder's attack was to turn, for, as Lakeley was fond of remarking, "In the scales of public opinion one dead Englishman has more weight than the whole eastern question." It had been arranged that, following the customary procedure, Loder was to rise after questions at the morning sitting and ask leave to move the adjournment of the house on a definite matter of urgent public importance, upon which—leave having been granted by the rising of forty members in his support—the way was to lie open for his definite attack at the evening sitting. And it was with a mind attuned to this plan of action that he retired to the study immediately he had breakfasted and settled to a final revision of his speech before an early party conference should compel him to leave the house. But here again circumstances were destined to change his programme. Scarcely had he sorted his notes and drawn his chair to Chilcote's desk than Renwick entered the room with the same air of important haste that he had shown on a previous occasion.

"A letter from Mr. Fraide, sir. But there's no answer," he said, with unusual brevity.

Loder waited till he had left the room; then he tore the letter open. He read:

> My Dear Chilcote—Lakeley is the recipient of special and very vital news from Meshed—unofficial, but none the less alarming. Acts of Russian aggression toward British traders are reported to be rapidly increasing, and it is stated that the authority of the consulate is treated with contempt. Pending a possible confirmation of this, I would suggest that you keep an open mind on the subject of tonight's speech. By adopting an anticipatory—even an unprepared—attitude you may find your hand materially strengthened. I shall put my opinions before you more explicitly when we meet. Yours faithfully,
>
> HERBERT FRAIDE.

The letter, worded with Fraide's usual restraint, made a strong impression on its recipient. The thought that his speech might not only express opinions already tacitly held, but voice a situation of intense and national importance, struck him with full force. For many minutes after he had grasped the meaning of Fraide's message he sat neglectful of his notes, his elbows resting on the desk, his face between his hands, stirred by the suggestion that here might lie a greater opportunity than any he had anticipated.

Still moved by this new suggestion, he attended the party conclave that Fraide had convened and afterward lunched with and accompanied his leader to the house. They spoke very little as they drove to Westminster, for each was engrossed by his own thoughts. Only once did Fraide allude to the incident that was paramount in both their minds. Then, turning to Loder with a smile of encouragement, he laid his fingers for an instant on his arm.

"Chilcote," he had said, "when the time comes, remember you have all my confidence."

Looking back upon that day, Loder often wondered at the calmness with which he bore the uncertainty. To sit apparently unmoved and wait without emotion for news that might change the whole tenor of one's action would have tried the stoicism of the most experienced; to the novice it was well nigh unendurable. And it was under these conditions and fighting against these odds that he sat through the long afternoon in Chilcote's place, obeying the dictates of his chief. But if the day was fraught with difficulties for him it was fraught with dullness and disappointment for others, for the undercurrent of interest that had stirred at the Easter adjournment and risen with added force on this first day of the new session was gradually but surely threatened with extinction as hour after hour passed bringing no suggestion of the battle that had on every side been tacitly expected. Slowly and unmistakably speculation and dissatisfaction crept into the atmosphere of the house as moment succeeded moment and the opposition made no sign. Was Fraide shirking the attack or was he playing a waiting game? Again and again the question arose, filling the air with a passing flicker of interest, but each time it sprang up only to die down again as the ordinary business of the day dragged itself out.

Gradually, as the afternoon wore on, daylight began to fade. Loder, sitting rigidly in Chilcote's place, watched with suppressed inquiry the faces of the men who entered through the constantly swinging doors, but not one face, so eagerly scanned, carried the message for which he waited. Monotonously and mechanically the time passed. The government, adopting a neutral attitude, carefully skirted all dangerous subjects, while the opposition, acting under Fraide's suggestion, assisted rather than hindered the programme of postponement. For the moment the eagerly anticipated reassembling threatened dismal failure, and it was with a universal movement of weariness and relief that at last the house rose to dine.

But there are no possibilities so elastic as those of politics. At half past 7 the house rose in a spirit of boredom and disappointment, and at 8 o'clock the lobbies, the dining room, the entire space of the vast building, was stirred into activity by the arrival of a single telegraphic message.

The new development for which Fraide had waited came indeed, but it came with a force he had little anticipated. With a thrill of awe and consternation men heard and repeated the astounding news that, while personally exercising his authority on behalf of British traders, Sir William Brice-Field, consul general at Meshed, had been fired at by a Russian officer and instantly killed.

The interval immediately following the receipt of this news was too confused for detailed remembrance. Two ideas made themselves slowly felt—a deep horror that such an event could obtrude itself upon our high civilization and a strong personal dismay that so honored, distinguished and esteemed a representative as Sir William Brice-Field could have been allowed to meet death in so terrible a manner.

It was in the consciousness of this feeling, the consciousness that in his own person he might voice not only the feelings of his party, but those of the whole country, that Loder rose an hour later to make his long delayed attack.

He stood silent for a moment, as he had done on an earlier occasion, but this time his motive was different. Roused beyond any feeling of self consciousness, he waited as by right for the full attention of the house; then quietly, but with self possessed firmness, he moved the motion for adjournment.

Like a match to a train of powder the words set flame to the excitement that had smoldered for weeks, and in an atmosphere of stirring activity, a scene of such tense and vital concentration as the House has rarely witnessed, he found inspiration for his great achievement.

To give Loder's speech in mere words would be little short of futile. The gift of oratory is too illusive, too much a matter of eye and voice and individuality, to allow of cold reproduction. To those who heard him speak on that night of April 18 the speech will require no recalling, and to those who did not hear him there would be no substitute in bare reproduction.

In the moment of action it mattered nothing to him that his previous preparations were to a great extent rendered useless by this news that had come with such paralyzing effect. In the sweeping consciousness of his own ability he found added joy in the freedom it opened up. He ceased to consider that by fate he was a Conservative, bound by traditional conventionalities. In that great moment he knew himself sufficiently a man to exercise whatever individuality instinct prompted. He forgot the didactic methods by which he had proposed to show knowledge of his subject, both as a past and a future factor in European politics. With his own strong appreciation of present things he saw and grasped the vast present interest lying beneath his hand.

For fifty minutes he held the interest of the house, speaking insistently, fearlessly, commandingly on the immediate need of action. He unhesitatingly pointed out that the news which had just reached England was not so much an appalling fact as a sinister warning to those in whose keeping lay the safety of the country's interests. Lastly, with a fine touch of eloquence, he paid tribute to the steadfast fidelity of such men as Sir William Brice-Field, who, whatever political complications arise at home, pursue their duty unswervingly on the outposts of the empire.

At his last words there was silence—the silence that marks a genuine effect—then all at once, with vehement, impressive force, the storm of enthusiasm broke its bounds.

It was one of those stupendous bursts of feeling that no etiquette, no decorum, is powerful enough to quell. As he resumed his seat, very pale, but exalted as men are exalted only once or twice in a lifetime, it rose about him—clamorous, spontaneous, undeniable. Near at hand were the faces of his party, excited and triumphant; across the house were the faces of Sefborough and his ministry, uncomfortable and disturbed.

The tumult swelled, then fell away, and in the partial lull that followed Fraide leaned over the back of his seat. His quiet, dignified expression was unaltered, but his eyes were intensely bright.

"Chilcote," he whispered, "I don't congratulate you or myself. I congratulate the country on possessing a great man!"

The remaining features of the debate followed quickly one upon the other. The electric atmosphere of the house possessed a strong incentive power. Immediately Loder's ovation had subsided, the undersecretary for foreign affairs rose and in a careful and nonincriminating reply defended the attitude of the government.

Next came Fraide, who, in one of his rare and polished speeches, touched with much feeling upon his personal grief at the news reported from Persia and [illegible] endorsement of Loder's words.

Following Fraide came one or two dissentient Liberals, and then Sefborough himself closed the debate. His speech was masterly and fluent; but, though any disquietude he may have felt was well disguised under a tone of reassuring ease, the attempt to rehabilitate his position—already weakened in more than one direction—was a task beyond his strength.

Amid extraordinary excitement the division followed, and with it a government defeat.

It was not until half an hour after the votes had been taken that Loder, freed at last from persistent congratulations, found opportunity to look for Eve. In accordance with a promise made that morning, he was to find her waiting outside the ladies' gallery at the close of the debate.

Disengaging himself from the group of men who had surrounded and followed him down the lobby, he discarded the lift and ran up the narrow staircase. Reaching the landing, he went forward hurriedly. Then with a certain abrupt movement he paused. In the doorway leading to the gallery Eve was waiting for him. The place was not brightly lighted, and she was standing in the shadow, but it needed only a glance to assure his recognition. He could almost have seen in the dark that night, so vivid were his perceptions. He took a step toward her, then again he stopped. In a second glance he realized that her eyes were bright with tears, and it was with the strangest sensation he had ever experienced that the knowledge flashed upon him. Here also he had struck the same note—the long coveted note of supremacy. It had rung out full and clear as he stood in Chilcote's place dominating the house; it had besieged him clamorously as he passed along the lobbies amid a sea of friendly hands and voices; now, in the quiet of the deserted gallery it came home to him with deeper meaning from the eyes of Chilcote's wife.

Without a thought he put out his hands and caught hers.

"I couldn't get away," he said. "I'm afraid I'm very late."

With a smile that scattered her tears, Eve looked up. "Are you?" she said, laughing a little. "I don't know what the time is. I scarcely know whether it's night or day."

Still holding one of her hands, he drew her down the stairs, but as they reached the last step she released her fingers.

"In the carriage," she said, with another little laugh of nervous happiness.

At the foot of the stairs they were surrounded. Men whose faces Loder barely knew crowded about him. The intoxication of excitement was still in the air—the instinct that a new force had made itself felt, a new epoch been entered upon, stirred prophetically in every mind.

Passing through the enthusiastic concourse of men, they came unexpectedly upon Fraide and Lady Sarah surrounded by a group of friends. The old statesman came forward instantly and, taking Loder's arm, walked with him to Chilcote's waiting brougham. He said little as they slowly made their way to the carriage, but the pressure of his fingers was tense and an unwonted color showed in his face. When Eve and Loder had taken their seats, he stepped to the edge of the curb. They were alone for the moment, and, leaning close to the carriage, he put his hand through the open window. In silence he took Eve's fingers and held them in a long, affectionate pressure; then he released them and took Loder's hand.

"Good night, Chilcote," he said. "You have proved yourself worthy of her. Good night." He turned quickly and rejoined his waiting friends. In another second the horses had wheeled round, and Eve and Loder were carried swiftly forward into the darkness.

In the great moments of man's life woman comes before—and after. Some shadow of this truth was in Eve's mind as she lay back in her seat, with closed eyes and parted lips. It seemed that life came to her now for the first time—came in the glad, proud, satisfying tide of things accomplished. This was her hour, and the recognition of it brought the blood to her face in a sudden happy rush. There had been no need to precipitate its coming; it had been ordained from the first.

Whether she desired it or no, whether she strove to draw it nearer or strove to ward it off, its coming had been inevitable. She opened her eyes suddenly and looked out into the darkness, the darkness throbbing with multitudes of lives, all waiting, all desiring fulfillment. She was no longer lonely, no longer aloof. She was kin with all this pitiful, admirable, sinning, loving humanity. Again tears of pride and happiness filled her eyes. Then suddenly the thing she had waited for came to pass.

Loder leaned close to her. She was conscious of his nearer presence, of his strong, masterful personality. With a thrill that caught her breath she felt his arm about her shoulder and heard the sound of his voice.

"Eve," he said, "I love you. Do you understand? I love you," and, drawing her close to him, he bent and kissed her.

With Loder, to do was to do fully. When he gave, he gave generously; when he swept aside a barrier, he left no stone standing. He had been slow to recognize his capacities, slower still to recognize his feelings. But now that the knowledge came he received it openly. In this matter of newly comprehended love he gave no thought to either past or future. That they loved and were alone was all he knew or questioned. She was as much Eve—the one woman—as though they were together in the primeval garden, and in that spirit he claimed her.

PETERBORO' LUMBER COMPANY ASKED FOR FIRE PROTECTION

Special Meeting of Council Last Night to Deal With the Request—Pipe Line Will be Furnished to the Company's Property.

A special meeting of the City Council was held last night for the purpose of considering what could be done for the Peterborough Lumber Company in the matter of affording the company fire protection for a new mill to be built at Burnham's Point to replace the one destroyed by fire. An informal meeting was held at the company's offices on Wednesday evening, at which the mayor, the water commissioners, the directors of the company and Mr. W. Henderson, the waterworks superintendent, were present, and Mr. Henderson promised to have an estimate of the work in connection with the laying of the pipes that would be required to meet the company's request.

A letter from the company was read by Mayor Rush. The communication was from Mr. George Linton, the secretary-treasurer of the company. In it was stated the facts that during five months of the year 125 men were employed at the mill, and 100 were employed for four months. Four hydrants in good positions were asked for, and the company stated that only the protection given other manufacturers was desired. It was also stated that the company had Lakefield in view as the place to build a new mill if adequate fire protection could not be obtained here, but Peterborough was given the preference, as it was a more convenient centre and as the directors of the company resided here.

Mr. Henderson made a report that the distance to carry the mains from Engleburn avenue up to the company's grounds was 1,997 feet and would cost $1.15 a foot, for a total of $2,500.

Ald. Hicks asked what it would cost to take the water mains to the company's property and not inside as he was not sure that the city could place hydrants on private property.

Mr. W. H. Moore said there were 749 feet of city property upon which the mains would have to be laid at a cost of $860. The balance is all on the company's property.

Ald. Hicks said the city should try to put the water service up to the company's property, but that the service on the property should be left to the company and the water commissioners.

Ald. Morgan suggested that the waterworks be taken to the company's property by way of Burnham street. This would cost the city $250 less than by way of Engleburn avenue.

In order that the interest and sinking fund might be paid, Mr. Moore suggested that the city pay for two hydrants on the part of the work the city has to do.

Messrs. J. H. Shock and D. Davidson were present, and were asked to meet the Council. The mayor told them that the Council would give them the same protection as other companies get. That is, the city would lay the mains up to their property, and the company would have to pay for the hydrants on their own property.

Mr. Shock said there was a public street through their property from the bridge. The city could lay the mains right down the street.

The street, however, it was pointed out, was in such a position that it belonged to the company.

Mr. Shock asked what protection the company was entitled to? Was it just what the city desired to give? They were heavy taxpayers and had been heavy losers. They had no fixed assessment or any other favor, and they have no fire protection whatever.

By the water mains being laid via Burnham street to the mill it would require the cost of five hydrants to pay the sinking fund and interest. It was therefore suggested that the company deed the city sufficient land to lay the mains on, and that the city pay for so many hydrants and the company pay for so many, so long as the mills were in operation. When the mills cease to exist then the company assume the full cost.

It was moved by Ald. Morrow and seconded by Ald. Galaspie that the city pay for three hydrants and the company pay the balance. The total total cost will amount to $141 a year.—Carried.

The work will be completed within two months and the company will start at once and erect new mills. Mr. Davidson said they would start their mills to-day and likely put up a $25,000 building.

BAD RUNAWAY ACCIDENT LAST NIGHT ON GEORGE ST.

An exciting runaway occurred on George street last night shortly after seven o'clock, and while the principals in the affair received some somewhat painful injuries, they are congratulating themselves this morning that nothing more serious happened. Mr. Isaac Eastwood, accompanied by Mrs. Eastwood, were driving east on Hunter street, and on arriving at the corner of George street an automobile, driven by Mr. Leslie Stevens, was going north on George street on the east side. The team of horses which Mr. Eastwood was driving were spirited ones, and took fright at the swiftly moving automobile. A southbound street car also told on the nerves of the horses, for they both began to rear and plunge, and finally became uncontrolable. They dashed down George street at a rapid rate of speed, and became more frightened by those who rushed out on the street in an endeavor to stop them. The animals continued their wild race with the driver doing his utmost to get them under control until the corner of George and Lansdowne streets was reached. At this point the dash-board of the buggy gave way, causing Mr. Eastwood to give a sudden lurch forward, and almost at the same moment Mrs. Eastwood caught her husband's arm, thus causing a relaxation on the reins. The horses turned quickly, and both occupants were thrown out of the buggy, while the animals continued to run east on Lansdowne street. In the meantime a number of citizens and the automobile at which the horses had taken fright, had followed as quickly as possible and, arriving at the place where Mr. and Mrs. Eastwood were thrown out, acted quickly, and Mrs. Eastwood, who appeared to be seriously injured, was taken to her home in the automobile, where it was found she had received many painful bruises about the body, but no bones were broken.

Mr. Eastwood was badly shaken up, but otherwise was not injured.

The horses stopped at the south end of Lansdowne street, after the buggy had been demolished by coming in contact with posts and the sidewalk.

It was learned this morning that Mrs. Eastwood passed a restless night, but is better this morning, and no serious results are anticipated.

CHARGED IRON WORK CAUSES EXCITEMENT

Considerable amusement is being caused on George street these days, owing the the fact that the iron work on one of Barrie's windows has become charged with a current of electricity.

Yesterday afternoon a small and nearly black spaniel came sauntering along the pavement wagging his tail in a most violent and happy manner. Just opposite Barrie's a large stout man, who was coming in the opposite direction crowded him into the building. His wagging tail came in contact with the charged iron work, and a queer sensation "ran through the marrow of his bones." With one yelp of misery and fear, the animal betook himself to flight. With his ears flat back and tail securely tucked between his hindmost legs he made for home. Three minutes later he was seen rounding the curve to the cemetery, and from a distance looked good to do the next three miles under five flat.

Another amusing incident was that in connection with the return visit of the gypsy queen and Michael George to this city. Friend Michael, who, by the way, has a great eye for colors, caught sight of a nice scarlet hat band in Barrie's window, and proceeded to take a closer view of the object. Leaving fair Rosa peering in at another window, he crossed the street and placed his hand upon the iron work of the Barrie window. Did he swear? Well, now, there is the point, and as Dr. Peakey is not present to give a full translation of what followed, it must needs remain in doubt.

TRADES AND LABOR CONGRESS OF CANADA; CONVENTION CALL

To the officers and members of Trades and Labor Councils, National Trades Unions, Federal Labor Unions and International Local Trades Unions in the Dominion of Canada, greetings:

Fellow Labor Unionists and Brothers,—The twenty-fifth annual session of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada will convene in the Provincial Legislative Buildings, city of Quebec, beginning at 10 o'clock, Monday morning, September 20th, 1909, and will continue in session from day to day until the business of the convention has been completed.

It is singularly appropriate that the organized wage earners of Canada should assemble in this ancient capital to discuss the welfare and progress of the toiling masses. To the vision of the immigrant and visitor it typifies all that bright hope and lofty ambition inspired in the traveller from older countries, who comes to seek that peace, progress and spiritual uplift that make for material and moral contentment. Fleeing from the tyranny and progressive industrial and national conditions that surround him elsewhere, he sees in Quebec the promise of a better home life, higher civilisation, loftier aspirations, nobler aims in life and religious freedom. How appropriate, therefore, that the congress, representing all these ideals on behalf of the masses, should meet at Quebec to further the moral and material interests of its constituents.

The matters that will be presented for the earnest consideration of the delegates are not less weighty than heretofore. Indeed, at no period in its history has the congress had a more important duty to perform. Apart altogether from the important legislation of the Dominion Parliament and of the Provincial Legislatures, the ever passing demands for the amelioration of industrial conditions and the betterment of the whole of our industrial forces—apart from these altogether, a pronouncement is urgently needed upon the present jingo propaganda for military training in the schools, military and naval equipment. Canada is a country of peace. The problem of living in times of peace is difficult enough without having foisted upon us a vast expenditure for non-productive, but highly destructive, effort. "War is Hell!"—for the workingman. Labor cannot afford to be silent at this critical juncture but should unite with all peace-loving citizens of Canada to squelch, in its incipiency, the forced sentiment that would involve us in the quarrels of other lands.

Following the financial and industrial depression of the past year or two, organized capital will be found ready, as ever, to foist its troubles upon the wage earner. The latter must be up and doing for his own sake. With prosperity in sight, labor must prepare to share in it. Now is the time to voice your views, so elect your delegates early and help to make the Quebec convention the greatest in the history of organized labor in Canada.

Fraternally Yours,

ALPHONSE VERVILLE, President

JAMES SIMPSON, Vice-President.

P. M. DRAPER, Sec.-Treasurer.

IT'S NOT A LEASE BUT OWNERSHIP

Statement of the Owners as to the Position of the Burleigh Falls Lease

Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, solicitor for the Central Ontario Power Company, has written a letter to the local press and says:—"You speak about paying $120,000 for a lease partially expired. This is not the title that the Central Ontario Power Company offer the City of Peterborough. The Central Ontario Power Company are the fee simple owners of the property in the main. Their predecessors in title owned the whole water power. The Government only expropriated sufficient to build the dam, and the Company are the owners of the bed of the river, most of the banks and all the riparian rights from the dam down to Stoney Lake. In settling with the Government the Company took a lease of the Government dam and all the Government rights in lieu of damages, while the owners of of other powers along the river received large sums in the way of damages. The true position of the title is that about nine-tenths of the power property belongs to the Company now, in fee simple. The other tenth is under the lease from the Government, which has still fifty to run. The lease, by itself, would be worthless and the Government will never be in a position to lease their portion of the power to anybody else, as it would be entirely worthless to anybody else. If the city of Peterborough purchases Burleigh, they get the control of it for all time to come, and it has all the water of the Otonabee river, and twenty-seven feet of head, the natural reservoirs of Lovesick Lake above it, and Stoney Lake below, and will thus be enabled to develop fifty per cent. more power than any other power on the Otonabee river. It would pay the city of Peterborough better to pay a couple of hundred thousand dollars for Burleigh than to take three or four smaller powers together, and incur the expense of their development and operation. However, it is for the city to say.;

Yours truly,

R. J. McLAUGHLIN.

ON REVIEW'S TRIP IN SCOTLAND

Miss B. Dawson Writes of Her Experience on the Tour of the British Isles

Dating a letter from the Royal British Hotel, Edinburgh, Scotland, Miss Dawson writes as follows—

Edinburgh, July 21, 1909.

The Peterborough Review,
Peterborough.

Well, love, I am in Edinburgh, Scotland, after having a very pleasant voyage.

We left Boston at 4 p.m. Friday, July 9th and for seven days had a very smooth sea, in fact the water was no more ruffled than our own lake, until on Friday, the 16th, we passed the "Devil's Hole," just before entering the Irish Sea, and we certainly thought we were in for a time. I never realized before what it was to be rocked in the cradle of the deep. Saturday evening everything not securely fastened down rode around and called at your door, making a deafening noise.

However, Sunday was an ideal day. We came all along the north-west shore of Ireland, skirting Donegal county, passing the famous cave where Bruce hid. The scenery all along has been beautiful.

We arrived in Glasgow about four o'clock Monday morning, and were free from customs about 10, when Cook's met our party, which consists of fifty-six people. We drove through Glasgow and right on to Edinburgh, where we will spend four days. We spent yesterday sight-seeing, such as Edinburgh and Holyrood castles and the Parliament Buildings. We had the pleasure of listening to court here. The lawyers are called pleaders and advisers, and wear black gowns and white wigs made of whalebone, which are very attractive.

We have the balance of the time to ourselves and leave Thursday morning for London. We are all enjoying the trip, and are at a first-class hotel.

SHORT SESSION LEGAL COM. LAST NIGHT

A session of the Legal and Reception Committee was held last night, when it was decided to get out some literature for the use of excursionists. Several legal claims were also dealt with.

Mrs. Murphy, Cricket place, fell in a hole in the plank walk Saturday night and dislocated her shoulder. She wanted remuneration from the city for the accident. The matter was laid over for further consideration.

More labor troubles have started at Kenosha, Wis., the 275 men of the Simmons Manufacturing Company having quit over a wage question.

LEASE CANCELLING

The policy of the Dominion Government has been, and presumably is, to let the speculator or non-developer hold power and other privileges and other natural opportunities at his mercy. It is not so with the Whitney Government, which will not allow the mere speculator to "hold up" the people. Leases everywhere of this character are being cancelled by the Whitney Government. Its motto apparently is that he who will not work, neither shall he eat, at any rate, at the people's expense. Some day the Laurier Government may catch up with the idea of fair treatment of "the people," and then it will inaugurate a similar sensible policy. It has dallied much too long in the embraces of the financiers and money-lenders, who all support it, to the manifest injury of those who have been compelled to do the borrowing. Now, let us have a little consideration shown to the public.

BOTH BY-LAWS CARRIED BY SPLENDID MAJORITIES

Ratepayers Express Their Approval of the Building of New Smith St. Bridge and for Street Extension —A Satisfactory Vote.

It is a matter of much satisfaction to the mayor and the members of the council that both bylaws were passed by convincing majorities yesterday. The voting was of a quiet nature, but nevertheless the citizens supported each bylaw in such a way that bespeaks for a greater Peterborough. The building of a new Smith street bridge is a necessity, and now that the ratepayers have expressed their opinion, it only remains for the Board of Works to make the bridge a reality, and by so doing work for the best interests of those who have entrusted the proposition to them.

The street extension and filling in bylaw received the greater majority, the figures being 150. Considerable credit is due those who have put forth their best efforts for the success of both bylaws.

The vote by sub-divisions was as follows:

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS HELD ENJOYABLE OUTING

The Knights of Pythias held their first annual excursion down the river yesterday afternoon to Gore's Landing per steamer Otonabee, and a very enjoyable time was spent. The afternoon was an ideal one for occasion, and the excursion was patronised by a large number of members and friends of the Order. The Ladies' Aid Society of Charlotte street Methodist church also enjoyed their outing at the same time. An orchestra furnished music and all on board spent a pleasant time together, although the number of ladies was largely in excess of that of the gentlemen. The excursionists enjoyed a stay of one hour and a half at Gore's Landing, and arrived back in the city at 9.30.

P. C. Newhall Received Painful Injuries Last Night While Arresting Wesley Howell—Case Remanded for One Week—Bail Granted.

Wesley Howell faced a serious charge at police court this morning when he was accused of assaulting P. C. Newhall last night and doing him bodily harm. When asked what he had to say to the charge, the defendant said he did not remember any of the circumstances of last night, and could not say whether he had assaulted the policeman or not. A charge of being drunk and disorderly was also preferred against Howell, but, as in the former charge, he could remember nothing.

It appears that the defendant was drinking last night and became disorderly, and when P. C. Newhall arrested him, and during the journey to the police station, Howell viciously kicked the officer, inflicting painful injuries.

The magistrate enlarged the case for one week and granted the defendant's request for bail on the understanding that good reliable security be given.

DELEGATES TO CONVENTION DELIGHTED WITH LAKES

The delegates to the Painters' and Decorators' Convention were most agreeably surprised by the beauties of the Kawartha Lakes, which they visited yesterday on their trip on the steamer Stoney Lake. The excursion party left the Wolfe street wharf yesterday morning, went over the lift lock and up the canal to Lakefield and through Clear and Stony Lakes as far as Burleigh Falls. The beauties of the lakes was a revelation to the visitors, and they speak in the highest praise of them.

On the return from the falls, the party, which numbered over 200, were guests of Mr. James Acton at his cottage on Stony Lake. A very choice luncheon was served by a number of young ladies and gentlemen, and afterwards a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Acton for their hospitality, on motion of Messrs. W. E. Wall of Boston, Mass., and W. Barrett of Hamilton.

A vote of thanks was also tendered the young ladies and gentlemen, on motion of Ald. Booth, London, and Mr. Chas. Reeve, Hamilton.

Happy responses were made by Messrs. Jas. Acton and Len Acton.

The party then embarked for the return trip to Peterborough, and on board the boat votes of thanks were tendered as follows:

On motion of Messrs. A. M. McKenzie of Hamilton and H. G. Hawkins, representative of Painter and Decorator to the local association of Master House Painters and Decorators:

To the captain and crew of the steamer, to Coleman Brothers, who looked after the catering so very thoroughly.

The delegates all left last night or this morning for their respective homes, and they will carry with them pleasant memories of Peterborough.

ENGLISH ENGINEERS WILL VISIT HERE IN AUGUST

Mayor Rush notified the Legal and Reception committee that he had received a couple of letters from Dr. J. A. Neal, stating that a number of eminent engineers from England were going to visit Peterborough on Monday, August 9, arriving by the 5.30 C.P.R. train. They will be here until Wednesday morning. It was requested that the Reception Committee take charge of the visitors and assist in entertaining them.

The visitors are members of the university of London engineers.

It was decided that the Mayor and chairman of the committee with any other member of the committee who could get away should represent the city.

WESLEY HOWELL MADE SNEAKY ESCAPE FROM CELL

Wesley Howell made a successful break for liberty from the police station shortly after 12 o'clock to-day. After his preliminary hearing this morning Howell was placed in the cells again until he could secure the necessary bail to allow him securing his freedom. The prisoners had been bothering the officers on duty all morning with requests that they telephone to different citizens with a view of getting security for his appearance at court next Friday. The officers did their best for the accused, but nobody could be found who would be willing to put up the necessary amount. Shortly after twelve o'clock P.C. McGinty, who was then on duty, was called by the prisoner, who asked that he be allowed to use the telephone, and to this the officer agreed and unlocked the cell door. Howell came to the telephone, closely watched by P.C. McGinty, and after a futile attempt to secure bail, started to walk back to his cell, but before he had reached there the police officer was called to the 'phone, and it was while he was in the act of answering the call that Howell sneaked back and ran out the door of the police station. P.C. McGinty, however, closely pursued him down Simcoe street. Howell went in the direction of the Quaker Oats Company's factory, and on arriving there, went into the building by way of the basement door, and by his movements outwitted his pursuer, and is by this time probably out of the city.

P.C. McGinty is naturally sore because of the escape, and the affair only demonstrates the fact that a little kindness shown to a certain class of people, meets with very poor returns.

WILL THE P.A.C. TEAM WIN FROM T.A.S. TO-MORROW

If the Baptists Win They Will be Tied With Abstainers For First Place—All Teams Will Have Strong Line-ups.

Everything is breaking nicely for the city league teams who will play at the Oval on Saturday afternoon. It was thought early in the week that several of the players of each nine would be out of the city, which would tell against their chances of winning, but such is not the case, and all four will be as strong, if not more so, than in any other of the past contests. Flaherty and Quinlan will be at work in their usual positions for the T.A.S., who play the P.A.C. in the initial contest at 2 o'clock. Should the latter win, they will be a tie with the Abstainers for first place, and the fans may expect another grand struggle such as was put up by the Straths and the T.A.S. when the former won out by two runs. The West Ends will have Carton on their line-up, and this will allow all players to perform at their usual positions, and who will no doubt give Bill Metheral's bunch a stiff argument in the second game. When the city league can turn out players who are wanted by outside teams who play before an attendance up in the thousands, surely this organization should be supported by the fans here.

THE ARTICLES THAT JEFFRIES HAS SIGNED FOR FIGHT

After decisively convincing myself that it is easily possible for me to defend my title as champion of the world, in as good a condition as ever before in my life, I am to-day posting my forfeit to meet the claimant of that title, Jack Johnson.

In reference to those who have been skeptical about my intentions of meeting Johnson, I wish to say that when first called from retirement I said that I would never agree to oppose anybody in the prize ring until I was convinced that I could regain my former physical condition. After being absolutely satisfied of same, I stated I would post my forfeit at the expiration of my theatrical contract. My theatrical contract having expired, I am posting my money, sincerely hoping that Johnson is as anxious for the match as he has made it appear, and that he will be as ready to live up to his public statements as I am.

CONDITIONS OF FORFEIT.

First—James J. Jeffries hereby posts with Robert Edgren the sum of five thousand dollars (5,000) as an evidence of good faith and a forfeit to bind the following—

Second—He agrees to defend his title as champion of the world against Jack Johnson in a boxing contest.

Third—Contest to be held before the club offering the largest purse and best situated to promote the contest.

Fourth—Duration of the contest to be anywhere from twenty to one hundred rounds.

Fifth—With the signing of final articles Jeffries will post an additional five thousand dollars (5,000), which Johnson must cover, and he must agree that the ten thousand (10,000) will operate as a side bet on the result of the contest.

Sixth—Final stakeholder, after signing the articles, to be some reputable sporting man, preferably John T. Clark, of San Francisco.

Seventh—Sam Berger, manager for James J. Jeffries, will remain in America and receive bids for the contest.

(Signed) JAMES J. JEFFRIES.
(Signed) SAM BERGER, Manager.

LINES ON SPORT

Tom Longboat has been appointed trainer for the Irish-Canadian Athletic Club, Toronto.

Jack Thoney of Boston, the former Toronto star, has a batting average of only .125. He has been out of the game most of the season with a broken leg.

The following is New Liskeard's account of the game with Haileybury: New Liskeard and Haileybury met in a scheduled game of baseball here yesterday. Hickey and Benson of Toronto were the Liskeard battery, while Flaherty and Cinnamon of Peterborough were the battery for Haileybury. After two men were out in the first, Montgomery attempted a steal home, which was successful through Benson's muff of Hickey's throw to batter, and two more runs followed. At the end of the seventh Haileybury led by 7 to 2, but Liskeard made a rally and won the game in the ninth by one run, with one man out, the score being 8 to 7. Both pitchers were hit freely, Flaherty only fanning two men, while Hickey put the sign on ten. Neither pitcher received the best of support, the local players being too anxious to play their best form.

Toronto won again yesterday from Baltimore, 6—0. Timely hitting and McGinley's fine twirling caused the downfall of the Orioles.

Crawford and Cobb are having a merry race for the leadership of the American League batting honors. Cobb has made 144 hits in ninety games, while Crawford has secured 112 in ninety-one games.

At Barrie yesterday the St. Marys of Toronto carried off Barrie's champion baseball pennant by a score of 4 to 1. Downs' work on the mound was the winning factor, he not allowing a run till the ninth. The teams were: St. Marys—Burns, Phylen, Nye, Crantler, Klengert, Hewer, O'Brien, Whylie, Downs. Barrie — Warren, Scott, Boyd, Meeking, Tyer, Todd, Banning, Rowe, Coffey.

Christy Matthewson has won 13 out of 18 games pitched this season, and leads the National League twirlers. Kroude is the American leader with 10 wins and two losses. Mullen has won 18 out of 21 games and Cy Young 15 out of 22.

J. Rockefort, a rancher, claims to have struck a gold-bearing vein 15 feet wide and 1,500 feet long at the junction of the Peace and Finlay Rivers, Alta.

Bro. Gilbert of the Christian Brothers at Viauville, Que., was found dangerously wounded in the head in a wood through which he and some associates had been walking. The whole affair is a mystery.

Know the Difference.

Little Bertha, aged eight, had come to the city to live with her grandmother for a few months and attend school, as the schoolhouse in the country place where her parents lived was too far away for her to walk.

On her first day at the city school the teacher, having ascertained her name and the fact that she was living with her grandmother, Mrs. Brown, inquired further:

"Well, Bertha, where is your grandmother's home?"

"Home?" responded the little miss, with cheerful promptness. "She ain't got any home. She lives in a flat!"—Woman's Home Companion.

His Happiest Days.

"Ah, my good man," said the millionaire, addressing the horny handed son of toil, "I envy you. I never have been as happy as I was when I had to carry a dinner pail."

"What wages were you gettin' then?"

"Wages! I wasn't getting any wages. My father had put me to work for the purpose of learning the business from the bottom up, and I was getting the experience I needed to fit me for the important position to which I was promoted two months later."—Chicago Record-Herald.

When the Exposition Opens.

Tjarks—I wonder if the girl graduates this June will get off the old chestnut about "Beyond the Alps Lies Italy?"

Bjenks—I hope not. If they wish to be up to date they should recite something headed, "Beyond the Cascades Lies Seattle." — St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

RESULT OF MILK TESTS FOR MONTH OF JULY

The Tests Are Exceedingly Satisfactory — Local Milk Totally Without Impurities.

Below are given the results of the results of the milk tests for the month of July. Each month samples of milk are taken from the cans of the various milk dealers and are sent to the provincial laboratories at Toronto, where they are subject to a rigid analysis.

The analysis as received for this month are very satisfactory, there being no impurities whatever in any of the samples forwarded to the department.

The following is the list with the various percentages of butter-fat in samples given—

QUEEN ROSA AND FATHER AGAIN VISITING THE CITY

The gypsy queen, Rosa, and her father, Michael George, seem to have a soft spot in their hearts for this city, for they are here again to-day, making the third time in about three weeks. This afternoon they spent in consultation with their lawyer, Mr. F. D. Kerr, with regards to obtaining witnesses to give evidence in the courts of Ottawa and Hull.

The couple appear exactly the same as they did when here three weeks ago, except for the fact that Michael has become a little more sporty in the interval. However, there is one thing certain and that is that he has lost none of that love for color which he displayed so often while here before. This morning he and the beautiful Rosa went the rounds of the different shoe stores prior to investing in a couple of pairs of patent leather oxfords. Michael, the better to show off the new purchase, later on acquired a brilliant pair of new socks, and this afternoon he could be seen strolling around the streets in true college style.

Neither of the pair have very much good to say of either Ottawa or Hull, both proclaiming that the police and people of those cities have used them outrageously. They state that as soon as they have finished with the court cases in Ottawa they intend returning to Mexico and go on a prospecting tour for more gold mines.

TO AMALGAMATE ALL CEMENT COMPANIES IN THE DOMINION

Montreal, July 29.—Arrangements have been made and completed for the amalgamation into one company of all the cement companies in the Dominion. The new company will include all the principal cement manufacturing companies in Canada, and the consolidated company, which will be known as the Canadian Consolidated Cement Company, which will have a capitalization of $25,000,000. In the list is included the Lakefield Portland Cement Co. Application has been made to Ottawa for a charter for the company, and the underwriting arrangements are pretty near completion, some of the strongest men in the country being among the underwriters.

The organization and underwriting arrangements are in charge of Mr. Rodolphe Forget, M.P. It has not yet been decided whether a public issue will be made or whether it will be retained by the underwriters and their friends, but these are details which will be decided upon later. The consolidated company will take over the principal cement plants in the Dominion, representing about two-thirds of the total output of the existing mills. In all some seven or eight mills will be included in the merger, including the plant of the International Portland Cement Company, which has been such a great success, and the founder and managing director of which, Mr. J. S. Irwin, has been the moving spirit in bringing about the merger. Amongst some of the leading men who are interested in the merger are Sir Sandford Fleming, K.C.M.G.; Mr. Rodolphe Forget, M.P.; Senator W. C. Edwards, of Ottawa; Mr. C. H. Cahan, and Mr. W. M. Aiken, and others.

IMPORTANT TO FARMERS

By establishing the degree of Bachelor of Agricultural Science, McGill University has given scholastic recognition to the oldest of all sciences. Agriculture is the basis of everything on which human and animal existence depends. Everyone who cultivates the ground has a smattering of the science gained by experience and almost wholly empirical. Ignorance, however, of the fundamental principles of agriculture has prevailed in the past in Canada and the United States, where virgin fields have been cropped to sterility for producing grain. As a consequence the grain growing area has passed by regular gradation from the east to the middle, then to the western states, and has now moved on to the Canadian northwestern provinces. In Canada the same process is continued in this province the fields that formerly produced grain are now devoted to the growing of hay. In some of the neighboring states the deterioration of the soil is still more marked. In Virginia the latter part of the eastern section of the state, once a veritable garden producing corn, cotton and tobacco in luxuriant abundance is now desolate from exhaustion. The state of New York has many abandoned farms from the same cause. Similar conditions exist throughout the New England States and are not unknown in this province. Farmers have died off, or gone west. Their sons and daughters have gone to the manufacturing centres. Failing crops, the attractions of city life, ignorance of the value of land and of how to restore its fertility were chief among the causes for this decline of agriculture. According to Mr. J. J. Hill, the same process is going on in the west even to the limit of the grain bearing region, once described as illimitable.

There is no doubt a reason for this. High farming has always had to compete with the virgin soil of the west, and those who might have had the enterprise to improve eastern lands have found it more profitable to move to the west and repeat the process of exhaustion. That form of destructive competition is, however, in sight of its limits. The time must come when there will be a recoil from the westward movement, though it will be delayed until the Canadian farthest west is occupied. Already the abandoned farms in the east are being taken up and there is an increasing demand for scientific agricultural education. Provinces and states have responded. Agricultural colleges have been established and every year the number of students attending them has largely increased. Now McGill University has completed this educational system by placing agriculture among the sciences in which a degree is obtainable. Among the public benefactions Sir William Macdonald has bestowed none are more important or better calculated to aid in the progress of the country than the Agricultural College at Ste. Anne's. It has enabled McGill to establish the degree of B.A.S., and its success proves the need it now supplies. In England, but more particularly in France, may be seen the results of scientific and intelligent farming. In these countries fields cultivated for centuries are more fruitful now than ever before. The same result can be obtained on this continent by educating the farming class in the science of agriculture. In a few years land will be as valuable in the neighborhood of Canadian cities as the fields near French and English towns now are, and intensive cultivation will offer as high returns as any other industry. It will ere long be a highly profitable investment of capital to buy up the exhausted lands of this province and bring them by free expenditure into high tilth, making them three or four fold as productive as they are now.—Witness.

THAT CHEERING SOUND.

The farmer loves to hear the crow
Of the cock at break of day,
While others hanker for the clang
Of the breakfast bell, they say,
But sweeter far to me's the sound
As I sit in the old ball lot
Of the willow's zing 'gainst the old horsehide
That announces the base hit swat—
Aye, the good old base hit swat.

The popping cork is music sweet
To many a listening ear,
Though some prefer the auto's horn
With it's "honk, honk!" loud and clear,
But soothing after my toilsome day,
When troubles should be forgot,
Is the bat's sharp crack as it stings the ball
That proclaims the base hit swat—
Yes, the fine old base hit swat.

Farmer—Two years.

Townite—How can you tell?

Farmer—By its horns.

Townite—How stupid I am! Of course it has two horns.

Mauritius.

Although a small dot in the Indian ocean, Mauritius has between seventy-five and a hundred automobiles, mostly French and English makes, there being but one American machine on the island. The roads of Mauritius are almost equal to the best metropolitan boulevards, and it may be called the autoist's paradise, for there is neither state nor town law in regard to speed limit.

THRILLING LIVES

THE LOG DRIVER

BY WILLIAM ALLEN JOHNSTON.

(Copyright, 1909, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.)

ON the high banks of the River Kippeway, near where it enters the Ottawa, there's a cemetery with some two hundred unmarked graves. It is a lonesome spot, far away from any settlement: in summer the deer browse there; no human ever visits it save now and then a travel weary woman, who kneels at one tiny mound, says a prayer, crosses her breast and walks away with bowed head.

Within earshot there's a mighty roar, swelling in tumult with the spring freshets, but unceasing ever. The trees, overhanging the precipitous banks, are always wet with spray and the mist clouds rise high in the air and throw a veil over the treacherous, terrific rapids beneath.

Just where the roar is most deafening and the spray dances highest is a great whirlpool, swirling with such rapidity that it bowls deep down in the centre and has a white crested rim of large diameter. There is a weird fascination about the swirling, sucking monster; it holds the eye and makes you forget all else; it is known, feared and hated by every "logger" from the Saguenay to the broad Ottawa. The Indians call it the "pot that has no bottom," for men and boats have gone straight down in its mysterious depths—down, down, and never reappeared. The "loggers" give dark looks at the very mention of it and shake their heads, for this is the feeder of the little cemetery with the unmarked graves high up on the bank.

I was told all about it one night by Chartrand, 'Poleon Whessel and Eli (called Helle) Rogers, guides for the time being, but survivors of many a long, hard "drive" since the "beeg pine she was cut," twenty-odd years ago.

The winding, rushing Kippeway runs back from the Ottawa two hundred and sixty miles to Lake Kippeway. Considerable cutting is done there today, but in the "beeg pine" days there were fully thirty "shautiers" (from which we get our word shanty), lumber camps, each with its gang of over one hundred men.

Music of the Axe.

Early in the autumn great supplies of flour, pork and beans are carted in over the rough corduroy roads and "purty soon" the forest is resounding far and near with the "chop, chop" of the double bladed axes.

W'en de fall and de winter come roun' us
An' bird of de summer is all fly away,
W'en mebbe she's snowin' an nort' wind is blowin',
An' night is mos' t'ree time as long as day.

The winter is long and the work is hard; but the life is wild, free, joyous. "An' we make some fun also," added Chartrand. "Chris'mas half da gang he go home, mebbe far away, on da racquette, wat you call snowshoe. Den, on New Year, da odder half he go. An' day make lots a' fun. Dance? Oh, sure, an' w'iskey blanc, too.

"Some nights, in shantee, we have fiddle and 'cordeon. Da beeg fire, she roar like she bus' da stove, and we sing da fine song.

"What we sing? Oh, da young fellers he sing 'bout leetle girl down on portage and how he made plaintee monee for her and come back in da spring. Den he say he wand big kiss—one, two, t'ree. Ho! Ho! Ah, oui! He goin' to buy young colt, he sing, w'ad is very quick on da leg, an' he take his girl ridin' and beat every feller in whole dam countree. Ho! Ho!

"Some fellers w'ad has got famme—w'ad you call wife—dey ain't sing moche. But dey listen an' laugh, cos dey t'ink of time w'en dey, too, spark da girl."

When spring comes and the soft south wind blows "an' de sun is warm bees face" the activities of each camp are doubled. Often the men work day and night. Wherever the banks and mountain sides are steep enough the logs are skidded down over the snow. If there is no skidway sleighs bring them in to the water's edge, often carrying ten to fifteen big logs to each load.

These are the "hurrah" days. Then men are laughing, singing, hallooing, joyous with the thought of the little whitewashed cabin at the end of the long drive, and father, mother, sweetheart, wife—all waiting at the door with merry "Bi jous!" and hearty hugs and kisses.

The air is filled with the clamor of axe blows as the last trees are hastily felled, with the boom and crash of the skidding logs, with the gathering roar of the swelling river and the hoarse cries of teamsters and bosses.

Swiftly the turbulent river gathers its vast burden of bobbing logs. Each camp on the Kippeway, in the old big timber days, furnished fully fifty thousand logs to the quota. So that, altogether, when the long bateaus were manned and ready and the holding booms were swung clear, at least one and a half million logs, some of them mighty ones measuring five feet clear across the butts, were ready for the big, bounding drive to the Ottawa.

Picking the Best Men.

Now the best men are picked—men of bigness and brawn, men sure of eye and quick of foot. Their axes give way to peeveys, or spike poles, trousers are cut off at the knees and the shoe packs of the forest are replaced with stout boots, the soles of which are studded with sharp spikes, about half an inch long.

A long, hard, treacherous drive lies before them. There are few miles of its course where the peeveys are not brought into quick, sharp play, and where danger is not constant and hovering within elbow length. Hidden rocks suck the logs down on end and the rearing, rigid butts make in a twinkling the centre of a jam, the wings of which run from shore to shore. That key log must be reached quickly and loosened somehow. Stout arms and logcraft will do it, but what then?

As the key log swoops down and lunges forward with the current's mighty pressure the men are caught in the centre of a little sea of danger. A dozen tangles of logs twist and turn about them. Each one of them is a sudden, uncertain menace; every log is a stick of danger; the water boils white and sucks at their legs. Somehow, some way, they must reach shore, but it's quick, desperate work. Time is measured by hairbreadths; knees must be ready for instant springs; eyes must watch the water line along every log; hands and feet must sense the thrill of its yielding. Everywhere a false step means death.

The perilous days flash by, and strange to say without mishap. There have been few deaths along the Kippeway till the great whirlpool is reached—the "Devil's Pot," the feeder of the cemetery of two hundred graves.

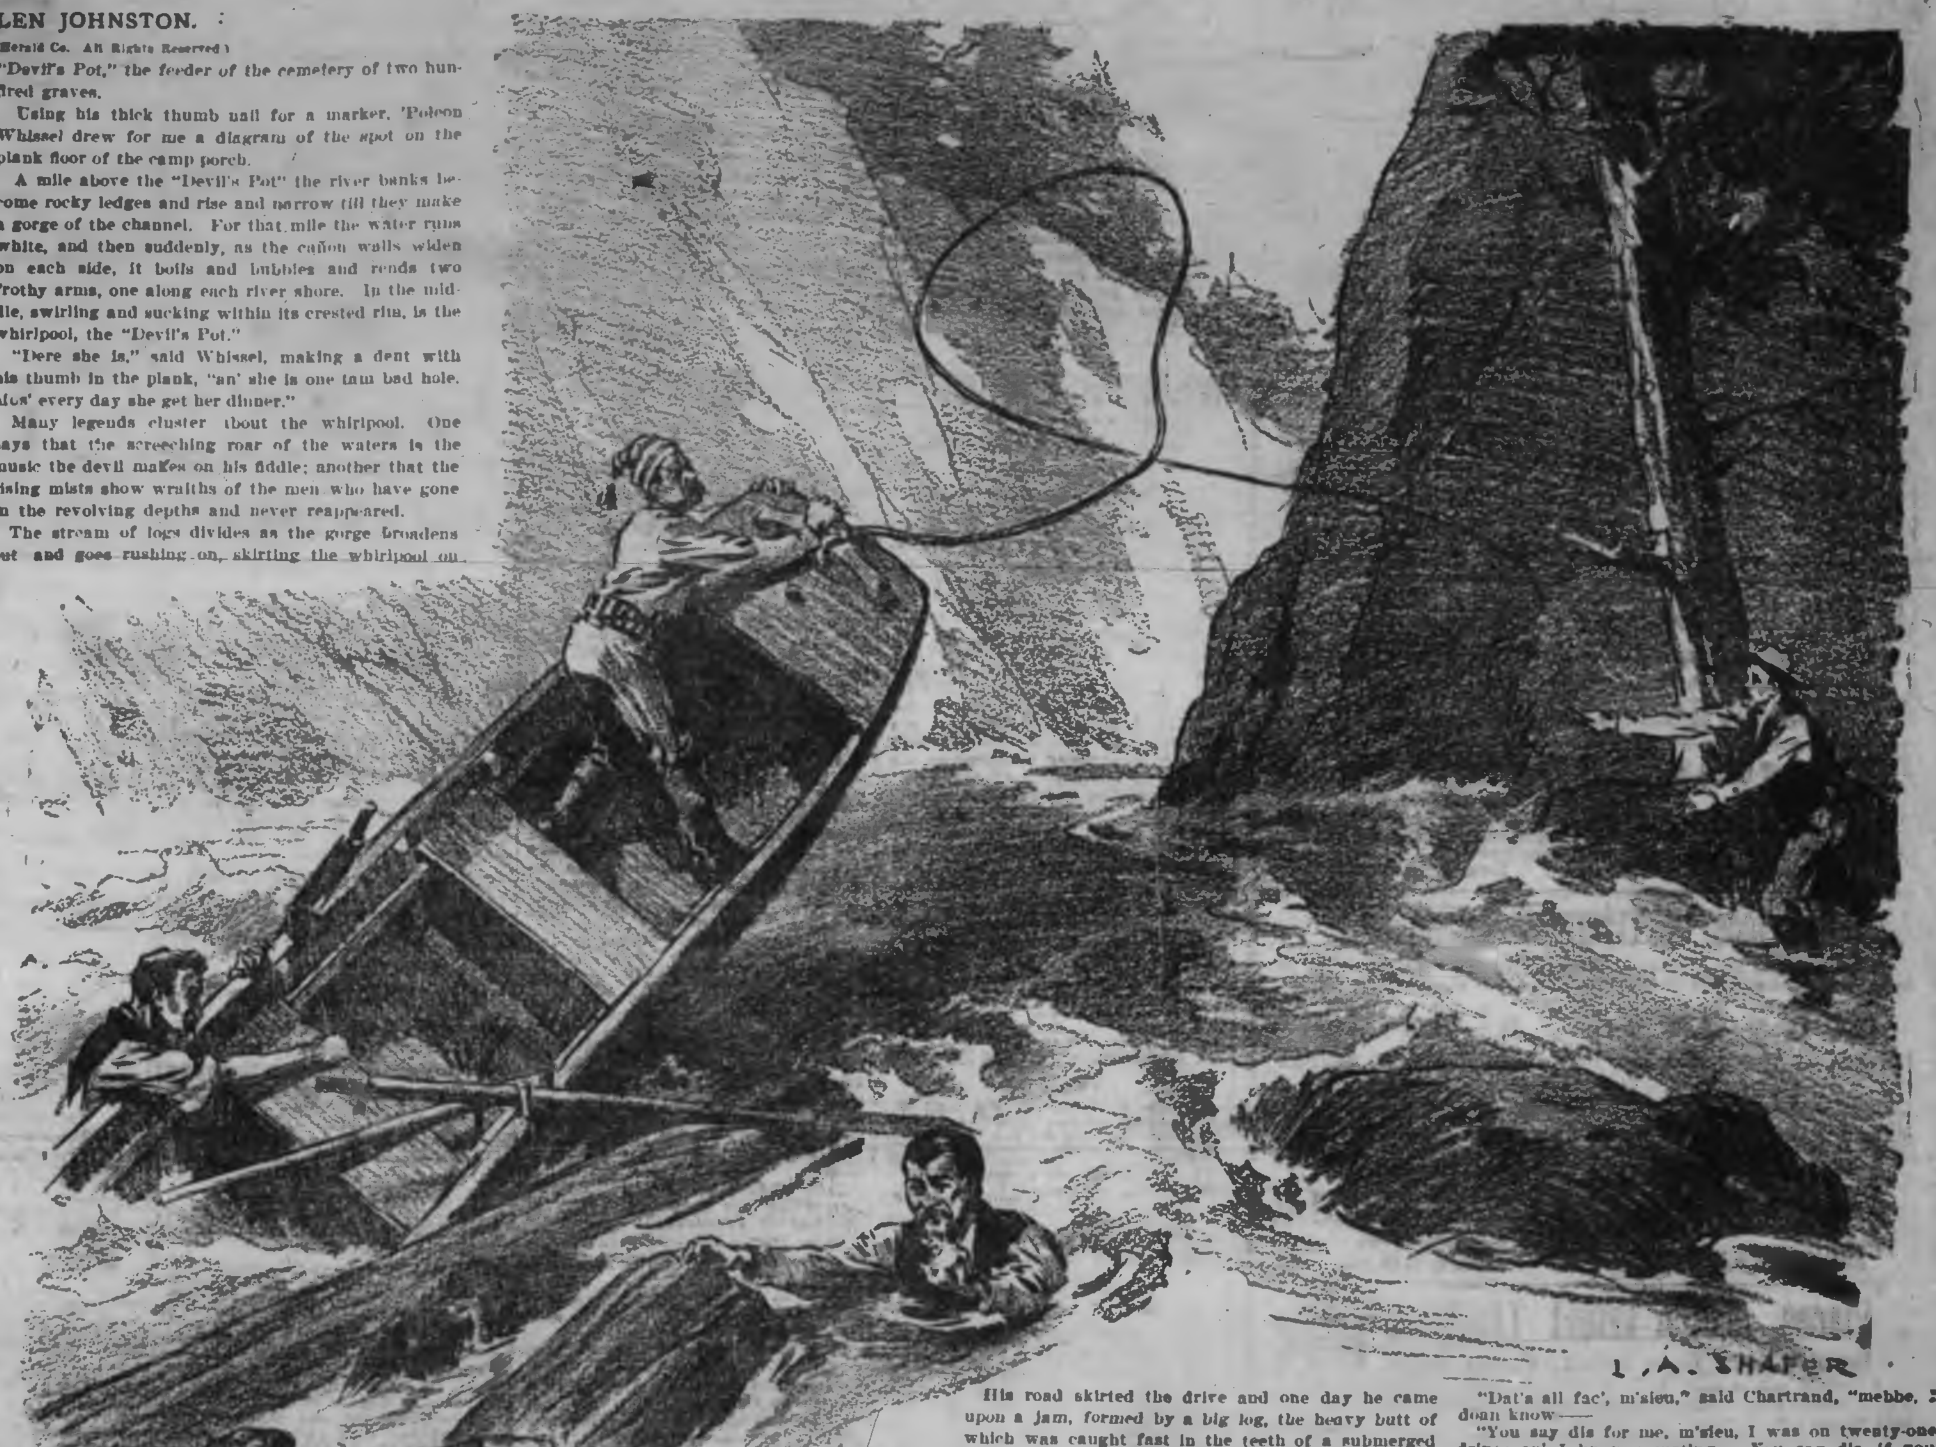
Using his thick thumb nail for a marker, 'Poleon Whissel drew for me a diagram of the spot on the plank floor of the camp porch.

A mile above the "Devil's Pot" the river banks become rocky ledges and rise and narrow till they make a gorge of the channel. For that mile the water runs white, and then suddenly, as the cañon walls widen on each side, it boils and bubbles and rends two frothy arms, one along each river shore. In the middle, swirling and sucking within its crested rim, is the whirlpool, the "Devil's Pot."

"Dere she is," said Whissel, making a dent with his thumb in the plank, "an' she is one tam bad hole. Mos' every day she get her dinner."

Many legends cluster about the whirlpool. One says that the screeching roar of the waters is the music the devil makes on his fiddle; another that the rising mists show wraiths of the men who have gone in the revolving depths and never reappeared.

The stream of logs divides as the gorge broadens out and goes rushing on, skirting the whirlpool on each side. Those along the inner edge are caught in the suction, drawn down and cast up again some distance out in the turbulent flood. Many remain in the pool, tossing, disappearing or racing madly in continuous circles around the rim of the maelstrom. After the drive has gone on some two or three thousand logs are left behind and must be spiked and drawn out of the monster's clutches.



"I SEE DAT BATEAU STAND STRAIGHT UP IN DA AIR."

That work requires a boat, and a boat in such a place means danger. If it should be caught between the curling waters and the shining black bowlders of the shore it would be splintered in an instant. If it gets too near the rim of that terrific whirlpool, then——

"One day," said Whissel, pounding the floor with his heavy fist, "she get one—two—t'ree—yes, twelve men—and one is my brudder, my brudder Hypolite. M'sieu, dat is bac' day for me.

"Me, I am lef' on shore, to hold rope of bateau. In bateau is men, an' my brudder, too. Dey go out to spike logs off dat whirlpool. Me, I am hold of rope.

Why He Was Fearful.

"I am 'fraid, cos da wind she blow like anyting. Suppose she blow da bateau in da whirlpool. Mebbe. I am 'fraid, and I yell:—'Look out dat wind! She blow you in.'

"'O, ho!' dey say. 'I guess not. Da debil, she not get dinner off us, ba gosh.'

"Dey go like dis, M'sieu, 'long shore and roun' beeg rock. Alright, but w'en dey get roun' beeg rock da wind she get bateau on side. Pouf! She blow like sacrédam!

"Dey pull fast on oars, an' me, I pull on rope. I pull so hard I can not see. I look black in da eyes. I yell like crazy man, 'cause I know da whirlpool she got dat bateau.

"Zip! Dat rope she make one beeg slip. Just so quick she burn my hands and t'row me into water. W'en I look up I see, w'at you t'ink, M'sieu? I see dat bateau stand straight up in da air. Straight up she stand—just so, M'sieu—straight up; and den, down she go!

"'Da go my brudder, my Hypolite,' I say. 'He never come back now.' Me, I am crack. I hide da head and cry like bébé." Whissel's deep set eyes narrowed and the fine furrows about them doubled in number; then with a shrug of resignation he settled back and locked his big hands over his knees. "Wall, she got beeg dinner dat day. Twelve men she ged an' my brudder Hypolite. Ah, well!" Another shrug from Whissel, then sympathetic ones from Chartrand and Hélie, and then silence. "She dam bad hole, alright," said Chartrand, cheerfully.

"I never see her," said Helie, "but I know dat whirlpool on River Big Rouge. One day she 'mos' ged me. Suppose you like to hear dat slip?

"Ah, well! it is nod moche to spik 'bout. In da rapids I fall off beeg log, and I have to ride her. In one minute I am in da whirlpool. Da rapids in Beeg Rouge she run lik everyt'ing.

"Wall, I tink I am gone onder, sure, dis tam. I make beeg jump. No good. I make beeg jump. No good. Den w'at you tink I see, m'sieu? Wall, funny t'ing. I see beeg cheval blanc, beeg white horse. She is dead, drowned, an' she go roun' an' roun' in da whirlpool.

"'Ha! ha!' I say. Now I get good jomp. Mebbe two good jomps. Yaro. Mebbe I get out da whirlpool.

"So I jomp, m'sieu. One beeg jomp. Hooraw! I hit da horse. Den I jomp. Hooraw! I hit da log—one w'at is goin' away, you see, m'sieu, to da shore. I get out dat whirlpool, alright. Yaro, by Gar."

"Oh, ho!" laughed Chartrand, and then he chuckled shrewdly. "You not spik 'bout dat white horse, how she get dere—an' 'bout Perouix, too."

Helie's big shoulders gave a deprecating shrug and his eyes a warning look, but Chartrand told the story, chuckling meanwhile, as though it were a joke on Helle.

There was a youngster in the gang that year, one Phileas Perouix, a wild, boastful lad, who aspired to deeds of valor that he might tell of them in his home tavern when the drive was finished. He took it ill when he was counted out of the drive gang and was assigned by the "boss" to drive home one of the teams.

His road skirted the drive and one day he came upon a jam, formed by a big log, the heavy butt of which was caught fast in the teeth of a submerged rock. The stoutest drivers could not dislodge it and they were working on tangles just above the jam in hopes that the loosened logs might break the lower wedge.

This was Perouix's opportunity. He slyly unhooked a horse, mounted it, threw a noose over the key log and lashed his mount with a birch branch. Suddenly the big log gave way and before Perouix could cut his rope he was dragged, horse and all, into the deadly log rolling current.

Desperate Attempt at Rescue.

It was the sober, simple Helle who heard his cry and raced down the logs in a daring, desperate attempt at rescue. It was Helle who cut the rope with one hand and grabbed at the head of Perouix with the other as it came up through the seething waters. He caught the boy and with a mighty effort swung him over and into the outstretched arms of Chartrand, but the effort cost him his own foothold and he went racing down a half mile of white water, riding a log that at times reared straight up in the air and dived and plunged like a thing possessed.

Chartrand says that after Helle jumped clear of the whirlpool and reached the shore he fell helpless upon the ground and was unable to walk for days. One wrist was broken, too. But Helle merely said:—"That Perouix was one young fool. He was crack."

As the moon rose over the Laurentides and spread its mystic glamour over the silent mountains and the silvery waters of the lake voices were lowered and the stories of the drive were merged with legends of days gone by.

They are big, fine, simple hearted fellows, these drivers, ready to laugh and romp like children or do a man's brave work as the occasion demands, but sometimes the wild, primal life of the forest makes lawless savages of them, "canayeu errand," as the vernacular goes.

Just before I left the woods the train from Papineaville ran over a driver. On backing up the train hands discovered that his body was cold, and then they found it riddled with bullets. Later it was ascertained that he had come in from the "bush" the day before with five companion "loggers" and had been slain at a rendezvous that night and his body placed upon the railroad track.

In the old days, the "beeg real" days on the Grand Rivière du Nord, the Saskatchewan and the Hudson Bay country the men who did murder were supposed to have sold their souls to the devil. The compact was believed to exist. The errant ones themselves boasted of it.

In Montreal there is a celebrated painting by Reelé of the "Chasse Gallerie," or flying canoe. It shows Satan's hand reaching down from the skies and holding a long canoe in which several men of the woods are sweeping the air with their paddles.

The legend of the "Chasse Gallerie" still holds in the present day "bush." On dark, wild nights, "w'en de beeg snow comes down," you can see this canoe, Chartrand avers, sweeping through the air. It carries the outlaws, of bygone camps and they sing rollicking songs, and mock at you and invite you to come up with them and drink "w'iskey blanc."

"You must not go," said Chartrand earnestly, "and when you are in camp and you feel 'de debil' after you you must take two knives and run fast along the road, slashing right and left. If you come upon a 'turkey track' (where the road branches out in three directions) that is the devil's hand and you must slash fast and furiously, else he will grip you.

"Dat's all fac', m'sieu," said Chartrand, "mebbe, I doan know——

"You say dis for me, m'sieu, I was on twenty-one drives an' I know someting. You say dis, if you doan drink dat w'iskey blanc you doan get in Chasse Gallerie. Mebbe you doan see her, too. Ho! Ho!"

WHAT IS CUTCH?

"THE other day down there at Washington, where the Solons are wrestling with the tariff," remarked a man who wrestles with it in the cost of living, "somebody mentioned 'cutch' as an item that should have its share of the expenses to pay.

"Maybe it would have got by unnoticed as other items have, but the word had a funny sound and the newspaper squibbers took hold of it and began to cutch from one end of the press works to the other till everybody had heard of cutch, though most of them didn't know what it was. Neither did I, and thinking it might be something to eat and I might get it cheaper than other breakfast foods I was paying tariff on, I looked it up. It belonged to the vegetable kingdom all right, but it was not an edible.

"It is made from the bark of mangrove trees growing in Borneo and in India and is used in tanning leather, also for dyeing textile fabrics black or brown. The bark is subjected to treatment which extracts the tannin in the form of cutch, a hard, brittle brown substance with a shining surface like anthracite coal or lignite. In India the whole tree is chopped into bits and boiled down into a sort of cutch tar. After this has cooled in moulds it is made into hard balls, wrapped in leaves and shipped.

"In Borneo the wood of the tree is saved for fuel, much of it being shipped to Hong Kong and used in steam making, it having about sixty-five per cent of the heating properties of Welsh coal. There are thousands of acres of mangrove swamps in North Borneo, and when our oak and hemlock are gone we will begin to know a good deal more about cutch than we do now.

"At least we will know that it is not a breakfast food and we will also know that it will stay on the tariff list as long as there is any cutch competition in this glorious land of freedom."

SUCCESS.

By Vernon Cassard.

THE poor little chorus girl, Annie McPhee,
Sat down on the edge of a scenery sea
And cried 'cause the King, with a line in act three,
Was attentive to some other lady.
Now, the rival of Annie was Countess DeBray,
To whom the King's line was addressed in the play,
And whose answer, "My lord, it shall be as you say,"
Was the source of her income on payday.

One evening when Annie was jealously green
She rushed on the stage in this peaceable scene
And roasted DeBray like a tragedy queen
Till the manager's anger was funny.
The audience thought it was part of the show
And it was such a hit that the first thing you know
Young Annie was starring and became "all the go,"
And her life from that time has been sunny.

Her show is the biggest that's gone out in years,
And there in the chorus each evening appears
The King with the Countess, both carrying spears—
Theatrical changes are funny.
This tale has a moral, I'm sorry to say,
Get next to the "dead ones" as well as the gay,
For any old dub may be starring some day,
And you may be needing the money.

HOTEL AT LAKEFIELD CLOSES ITS DOORS

The A. G. Lawless Hotel Closes its Doors on Account of Lack of Patronage.

The A. G. Lawless hotel at Lakefield has closed its doors and is now a thing of the past for this season at least. Last night word was given to the boarders that they would have to seek other quarters, and this morning the servants and those employed at the hotel were informed that their services would be no longer required. Mr. Lawless gives no reason for his shutting up of the house other than that business has been bad, and the hotel has not been proving a paying investment.

A large fence ahs been placed around the hotel yards, making the closing of the hotel even more noticeable. The fence takes in the board walk running from the station to the wharf, and those going up the lakes will now have to take a longer route in getting to the steam boats.

6 SERGEANTS GUN LAYERS AND OFFICERS FOR PETAWAWA

Six sergeants, eight gun-layers and the officers of the 24th Battery will go to Petawawa for the firing competition to be held there. The trip from Peterborough will take four days, a day going and returning and two days shooting. The shooting will probably take place on August 16 and 17. The firing will be at different ranges and at moveable targets.

The gun-layers may go a week previous if they wish to, and those desirous of doing so should notify Major Young at once.

SAW MILL TO BE REBUILT WILL GET WATER CONNECTION

As a result of last night's meeting of the council, the Peterborough Lumber Co. will erect another sawmill to take the place of the one recently destroyed by fire. The council decided to give the company water connection, not to the extent asked, but such as will be of good service in case of another fire. The building of the new mill will be proceeded with at once, and a number of men commenced preparatory operations to-day. The new structure will be similar to the one destroyed, and it is expected that the machinery will be in operation again in two months' time.

CHINAMAN WAS POORLY PAID

Young Man Refused to Settle for Meal Bill and Made Trouble for C. Q. Woo

C. Q. Woo, proprietor of the Canadian Chinese Cafe at the corner of King and George streets, was called upon to suffer more abuse yesterday afternoon. Several young men entered his cafe and asked to be served with a meal, and this was furnished. After finishing the meal the bill was presented, but the young men refused to settle and commenced to mix things up. Woo received a couple of blows from the fist of one of the rowdies which ruffled his feelings to such an extent that the police were called, but on their arrival the young men had skipped. A large number of people were attracted to the scene and viewed the engagement from outside points.

WEST PETERBORO' ELECTION PROTEST

(The Globe.)

Mr. Justice Magee has reserved judgment on the motion on behalf of J. R. Stratton, M.P. for West Peterborough, to commit John Hampden Burnham, petitioner against his election, for refusal to answer certain questions on examination. Mr. Stratton wanted to know the names of the detectives employed by Mr. Burnham to discover the alleged corrupt acts of the respondent, also to be furnished with copies of the reports made by these detectives, and to know how much Mr. Burnham was paying them. Mr. Burnham objected to answer these questions on the grounds of absolute privilege against divulging the names of witnesses, that the reports of the detectives had been prepared under instruction of counsel, and claiming that the Dominion Act requiring the publication of election expenses does not apply to controverted elections.

Early Americans.

So many popular descriptions and pictures of the mighty dinosauria ("terror lizards") which abounded in western America in prehistoric times have lately been published that much curiosity is felt as to their probable manner of life. Dr. O. P. Hay contends that these animals, and particularly the species named diplodocus, did not walk and much less raise themselves on their hind legs on land. Their great weight, about twenty tons, seems to him to preclude that idea. He believes they were more like crocodiles in their habits, swimming easily and feeding largely on water plants, many of which they reached by means of their long necks. The diplodocus has relatively very weak teeth.—Youth's Companion.

Poison Label in Russia.

Since the Russian government enacted the law requiring the poison label to be attached to all containers of vodka, a strong alcoholic beverage, numerous cases of accidental poisoning have been reported from various parts of the empire. There is a large population of illiterates in Russia, and with them the poison label appearing on vodka bottles has come to stand for vodka. As a result many bottles of really poisonous mixtures are being drunk by these people under the impression that any bottle bearing the poison label contains vodka.—Spatula.

Big Crop In Western U. S.

New York, July 30.—W. C. Brown, president of the New York Central lines, has received advices from railroad men throughout the west, but particularly Nebraska and Missouri, which, he said yesterday, lead him to believe that the yield of the principal crops would be better than the Government estimates. He said that he had information that wheat in Nebraska was thrashing out 27 bushels more than the average for the state last year, and added:

"Personally, I believe that the corn crop will reach 3,250,000,000 bushels.

TRAVELLER MAKES MILD COMPLAINT

"In every town I go to," said a commercial man to the Review this morning," I find that the operators at the central office of the telephone companies don't speak distinctly. For instance when a man calls 377, all he hears in reply is 77. It seems to me that in almost every case the first number is dropped, thus causing unnecessary delay, and not infrequently, confusion.

"It is only a small matter, perhaps," he concluded, "but you might jot it down."

THE OUTLOOK IS BRIGHTER - HOPE TO RESTORE PEACE

Large Bodies of Troops Are Being Rushed to Barcelona, However—Great Slaughter Unofficially Reported —Carlists Are Feared.

Madrid, July 31.—The Government's report from Catalonia indicates that the situation continues to improve.

Both King Alfonso and Premier Maura seem satisfied that the worst is over, that the rebellion in Barcelona has been quelled, and that order soon will be restored in the remainder of the captaincy-general.

Nevertheless, to be on the safe side, large bodies of troops of all arms continue to be hurried to the scene.

No figures, not even estimates, of the loss of property and life in Catalonia is vouchsafed by the authorities, but private despatches leaking out through the frontier indicate that there has been a greater slaughter at Barcelona. Reports continue to filter in of the destruction of property, especially churches, monasteries and convents, against which the fury of the mob was centered.

The only other regions creating particular anxiety are the Biscayan provinces. There is some apprehension that the followers of Don Jaime, the pretender, may attempt to raise the white flag of the Carlists.

Bodies Mutilated.

Melilla, July 31.—The Moors have withdrawn from the outskirts of the city. It is believed they are concentrating for a new effort. They burned hundreds of their dead whom they were unable to carry off.

The ground was covered with heaps of corpses. The bodies had been stripped of their arms and many of them mutilated after death.

Moors Forces Augmented.

Ceuta, Morocco, July 31.—The natives in the region surrounding this seaport are preparing to join their fighting brethren on the heights before Melilla. A holy war is being preached from Ceuta to Moulmuga, and the whole country is aflame with fanaticism. The position of the Moors on Mount Moulmuga, where 30,000 warriors are congregated is considered here to be impregnable.

King Edward Not Acting.

London, July 31.—The Associated Press is officially authorized to state that there is not a word of truth in the rumor that King Edward is asking France and Germany to intervene in Spain, nor in another rumor to the effect that it has been suggested that a mixed force of French, British and German troops should be sent to co-operate with the Spaniards at Morocco.

Christians vs. Moors.

Paris, July 31.—The news of the terrible defeat inflicted on the Spanish forces by Moors at Melilla and the confirmation of the extent of the insurrection in Spain causes apprehension here. The triumph of the Moors in the Riff country perhaps will inflame all Islam and lead to an uprising in Algeria and the Soudan. Some of the Paris newspapers therefore boldly suggest that in the interest of duty Europe should come to the rescue.

The Eclair says it is impossible for Europe to bow before the insolence of the triumphant Moors and that Christian civilization cannot afford to allow Spain to be beaten.

THREW MONEY INTO THE STOVE

Kingston, July 31.—Sidney Keech, station agent on the Bay of Quinte Railway, was before Magistrates Bowlby and Davis at Tweed, charged by the Dominion Express Co. with wrongfully converting the company's money to his private use. The amount is about $225.

The defendant declared that he had for safekeeping two parcels of money in envelopes in the waste paper basket and next morning his wife emptied the contents of the basket into the kitchen stove and started a fire. He was committed to jail for trial.

ABOLISH THE TOLL GATES

Cobourg, July 31.—At a meeting of about twenty representatives of the municipalities of Hamilton, Haldimand and Hope Townships and the town of Cobourg the question of applying for special legislation to render the renewal of the toll gates more feasible on roads east and west of Cobourg and on the Baltimore toll road was discussed.

A committee was appointed to negotiate with the companies owning the roads and also to seek any necessary legislation.

Barn Struck.

Brantford, July 31.—Lightning on Thursday night destroyed the barn, drive-shed and cattle pens of Herbert Hamilton, who resides on the River road near this city. One calf, all the buildings, some implements and forty loads of hay were burned. The horses and cattle were saved. The loss is fifteen hundred dollars.

PROBABILITIES.

Sunday, light winds, warm, with thunderstorms in many localities.

CURED AT THE SHRINE

Miraculous Case is Reported from Ste. Anne de Beaupre.

Quebec, July 31.—A little, weazened, decrepit, old beggar made his way up through the immense crowd which daily surge around the shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre, in a little wooden box mounted on two rollers propelled by two short sticks. The crowd gave way before the man and his friends, who were intent on having the crippled man touched with the sacred relics.

In the chapel of Ste. Anne de Beaupre repose what all true Catholics believe to be parts of the body of Ste. Anne. Upon being touched with these relics they believe that a cure may be affected.

The beggar's weazened face was made radiant by his strong faith in the curative properties of the relics. He pleaded to be taken to the priest at once.

The old man had not set his foot to the ground for thirty years. His shriveled legs were curled underneath his body. He lives entirely in his cart. He had not walked since an injury to his spine sustained when twelve years old.

It was then about 9 o'clock, after a few hours' wait he was borne up to the priest who stood calm and dignified before him. The beggar mumbled a few prayers and said his rosary. Then the receptacle containing the sacred relics were placed near his shriveled lips. He kissed the relics and the priest applied them to his shrunken limbs.

The story told by his friends is that he stood up transfigured and limped out of the chapel, dragging after him the now useless cart; that his cure, while not entirely complete, was marvelous.

He has been a character around St. Albans, Vt., for a number of years.

GRANTS TO THE HORTICULTURISTS

Ottawa, July 31.—The executive of the Ottawa Horticultural Society is communicating with other societies in the province with a view to ascertaining their sentiment towards the reduction of the provincial grants to a maximum $800 per annum to any single organization. If it is found that the sentiment of other societies is against the restricting legislation representation will be made to the Provincial Government.

While the Ottawa's Society is the only one in the province that will lose by the new restriction, it is thought that the other bodies of horticultural workers are also opposed to the measure, which was passed at the last session of the Legislature.

SILVER DART COMES UP TO EXPECTATIONS

Aeroplane is Past Experimental Stage Says Baldwin.

Petawawa Camp, July 31.—Any doubts as to practicability of the principles embodied in the Silver Dart may be dispelled. Yesterday, "Casey" Baldwin said:

"As a flying machine proposition the Silver Dart is unquestionably beyond the experimental stage, as a result of the performance of the Silver Dart, Baddeck No. 1 and another machine have been constructed upon similar principles with a slightly modified design.

The new motor under test yesterday developed enormous power and started the propellor with two four feet spruce flanges whirling at 1,200 revolutions to the second, drawing up dust, grass and chips from a space of fifty feet around. This motor is expected to drive the aerodrome forty miles an hour through the air. Owing to the delicate adjustments this work takes time and after it has been tried out it must be done over again in Baddeck No. 1.

Baldwin and McCurdy have only one assistant from the Engineers' Corps. The shed is built in a quiet part of the camp where there is an undulating plain with occasional groves of jack pine to be avoided which affords facilities for tests.

That an exhibition of aeronautics will probably be one of the features of the first day at Petawawa next year, when all the regiments are encamped here, was the statement of a prominent officer of No. 4 military district.

"I expect," he said, "that the public will then have an opportunity to witness airship manoeuvres that have gone beyond the experimental stage. Of course, I don't regard the present trials at Petawawa as experiments. The aerodrome has been tried and proven at Baddeck."

WRIGHTS FULFILL THE TEST FOR U.S. PRIZE OF $35,000

In Triumphant Trial at Fort Meyer, Witnessed by President Taft, Orville Wright Carries His Brother and Lieut. Foulers Over Course.

Washington, July 31.—Orville Wright yesterday evening attained the zenith of hard-earned success.

In a ten-mile cross country flight in the aeroplane built by himself and his elder brother, Wilbur, and accompanied by Lieut. Benj D. Foulers, an officer of the army signal corps, he not only surpassed the speed requirements of his contract with the U. S. Government, but accomplished the most difficult and daring flight ever planned for a heavier than air flying machine.

Incidentally, he broke all speed records over a measured course.

Wright's speed was more than 42 miles an hour. He made the ten mile flight in 14 minutes and 42 seconds, including more than twenty seconds required for the turn beyond the line at Shulerhill, the southern end of the course. He attained a height in crossing the valley of "four mile run," of nearly 500 feet, and the average altitude of his practical level course was about 200 feet.

President Taft arrived upon the parade ground at Fort Meyer just in time to see the aeroplane land and to participate in the demonstration which welcomed the triumphant aviator. He sent Col. Treat, commanding officer of the artillery at Fort Meyer, to bear his congratulations to the victors.

Lieut. Foulers climbed into the passenger seat beside the motor. Wilbur took his place at the right tip of the planes, and Orville clambered into his seat behind Foulers. He gripped the levers, and nodding to his brother, slipped the cable, which released the starting weight. The aeroplane shot down the track.

Orville brought the machine at great speed twice around the field, then with a short turn he swept about almost over the heads of the closely-banked spectators.

Soon the aerial navigators were home again over the drill grounds, flying very low. Orville steered straight across the field and at a height of about twenty feet, swung round again to the southward, and landed easily far down the field. The task was done, and in triumph. Cheer upon cheer welcomed the return.

To-day the official board will determine the speed made yesterday. It is agreed that it exceeded 42 miles per hour. The Wrights will therefore receive $30,000, including a bonus of $5,000 for their aeroplane.

DRINK MILLIONS OF FEVER GERMS

Omaha, Neb., July 31.—The last of the series of typhoid tests have been applied to Sergt. Fuller and Privates Schmidt and Goodman of Fort Omaha, and they have been pronounced immune.

In June they were vaccinated with typhoid serum, and developed the disease in a mild form. Later they were vaccinated, but the serum did not take. Ten days ago they underwent the supreme test, that of drinking freely of a gallon of stagnant water into which one million fever germs had been placed. The men were placed in the hospital and closely watched. They should have developed symptoms within five or six days. As none has appeared, they are now declared immune.

GAS COMPANY LOSES ITS CASE

London, July 31.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The judicial committee of the Privy Council yesterday dismissed with costs the appeal of the Dominion Natural Gas Co. v. Perkins.

About three years ago last February George Perkins was burned to death and J. H. Collins fearfully burned in an explosion of natural gas in the roundhouse of the T., H. & B. yards at Hamilton. Action was taken against the Dominion Natural Gas Co. and the railway company, and a jury awarded Collins $7,000 for his burns and Mrs. Perkins $3,000 for the death of her husband.

AN EARTHQUAKE IN MEXICO 1,000 SQUARE MILES SUFFER

Mexico City is Visited by a Severe 'Quake But Destruction is Comparatively Slight—Thirteen Known to be Killed and a Score Wounded.

Mexico City, July 31.—With Chilpaucingo destroyed and Acapulco partly razed and the loss of life problematical, Central Mexico from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Queretaro on the north to Oaxca on the south, an area of more than 1,000 square miles, was shaken at an early hour yesterday by a series of the most severe earth shocks felt in the region for the last quarter of a century.

The 'quake was severe in Mexico City, but not prolific in destruction. Reports telling of the loss of life are meagre, but the official figures thus far given show 13 killed and more than a score mortally injured. While word comes from G. Peyros, an American commercial traveler at Chilpaucingo, Guerrero, that that city was destroyed and the inhabitants are living in the open, suffering from the elements, the loss of life is not definitely known. The shocks continued at Chilpaucingo last night with subterranean rumblings, flashes of lightning and hail.

Acapulco, Guerrero, was partly razed. According to the observatory records, the first shock of the series was felt at 4.15 yesterday morning. It was severe causing the bells of the many cathedrals of Mexico City to toll, breaking crockery and in some instances levelling walls.

The inhabitants of the capital had hardly recovered from fright when a second and more severe shock caused an outpouring of nearly all the residents. This movement was of a twisting character and lasted with marked severity 90 seconds. The tall buildings of the capital swayed and in some instances cracked, the pavement opened in places and in the poorer quarters, a number of houses collapsed.

So far as can be learned from police records, six persons lost their lives in Mexico City and its environs as a result of the second shock. Two were men of the lower classes. The others were a woman and a child. The American colony escaped unscathed. They, with the entire native population, remained in the plazas until daylight.

The property damage in Mexico City is slight.

RUST CANNOT HURT MUCH

Toronto, July 31.—"If the western Canada wheat crops is due for a setback by rust, we will hear about it within the next two or three days," said a Toronto grain dealer yesterday. "Hot days following a season of moisture is the kind of weather that makes rust, and that is what the west is getting now," he continued.

"The grain is so far advanced towards maturity, however, that it is doubtful whether an attack of rust would do any real damage."

The western states are still talking rust, but the reports are sufficiently contradictory, about the presence of rust, to create little or no uneasiness.

TARIFF BILL NEARS END

Washington, July 31.—Entering upon the last stages of its consideration by Congress, the tariff bill as reported by the conferees was submitted yesterday to the House by Chairman Payne and ordered printed in the Congressional records.

Three hundred and fifty of the 390 members were in their seats when Chairman Payne passed up to the Speaker's desk the bulky document. The Republicans loudly applauded.

The original Republican insurgents of the Senate, who voted against the tariff bill, expect to hold a meeting this afternoon at the home of Senator Beveridge, for the purpose of discussing what their attitude will be toward the conference report. Some of the men who voted against the bill will probably vote for the adoption of the report.

A minority conference has been called by Senator Culbertson, the Democratic leader of the Senate, to be held to-day. It probably will be determined at this conference what Democratic Senators will make speeches against the Payne-Aldrich bill. Senator McEnery is the only Democratic member of the Senate likely to vote for the adoption of the conference report.

Horrigan was in fine condition and states his condition was never serious. He admits he was lost so far as the creek he was fishing in was concerned, but knew the general direction and found his way to the shores of Lake Superior, where he spent some days eating berries and waiting to signal boats.

A SAD CASE OF HARD DRINKING

Woman Found on Railway Track in Helpless State

A sad and distressing sight was witnessed by those who happened to be at the foot of a down-town street Thursday night, about 9.15. An old woman, who was very much under the influence of liquor, was trying to pass the railroad tracks at that point, but was, seemingly, unable to do so. Several times she essayed the feat, but each time she would trip on the upstanding rail, and would fall heavily to the ground. Several persons passing at the time noticed her attempts, but no one offered to aid her. Finally, however, an employee of a nearby factory took pity on her, and telephoned for the police, who took her to her home.

Luckily no trains were passing at the time or a bad accident might have occurred.

THE BRITISH NAVY

In response to a request from Lord Roberts, Commander-in-Chief of the British forces, Mr. Asquith, the British premier, instituted an official inquiry into the state of the Land and Water forces of Great Britain, especially with a view to a possible invasion. The inquiry has resulted in the published statement that no matter what the strength and efficiency of the army, Great Britain's immunity from successful invasion depends wholly upon the Fleet. This will re-establish the pre-eminence of the navy and do away with the attempt to bring in military conscription in Britain. The people had determined to resist conscription, and now that the army is, at any rate as defender of the home country, a doubtful quantity, the whole attention of the U. Kingdom will centre in the Fleet. While it is undesirable to the last degree that war should be declared since it is worse than any possible pretended cause of war, it is also undesirable that we should throw away our resources and happiness, in what after all is only a quarrel degenerating into lawless and uncivilized strife. Some day the Court of World Opinion will rule, and we shall all be happy.

WHAT MAKES IT CHEAP?

The anti-protection journals fall into some queer contradictions occasionally. The following from the Witness, the ablest and most candid of all the Liberal journals, is worthy of being read by all the real producers—the workingmen. They will see that they are the real producers for the reason that the success of Great Britain depends upon their cheapness, and that alone.

What hope is there for the worker when to succeed he must make himself cheaper than somebody else? This is the great and chief effect of Free Trade. It means that the workers are "unprotected." It is the workers who are "free trade," and at the mercy of the financial manipulator. That is what F. T. really means. The day will come when it will be seen by the workingman that Protection is more protection for him than for the industry he works in. Why? Because, so long as he will work "cheap" enough, there is no need of a tariff. Canada does not need a tariff of protective height except for the reason that the workers here demand certain wages, and if the employer pays them, he himself must have a tariff to aid him.

The one argument that has blinded the worker in Great Britain to the real facts of the case hitherto is supposed cheapness of living. That ghost has disappeared, too, and in Canada likewise, and his wages must fall farther if F. T. is still to keep control. Hence the immense strike which the Witness refers to. It preceded Tariff Reform.

It is plain, then, that free competition sends the weakest, or least protected, to the wall first. Protection regulates these inequalities and protects the worker, and that is why the worker in protected countries lives better than anywhere else. Protection has its shortcomings, but they are regulable. Not so with F. T., which cannot, as its name implies, admit of any qualification or regulation. Freedom is a misused word. It is what the oppressed and oppressors both call for, the one in order to live as a freeman, the other for freedom to do as he pleases with the means at his command. The day will come when speculators of all sorts, in grain, land, stocks or water-powers, will be a thing of the past, and why not? They live on the margin of the unearned.

A MATTER OF IMPORTANCE

Nearly a quarter of a century ago in the pages of this Review, I drew attention to the increasing difficulty of our trade with more than half the world, because of a fall in the gold price of silver unprecedented in the history of that metal. My paper was entitled "Is Free Trade Compatible with the Fall in Silver?" It seemed to me the reply must inevitably be negative. Silver falls; it is the currency which eight hundred millions of people exchange for gold with which they purchase our goods. The Chinaman, who used to buy a bill of exchange on London by paying twenty taels, or dollars, has now to give some forty-seven taels, or dollars, for the same good bill; how, then, shall we keep his custom? * * *
—Moreton Frewen.

The above is a fair sample of the dual and single standard question. To keep a share of the immense trade of the east in our hands necessitates our placing of "exchange" on a fair and rational basis. The following extract from the official report is also of interest:—

"Whether and if so by what means between gold standard and silver standard communities fixed exchanges might be secured be is no part of the present propaganda of the league. To another generation and to another league it must be left to re-establish if that be possible, actual fixed exchange with Asia. Our present objective is less ambitious and less contentious. We propose by whatever palliatives economic science may accept as sound and orthodox to secure higher prices for silver, thus enabling the Orient to purchase the products of the west. Until this has been accomplished and a more favorable balance of trade secured our gold standard must be imperilled and financial crises must recur. Without fair exchanges trade must be constantly endangered, and it is a serious trade dislocation with adverse exchanges which can alone compromise the gold standard. Thus we particularly appeal to all champions of sound money in Canada and in other countries to assist the league in its endeavor to secure legislation which by increasing the monetary use of silver will however moderate a degree the rates of exchange with Asia. By 'fair exchanges' we mean exchanges fair to white workers and white traders. We believe that already there is an overwhelming body of evidence to show that the fall in silver since 1873 has transferred great industries formerly employing white labour to be operated within Asia by native labour. The great fall in silver last year has also almost entirely stopped the exports of wheat, lumber, and other of our staple products to Asia, and it is no longer disputed that as silver falls cotton mills and jute mills close in the west to be re-established in the far east. This year is memorable for the first rolling of steel rails, and on a very large scale at Hankow."

It will be seen that our western inability to handle our rates of exchange is actually driving trade away from us. We have been flattering ourselves that the western world was invincible; that the effete east would forever remain our debtors, industrially speaking. The mischief of our mistake has been made apparent. No juggling in the purely financial world should prevent our rectifying the blunder. Trade of any sort is of more importance to a people than money. Trade is the life of money, which without it disappears never to return.

EDITORIAL NOTES

George Dolling, of England, was met at the dock in New York by his brother-in-law. The former is 7 feet 1 inch tall, and the latter 8 ft. 8 1-4 in the air.

In the death of Hon. John Dryden Canada loses a good as well as capable man. It was always a mystery that he could tolerate the Ross aggregation as long as he did.

The Report of the Royal Commission of Great Britain (1888) on the great question of exchange, quoted in another column, is a thing for every man to read who takes an interest in getting a fair return for his labor.

Notwithstanding the very positive assurances of our Free Trade opponents, the rate of living has gone up to an amazing and disconcerting extent. How do THEY account for it?

Some of our western girls, it is true, have a disposition to rush at a man with both arms outstretched—one sees it constantly among the second-class hordes travelling in Europe, and this, I infer, is the primitive impulse of almost primitive tribes to get what they want in the shortest possible time. But even these girls, when they are walking more thoughtfully in their twenties, when they are "young ladies," evolve a far finer set of tactics; they lose the savagery of adolescence, and cultivate those qualities which, when persisted in long enough, make them more than a match for any man.—Grace Atherton.

CAUGHT WITH THE GOODS ON

The South Not the Only Place—Counterfeit Religion—A Holy Show

There is something almost pathetic in that story from the South of the success of the workers of the "green goods" game in actually inducing a colored church congregation to try and pay off a debt on their building by purchasing "the special" money. The agent went among them, slipped into their hands samples of bills "made by one who had left the government employ and carried off some of the plates with him." The bills, of course, were genuine green-backs and were readily passed at the bank. The colored folk were convinced, and saw a debt which had been a heavy burden for years being lifted. They managed to scrape together a thousand dollars of real money and sent one of the trusted brethren to purchase $5,000 of the cheap money. He completed the transaction, returned home, and received the express package. It was opened, and found to contain a bundle of green paper with one dollar tied on top, which showed that the scamps did not want to take all the church's money away from them.—The Montreal Star.

CARRIED OUT ORDERS.

But Perhaps Obeyed Her Mistress a Little Too Literally.

Mrs. Smith, who lives on Calumet avenue, sent a domestic out the other day with a tailor made suit that she wanted cleaned and pressed.

"Now, Bridget," said she, "these cleaners are sometimes very careless if they think one will put up with poor work. You take this over to —— Cottage Grove avenue, and be sure to impress it upon the old fellow that I want the work well done."

Bridget came back in the course of half an hour, evidently well pleased with herself.

"Sure, mum," she explained, "Oi'll warrunt yer dress is irruned to perfection. Oi tould 'im, ses Oi, the woman yes be goin' to worruk for is the divil. She's the particularest craythur yes iver had dailin's wid, bein' that homely she knows her dresses has got to be disthracktin'ly good lookin'. Oi fixed him fer yes, mum, an' nivir tould no lies, neither."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Unexpected.

He had asked the rich man for his petted daughter.

For a moment all was still. The father slowly turned his head and stared out of the nearest window, and the young man noted that his face had suddenly grown sad and haggard.

"I deeply regret," he said, "that my request has caused you so much sorrow."

The old man suddenly looked around.

"You don't suppose I feel bad on my own account, do you?" he snapped. "My sorrow is all for you."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Prudence.

A tall man, impatiently pacing the platform of a wayside station, accosted a boy of about twelve.

"S-s-say," he said, "d-d-do y-you know h-h-how late this train is?"

The boy grinned, but made no reply. The man stuttered out something about kids in general and passed into the station.

A stranger asked the boy why he hadn't answered the big man.

"D-d-d'ye wanter see me g-g-get me fa-fa-face punched? D-d-dat big g-guy'd t'ink I was mo-mo-mocking him."—Everybody's.

The Limit.

"Eddie, I want the lawn well sprinkled this evening."

"All right, pop."

"Exceptionally well, understand. Get it good and soaked."

"Yes, sir."

"In fact, you might try to get as much water on the grass as you do on yourself."—Kansas City Times.

It Wasn't Patriotism.

"Are you going abroad this summer?"

"No. George says he wants us to know something about our own country before we go abroad again."

"George must be getting economical."

"That's it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Had to Get Close.

"Why are you getting so close to me, Mr. Huggins?" said the female voice from the sofa in the dark parlor.

"Because I came to see you," was the reply of the male voice.

"Y-e-s, I know, but"—

"I'm nearsighted, you know."—Yonkers Statesman.

Just the Color.

Jokesmith—That's a sarcastic editor on that comic paper. I submitted some jokes written on gray paper.

Poet—Did he make any comment?

Jokesmith—Yes. He said they were so old they were turning gray.—Houston Post.

Terrible Candor.

"What part of my book did you most enjoy?" asked the authorette as she brushed her hair over her ears.

And after a moment's reflection Miss Cayenne answered:

"The cover design."—Washington Star.

By KATHERINE CECIL THURSTON,

Author of "The Circle," Etc.

Copyright, 1905, 1906, by Harper & Brothers

He neither spoke nor behaved extravagantly in that great moment of comprehension. He acted quietly, with the completeness of purpose that he gave to everything. He had found a new capacity within himself, and he was strong enough to dread no weakness in displaying it.

Holding her close to him, he repeated his declaration again and again, as though repetition ratified it. He found no need to question her feeling for him—he had divined it in a flash of inspiration as she stood waiting in the doorway of the gallery, but his own surrender was a different matter.

As the carriage passed around the corner of Whitehall and dipped into the traffic of Piccadilly he bent down again until her soft hair brushed his face, and the warm personal contact, the slight, fresh smell of violets so suggestive of her presence, stirred him afresh.

"Eve," he said, "I love you."

"Eve," he said vehemently, "do you understand? Do you know that I have loved you always—from the very first?" As he said it he bent still nearer, kissing her lips, her forehead, her hair.

At the same moment the horses slackened speed and then stopped, arrested by one of the temporary blocks that so often occur in the traffic of Piccadilly circus.

Loder, preoccupied by his own feelings, scarcely noticed the halt, but Eve drew away from him, laughing.

"You mustn't," she said softly. "Look!"

The carriage had stopped beside one of the small islands that intersect the place. A group of pedestrians were crowded upon it, under the light of the electric lamp—wayfarers who, like themselves, were awaiting a passage. Loder took a cursory glance at them, then turned back to Eve.

"What are they, after all, but men and women?" he said. "They'd understand—every one of them." He laughed in his turn. Nevertheless he withdrew his arm. Her feminine thought for conventionalities appealed to him. It was an acknowledgment of dependency.

For awhile they sat silent, the light of the street lamp flickering through the glass of the window, the hum of voices and traffic coming to them in a continuous rise and fall of sound. At first the position was interesting, but as the seconds followed each other it became irksome. Loder, watching the varying expressions of Eve's face, grew impatient of the delay, grew suddenly eager to be alone again in the fragrant darkness.

Impelled by the desire, he leaned forward and opened the window.

"Let's find the meaning of this," he said. "Is there nobody to regulate the traffic?" As he spoke he half rose and leaned out of the window. There was a touch of imperious annoyance in his manner. Fresh from the realization of power, there was something irksome in this commonplace check to his desires.

"Isn't it possible to get out of this?" Eve heard him call to the coachman. Then she heard no more.

He had leaned out of the carriage with the intention of looking onward toward the cause of the delay. Instead, by that magnetic attraction that undoubtedly exists, he looked directly in front of him at the group of people waiting on the little island—at one man who leaned against the lamp post in an attitude of apathy—a man with a pallid, unshaven face and lusterless eyes, who wore a cap drawn low over his forehead.

He looked at this man, and the man saw and returned his glance. For a space that seemed interminable they held each other's eyes; then very slowly Loder drew back into the carriage.

As he dropped into his seat Eve glanced at him anxiously.

"John," she said, "has anything happened? You look ill."

He turned to her and tried to smile.

"It's nothing," he said. "Nothing to worry about." He spoke quickly, but his voice had suddenly become flat. All the command, all the domination, had dropped away from it.

Eve bent close to him, her face lighting up with anxious tenderness. "It was the excitement," she said, "the strain of tonight."

He looked at her, but he made no attempt to press the fingers that clasped his own.

"Yes," he said slowly. "Yes. It was the excitement of tonight—and the reaction."

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE next morning at 8 o'clock, and again without breakfast, Loder covered the distance between Grosvenor square and Clifford's inn. He left Chilcote's house hastily—with a haste that only an urgent motive could have driven him to adopt. His steps were quick and uneven as he traversed the intervening streets; his shoulders lacked their decisive pose, and his pale face was marked with shadows beneath the eyes—shadows that bore witness to the sleepless night spent in pacing Chilcote's vast and lonely room. By the curious effect of circumstances the likeness between the two men had never been more significantly marked than on that morning of April 19, when Loder walked along the pavements crowded with early workers and brisk with insistent news venders already alive to the value of last night's political crisis.

The irony of this last element in the day's concerns came to him fully when one newsboy, more energetic than his fellows, thrust a paper in front of him.

"Sensation in the 'ouse, sir! Speech by Mr. Chilcote! Government defeat!"

For a moment Loder stopped and his face reddened. The tide of emotions still ran strong. His hand went instinctively to his pocket; then his lips set. He shook his head and walked on.

With the same hard expression about his mouth, he turned into Clifford's inn, passed through his own doorway and mounted the stairs.

This time there was no milk can on the threshold of his rooms and the door yielded to his pressure without the need of a key. With a strange sensation of reluctance he walked into the narrow passage and paused, uncertain which room to enter first. As he stood hesitating a voice from the sitting room settled the question.

"Who's there?" it called irritably. "What do you want?"

Without further ceremony the intruder pushed the door open and entered the room. As he did so he drew a quick breath—whether of disappointment or relief it was impossible to say. Whether he had hoped for or dreaded it, Chilcote was conscious.

As Loder entered he was sitting by the cheerless grate, the ashes of yesterday's fire showing charred and dreary where the sun touched them. His back was to the light, and about his shoulders was an old plaid rug. Behind him on the table stood a cup, a teapot and the can of milk; farther off a kettle was set to boil upon a tiny spirit stove.

In all strong situations we are more or less commonplace. Loder's first remark as he glanced round the disordered room seemed strangely inefficient.

"Where's Robins?" he asked in a brusque voice. His mind teemed with big considerations, yet this was his first involuntary question.

Chilcote had started at the entrance of his visitor; now he sat staring at him, his hands holding the arms of his chair.

"Where's Robins?" Loder asked again.

"I don't know. She— I— We did not hit it off. She's gone—went yesterday." He shivered and drew the rug about him.

"Chilcote"— Loder began sternly. Then he paused. There was something in the other's look and attitude that arrested him. A change of expression passed over his own face. He turned about, with an abrupt gesture, pulled off his coat and threw it on a chair; then, crossing deliberately to the fireplace, he began to rake the ashes from the grate.

Within a few minutes he had a fire crackling where the bed of dead cinders had been, and, having finished the task, he rose slowly from his knees, wiped his hands and crossed to the table. On the small spirit stove the kettle had boiled, and the cover was lifting and falling with a tinkling sound. Blowing out the flame, Loder picked up the teapot and, with hands that were evidently accustomed to the task, set about making the tea.

During the whole operation he never spoke, though all the while he was fully conscious of Chilcote's puzzled gaze. The tea ready, he poured it into the cup and carried it across the room.

"Drink this!" he said laconically. "The fire will be up presently."

Chilcote extended a cold and shaky hand. "You see"— he began.

But Loder checked him almost savagely. "I do—as well as though I had followed you from Piccadilly last night. You've been hanging about, God knows where, till the small hours of the morning; then you've come back—slunk back, starving for your infernal poison and shivering with cold. You've settled the first part of the business, but the cold has still to be reckoned with. Drink the tea. I've something to say to you." He mastered his vehemence and, walking to the window, stood looking down into the court. His eyes were blank, his face hard; his ears heard nothing but the faint sound of Chilcote's swallowing, the click of the cup against his teeth.

For a time that seemed interminable he stood motionless; then, when he judged the tea finished, he turned slowly. Chilcote had drawn closer to the fire. He was obviously braced by the warmth, and the apathy that rung about him was to some extent dispelled. Still moving slowly, Loder went toward him and, relieving him of the empty cup, stood looking down at him.

"Chilcote," he said very quietly, "I've come to tell you that the thing must end."

After he spoke there was a prolonged pause; then, as if shaken with sudden consciousness, Chilcote rose. The rug dropped from one shoulder and hung down ludicrously; his hand caught the back of the chair for support; his unshaven face looked absurd and repulsive in its sudden expression of scared inquiry. Loder involuntarily turned away.

"I mean it," he said slowly. "It's over; we've come to the end."

"But why?" Chilcote articulated blankly. "Why? Why?" In his confusion he could think of no better word.

"Because I throw it up. My side of the bargain's off!"

Again Chilcote's lips parted stammeringly. The apathy caused by physical exhaustion and his recently administered drug was passing from him; the hopelessly shattered condition of mind and body was showing through it like a skeleton through a thin covering of flesh.

"But why?" he said again. "Why?"

Still Loder avoided the frightened surprise of his eyes. "Because I withdraw," he answered doggedly.

Then suddenly Chilcote's tongue was loosened. "Loder," he cried excitedly, "you can't do it! Great heavens, man, you can't do it!" To reassure himself he laughed—a painfully thin echo of his old sarcastic laugh. "If it's a matter of greater opportunity," he began, "of more money"—

But Loder turned upon him.

"Be quiet!" he said so menacingly that the other stopped. Then by an effort he conquered himself. "It's not a matter of money, Chilcote," he said quietly. "It's a matter of necessity." He brought the word out with difficulty.

Chilcote glanced up. "Necessity?" he repeated. "How? Why?"

The reiteration roused Loder. "Because there was a great scene in the house last night," he began hurriedly. "Because when you go back you'll find that Sefborough has smashed up over the assassination of Sir William Brice-Field at Meshed and that you have made your mark in a big speech, and because"— Abruptly he stopped. The thing he had come to say—the thing he had meant to say—would not be said. Either his tongue or his resolution failed him, and for the instant he stood as silent and almost as ill at ease as his companion. Then all at once inspiration came to him, in the suggestion of a wellnigh forgotten argument by which he might influence Chilcote and save his own self respect. "It's all over, Chilcote," he said more quietly. "It has run itself out." And in a dozen sentences he sketched the story of Lillian Astrupp, her past relations with himself, her present suspicions. It was not what he had meant to say; it was not what he had come to say, but it served the purpose—it saved him humiliation.

Chilcote listened to the last word. Then, as the other finished, he dropped nervously back into his chair. "Good heavens, man," he said, "why didn't you tell me? Why didn't you warn me, instead of filling my mind with your political position? Your political position!" He laughed unsteadily. The long spells of indulgence that had weakened his already maimed faculties showed in the laugh, in the sudden breaking of his voice. "You must do something, Loder!" he added nervously, checking his amusement. "You must do something!"

Loder looked down at him. "No," he said decisively. "It's your turn now. It's you who've got to do something."

Chilcote's face turned a shade grayer. "I can't," he said below his breath.

"Can't? Oh, yes, you can. We can all do—anything. It's not too late; there's just sufficient time. Chilcote," he added suddenly, "don't you see that the thing has been madness all along—has been like playing with the most infernal explosives? You may thank whatever you have faith in that nobody has been smashed up! You are going back. Do you understand me? You are going back—now, today, before it's too late." There was a great change in Loder; his strong, imperturbable face was stirred; he was moved in both voice and manner. Time after time he repeated his injunction, reasoning, expostulating, insisting. It almost seemed that he fought some strenuous invisible force rather than the shattered man before him.

Chilcote moved nervously in his seat. It was the first real clash of personalities. He felt it—recognized it by instinct. The sense of domination had fallen on him; he knew himself impotent in the other's hands. Whatever he might attempt in moments of solitude he possessed no voice in presence of this invincible second self. For awhile he struggled—he did not fight, he struggled to resist—then, lifting his eyes, he met Loder's. "And what will you do?" he said weakly.

Loder returned his questioning gaze, but almost immediately he turned aside. "I?" he said. "Oh, I shall leave London."

CHAPTER XXVII.

BUT Loder did not leave London, and the hour of 2 on the day following his dismissal of Chilcote found him again in his sitting room.

He sat at the center table surrounded by a cloud of smoke; a pipe was between his lips and the morning's newspapers lay in a heap beside his elbow. To the student of humanity his attitude was intensely interesting. It was the attitude of a man trammeled by the knowledge of his strength. Before him as he sat smoking stretched a future of absolute nothingness, and toward this blank future one portion of his consciousness—a struggling and as yet scarcely sentient portion—pushed him inevitably; while another—a vigorous, persistent, human portion—cried to him to pause. So actual, so clamorous, was this silent mental combat that had raged unceasingly since the moment of his renunciation that at last in physical response to it he pushed back his chair.

"It's too late," he said aloud. "I'm a fool. It's too late."

Then abruptly, astonishingly, as though in direct response to his spoken thought, the door opened and Chilcote walked into the room.

Slowly Loder rose and stared at him. The feeling he acknowledged to himself was anger, but below the anger a very different sensation ran riotously strong. And it was in time to this second feeling, this sudden, lawless joy, that his pulses beat as he turned a cold face on the intruder.

"Well?" he said sternly.

But Chilcote was impervious to sternness. He was mentally shaken and distressed, though outwardly irreproachable, even to the violets in the lapel of his coat—the violets that for a week past had been brought each morning to the door of Loder's rooms by Eve's maid. For one second, as Loder's eyes rested on the flowers, a sting of ungovernable jealousy shot through him; then as suddenly it died away, superseded by another feeling—a feeling of new, spontaneous joy. Worn by Chilcote or by himself, the flowers were a symbol!

"Well?" he said again in a gentler voice.

Chilcote had walked to the table and laid down his hat. His face was white and the muscles of his lips twitched nervously as he drew off his gloves.

"Thank heaven, you're here!" he said shortly. "Give me something to drink."

In silence Loder brought out the whisky and set it on the table; then instinctively he turned aside. As plainly as though he saw the action he mentally figured Chilcote's furtive glance, the furtive movement of his fingers to his waistcoat pocket, the hasty dropping of the tabloids into the glass. For an instant the sense of his tacit connivance came to him sharply; the next, he flung it from him. The human, inner voice was whispering its old watchword. The strong man has no time to waste over his weaker brother!

When he heard Chilcote lay down his tumbler he looked back again. "Well, what is it?" he said. "What have you come for?" He strove resolutely to keep his voice severe but, try as he might, he could not quite subdue the eager force that lay behind his words. Once again, as on the night of their second interchange, life had become a phoenix, rising to fresh existence even while he sifted its ashes. "Well?" he said once again.

Chilcote had set down his glass. He was nervously passing his handkerchief across his lips. There was something in the gesture that attracted Loder. Looking at him more attentively, he saw what his own feelings and the other's conventional dress had blinded him to—the almost piteous panic and excitement in his visitor's eyes.

"Something's gone wrong," he said, with abrupt intuition.

Chilcote started. "Yes—no—that is, yes," he stammered.

SEVEN YEARS AN INVALID

Than She Took "Fruit-a-tives" And Is Now Well.

Arnprior, Ont., Nov. 27, 1908.

I was an invalid for seven years from fearful Womb Trouble. I had falling womb, with constant pain in the back and front of my body and all down my legs. There was a heavy discharge and this made me weak, sleepless, restless and miserable. Often I was obliged to be in bed for a month at a time. I was treated by several doctors, but their treatment did me no permanent good.

A few months ago, I was persuaded to try "Fruit-a-tives." I took several boxes, and from the outset of this treatment I was better, the Constipation was cured, and the discharge lessened. I took, for the paleness, several bottles of the Iron Mixture as recommended in the "Fruit-a-tives" book, but I feel that it was "Fruit-a-tives" alone that cured me.

Now that the fair sex are going to wear 18 inch sky scrapers, it is up to some genius to invent a portable hoisting crane or a step ladder, which could be concealed in the first story.

INTERESTING THINGS SEEN IN A PILE OF OLD IRON

A Glimpse at the Pile of Old Iron on the Scene of the Recent Fire on Bethune Street.

"There is wealth in old iron."

Perhaps there is, and perhaps there is not, but at any rate, there is lots of old iron. Yesterday a Review reporter was strolling about the western part of the town, and incidentally happened to visit the scene of the recent fire at the corner of Simcoe and Bethune streets. Formerly the building was a flour mill but during the last few years it has been used as a store house for rags and old iron. The interior of the building was almost entirely given up to the storage of the former, while the yard at the rear was given over to the old iron. Altogether there must have been ten or twelve car loads of the stuff lying around the place, some of it strewn about the yard in all directions, and the rest of it was in a large pile in the centre.

And what a queer collection of stuff there was. Nothing was lacking in the scale from a locomotive boiler to a modern pump handle. Stoves there were in profusion, all rusty and stained from the recent rains. Sewing machines, hand irons, stove lids and pokers were all intermingled in a close embrace. Horseshoes lurked discretely within the ovens of broken gas stoves. A small hand printing press surveyed the horizon from the top of the pile, and just below it was resting a huge iron boiling cauldron, of the kind used in making maple sugar. A little poking and searching among the iron brought to light a modern safety razor, with a blade inserted, already for the fray. A small washing machine peeped out from behind a pile of old, dirty rags and papers, but made no effort to fulfill its purpose on earth, viz., to clean them. Pots, kettles, gun-barrels and waggon wheels all were present in large numbers, but above them all the lawnmower reigned supreme. Of this one article alone there were enough to stock an ordinary hardware store.

The very irony of the situation struck the reporter, and he decamped

AUTO TOURISTS WHO HAVE SEEN GREAT DEAL OF WORLD WERE HERE YESTERDAY

Mr. W. J. Aldershot of Portsmouth, Eng., accompanied by Mr. Fred Moran of the same town, was in the city for a couple of hours yesterday on his way to Montreal. Mr. Aldershot is on an extensive automobile tour of the continent.

He landed at Portland, Me., some time ago, and since then has travelled all over the United States with his friend, visiting every state in the union. He came to Canada from Washington, and has toured from Vancouver east. Mr. Aldershot and Mr. Moran will sail from Montreal for England when they reach the Royal City.

Prior to coming to America they traversed practically all of Europe, and previous to that took a trip through the British Isles.

CITY DEBENTURES FOR SALE

The city of Peterborough has for immediate sale $91,500 worth of debentures which are made up of $70,000 for the new water works dam, and $21,500 for the street extension and filling in the water front. The balance of the water works and the Smith street bridge by-laws will not be sold until required.

A meeting of the Finance Committee was held yesterday afternoon when the above action was decided upon.

Ald. Phelan and City Clerk Armstrong were also appointed delegates from the city to the annual meeting of the Ontario Municipal Board, which meets in Toronto on September 1st and 2nd. The clerk was also authorized to pay the city's annual fees of $15.

The assessors were paid $100 each on account.

The annual grant of $500 was made to the Peterborough and Ashburnham Horticultural Society. This money is used in taking care of the parks.

The committee also considered and passed the usual list of accounts.

WITNESSES FROM PETERBORO' WILL TESTIFY AT TRIAL

The Ottawa Free Press says: A new feature of the gypsy troubles developed yesterday when seven members of the Ottawa gang were placed under arrest on the charge of perjury at the trial yesterday of John and Eli Stokes in Hull.

The prisoners were witnesses and swore that money had not been received by the prisoners for the girl, Katrina, at Peterborough.

The evidence went a long way toward exonerating Stokes. The arrests are the result, and witnesses will be brought from Peterborough to discredit their oaths. The trial will be begun in a week's time.

PLANS FOR NEW ISOLATION HOSPITAL BEING PREPARED

Ald. Bradburn, chairman of the Property Committee; Dr. A. W. McPherson, medical health officer, and Mr. Jas. Blackwell, were in Montreal for a couple of days last week. The object of their visit was to see the handsome new isolation hospitals there, which are the most up-to-date and most complete in the Dominion.

The first plan prepared by the architect for the Peterborough hospital would not meet the requirements for which it was intended. The medical health officer went over them and suggested a great many changes, which were necessary for hospital purposes. The doctor also suggested that the architect or someone go to Montreal and see just what was necessary.

The Property Committee decided to send the three gentlemen mentioned above. They went and they saw, and the old plans are being revised with provision made for the modern conveniences.

The hospital, if built according to the plans which are being prepared, will be three storeys high, with a basement, and every foot of the space will be utilized. The building will be of a moderate size, but it will be modern in every respect.

Dyphtheria and scarlet fever will be treated therein, but a solid brick wall will be run through the building from the ground up, so that there will be no direct communication between them, any more than if two buildings had been erected 100 feet apart. Each side is to have its own main entrance, and each is fitted up without any thoughts of the other.

In the basement will be the general kitchen, the laundry, pantries, coal and furnace room and sleeping apartments for the help.

On the ground floor will be the reception halls, lavatories, dispensary, doctors' room, examining rooms, matrons' quarters, bath rooms, closets, private wards and general wards.

On the second floor are more private and general wards with bath rooms, closets, serving rooms, etc., while the top floor will be for the nurses as sleeping apartments, etc.

At both ends of the hospital are provided verandahs two storeys high which in the winter time will serve as sun parlors. The fire escapes will also run down the verandah.

Separate chutes for the laundries are provided, as well as dumb waiters to carry the food up and down. These will be encased in brick, the floors throughout are to be mostly of cement, as the idea is to make it as near fire proof as possible.

The hospital will accommodate from 25 to 30 patients, although the scarlet fever side will have a few more cots than the other side, as there are more fever patients as a rule.

The plans will be ready for the Property Committee in a few days, and if satisfactory they will be sent on to the Council for approval.

CONCERNING THE ELECTRIC LAMPS

Peterborough Man Writes Valuable Paper Discussing Latest Improvements in Electric Lamps

The current issue of the Canadian Electrical News contains the conclusion of an excellent paper by Mr. H. R. Burnett, of the Canadian General Electric Co., on "Tungsten and Carbon Lamps." The paper is a thoroughly practical treatise on the subject and reflects the results of careful study, experience and thorough familiarity with the matter under discussion. Mr. Burnett is superintendent of lamp manufacture for the C. G. E. Co. at their Peterborough works. At the time of the amalgamation of the Thomson-Houston and Edison companies, to form the General Electric Co., of Schenectady, N. Y., he was superintendent of the lamp works of the Thomson-Houston Co., at Lynn, Mass. He afterwards came to Canada to take charge for the C. G. E. Co., and superintended the transfer of that department from Hamilton to Peterborough in 1894, since being in charge of that department of the works in Peterborough, during which period he has seen the annual shipments of the company in the matter of lamps increase over nine-fold.

CATCHY NUMBERS AT BAND CONCERT

Last night's concert in Victoria Park by the 57th Band drew one of the largest crowds of the season. Besides the programme of catchy musical numbers, a song by Mr. Halpany added greatly to the evening's entertainment. Mr. Halpany was called upon for several encores, to which he very generously responded.

The programme was as follows:

Coon Song—"My Gushing Rosie," by Mr. Halpany, with band accompaniment.

NEW ORDER TO BE ENFORCED ON C.P.R.

The Lethbridge Herald says:

"All intending passengers on the C. P. R. trains must show their tickets at the car door now before entering. It is expected that this rule will also be put into practice on the other trains. In the past it has been a too common occurrence that intending passengers would purchase transportation on the trains and many short trips would travel free as the conductor would be unable to collect and punch out all the fares between the trip.

The local officials of the railway have not as yet heard from headquarters of the rule being put in force here. It will probably only apply to those sections where the station are only a short distance apart.

LAKEFIELD BOYS REGRET LEO QUINN'S DEPARTURE

On Wednesday evening a very pleasant event took place in T. Z. Webster's ice cream parlors, when a considerable number of young men of the village assembled to bid good-bye to Mr. Leo Quinn, who is going to Oshawa, where he has secured a good position. After refreshments had been served the following address was read by Mr. W. W. Leonard, and the handsome suit case presented by Mr. J. M. Bygott.

To Mr. Leo Quinn:—

As you have decided to take your departure from amongst us to enter into new fields of labor and sport, we feel that we cannot miss this opportunity of expressing our kind feelings toward you, and wish you every success in your new home, which we feel assured will be your lot.

For ourselves we feel exceedingly sorry to lose you, especially in the field of sport, for to your efforts is due in a great measure the success of our hockey team. For yourself we are very glad that another Lakefield boy is to make a mark for himself, and by so doing keep up the reputation which our town has always enjoyed. We therefore, ask you to accept from the boys this suit case, which, besides being useful, we hope will keep our memory continually before you, and always remind you that wherever you may settle you have the assurance of warm friends in Lakefield.

Signed on behalf of the boys of Lakefield.

In reply Mr. Quinn thanked the boys for their kind token of appreciation, and said he would always remember his many friends in Lakefield. Speeches were made by a number of those present, all expressing themselves as very sorry to see Leo go, but wishing him every success in his new home.

The Misses Jordan of Lindsay have returned home after visiting their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John Porter, London street.

Mr. J. J. McCrea has received a card from Mrs. Neal, from Saranac Lake, N.Y., in which she states that Dr. Neal, who has been undergoing treatment there for some time, is much improved in health.

Mr. P. Alexander, proprietor of the popular summer hotel at "Islands," is in the city to-day. Mr. Alexander says the resort is being favored with a large patronage this summer and the fishing has been excellent.

Song Service

An evangelistic song service will be held to-morrow night at Central Park at 8.15. Old familiar hymns will be sung, including Rock of Ages, (old tune) Jesus Lover of My Soul and Abide With Me. It is requested that those in attendance join in the singing as there is probably nothing more inspiring than the singing and the listening to of these grand old hymns.

WHO SPENT THE MONEY?

The present Council is desirous of letting the people know that the money spent for street extension and filling-in, without the leave of the people, was spent in the following years and as shown by the table—

STATEMENT OF EXPENDITURE ON STREET EXTENSIONS

The net amount expended in each year, including interest charges to the December, 1908, was as follows—

| | |
|---|---|
| In 1904 | $ 1122 31 |
| In 1905 | 913 98 |
| In 1906 | 1562 21 |
| In 1907 | 13475 18 |
| In 1908 | 3195 05 |
| In 1909 | 42 22 |
| | $20300 95 |

From this deduct proceeds of sale of debenture in 1905 under By-law No 1119, $6,000.00, which leaves the total expenditure $14,300.95.

To this must be added interest from January 1st, 1909.

STATEMENT OF EXPENDITURE ON WATER LOTS

The net amount expended in each year, including interest charges to December, 1908, was as follows—

| | |
|---|---|
| In 1906 | $ 1508 88 |
| In 1907 | 2116 94 |
| In 1908 | 533 30 |
| In 1909 | 813 05 |
| | $ 4972 17 |

To this must be added interest from January 1st, 1909.

The aldermen are, quite naturally, anxious to inform those of whom they are the representatives, that it was not in defiance of the wish of the people as expressed at the polls or in a spirit of disregard of that wish that the money was spent, by this Council, at least.

This is gratifying information. There can be no question that the people have been inclined of late years to resent such a method of procedure

GOT DRUNK HERE FINED AT HOME

Lakefield Men Had to Pay $5.00 and Costs for Their Hilarity

The Lakefield News says: Court was held in the town hall on Tuesday last, when Joseph and Thomas McMurray appeared before John Hull, J.P., to answer to the charges of being drunk and disorderly and, using profane language and cruelty to animals. The two men were working in Peterborough, but on Monday evening drove through the village on their way to their home in Douro. Before leaving Peterborough they managed to get pretty well intoxicated, and meeting several of our citizens on the outskirts of the village saluted them with vile language. When a gentleman remonstrated with them on their conduct, Joseph McMurry jumped out of the rig and assaulted him. The magistrate imposed a fine of $5.00 and costs on each of the charges, the costs amounting to $11.85.

PORTER MADE A PREMATURE EXIT

The Cork Popped and Liquid Soaked Dress—A Dry Soul's Lament

It was a mixture of porter, consternation and amusement on Simcoe street last evening about 5.30 at the corner of George street, when some effervescent porter objected to its bottled captivity and made a yeast-like escape.

"My, isn't that awful," said a woman who was carrying the bottle as it ran all over her dress and was in creamy and strong-smelling evidence.

A thirsty citizen who was standing nearby, remarked, "A waste, a complete waste," and several others who witnessed the alcoholic volcano made no attempt to restrain their merriment, much to the embarrassment and confusion of the victim of the playful brew.

POTATOES AT 35C AND 40C PER PECK

The quality of the potatoes offered on the market this morning was not very good, although 35c. and 40c. per peck was asked. Large quantities of raspberries were offered at 10c. a box and two boxes for 25c. There was also an abundance of beans and other garden produce at fair prices.

MEETING FOR MEN TO-MORROW

Meetings for men will be held in the tent to-morrow under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. The meetings will be held at 4 and 8.15 p.m. to which all men are cordially invited. The speakers will include Dr. Middleton, J. F. Ferguson and W. McLaren. There will be special singing.

WILL MANAGE HIS CAYGEON HOTEL

The "Lakefield House closed its doors to the public Wednesday last, Mr. O. J. Lawless deciding to devote all his attention to his fine hotel in Bobcaygeon. Since local option came into force the hotel has been as a temperance house, but it did not pay and Mr. Lawless decided to close it up. The hotel will be greatly missed by the travelling public.—Lakefield News.

Delia Killebrew, a negro mammy, and probably the oldest person in Tennessee, is dead, aged 116 years.

THIS CALF WAS SIX LEGGED

It Lived Only a Couple of Hours After Birth

A six-legged calf was born on the farm of Mr. Frank Ward, Otonabee, yesterday. The calf, like most monstrosities of the kind, was short-lived and only lived a couple of hours. It was developed in every respect with the exception of the extra legs, which were only about half the natural length.

OBITUARY

MRS J. W. KINDRED.

On June 22nd, at the residence of her father, in the township of Asphodel, Mrs J. W. Kindred, of Zion, daughter of Mr. John Breckenridge, passed away at the early age of 36 years. She had been in failing health for some time, and thinking that a change might prove beneficial, she came to spend a few days at the old home near Westwood. The days lengthened into weeks and the weeks into months with little or no sign of improvement. At last it became evident that even the best medical skill could not cope successfully with the disease, and on the 22nd of June she passed peacefully away to her eternal reward, leaving her husband and three children, Grace, Charles and Jean, to mourn her departure.

Deceased was a most devoted wife and mother, and always enjoyed the highest esteem of friends and acquaintances. She was a member of the Methodist church at Zion, and always took an interest in the work of the church. Her last days on earth were characterized by a blessed hopefulness and patient waiting for the summons that called her home.

The bereaved husband and family have the sympathy of a very large circle of friends.—Com.

TWO DRUNKS WERE MINUS THE PLUNKS

John Brown Given Ten Days and Thos. Collins told to Get out of the City

John Brown and Thos. Collins occupied seats in the docket at Police Court this morning and were charged with being found under the influence of yesterday.

Both pleaded guilty. Brown looked as if his head had come in contact with one of the latest creations in ladies' headgear, for his face was literally covered with blood and several slips of court plaster concealed cuts on his distinguished countenance. He stated that he had arrived in the city from Toronto yesterday and had in his possession $7, but at the present time he lacked $6.90 of that amount.

His injuries were really caused by his having been struck by a train last night on Bethune street.

Well, you are fined $2 or ten days in jail, said the Magistrate as it would be a reflection on the police here and the social conditions of the city to send you back to Toronto without giving you some time to clean up. As John only had ten cents, he will have to put up with a Turkish bath at the hotel Nesbitt.

Collins was told to make his exit from the city as quickly as he knew how.

VERY SUCCESSFUL EXCURSION

Held Yesterday Under Auspices of W.A. of St. Luke's Church

The excursion held yesterday under the auspices of St Luke's W. A. was in every respect most successful. The day was all that could be desired, and a large number of people availed themselves of the opportunity of spending a day on the breezy waters of Kawarthadom. The Stoney Lake, the officials of which were most courteous and obliging, left the Wolfe street wharf at 8 o'clock. A large crowd got on board at No 6 lock, and at the lift lock. The party arrived at Burleigh at 1.30, where dinner was partaken of. After an hour's stop the boat proceeded to Mt. Julian, where the excursionists remained for a short time. From Mt. Julian the trip to the head of Stony Lake was made, and connections for Lakefield were made in time for the 6.30 train.

Everyone present was delighted with the outing, and commented on it in the highest terms of appreciation of sociability and friendly intercourse. The ladies of the W. A. realized a handsome sum towards their funds.

Call Was Cancelled

The fire brigade received a call to 380 Park street this morning, but almost simultaneous to the call a message was received that the blaze had been squelched.

THE PASSING OF A GREAT FIGURE IN BASEBALL CIRCLES

The health of President Harry C. Pulliam, the National League president, who committed suicide by shooting himself through the head and particularly his nervous condition, had been so poor for several months as to cause much alarm among his friends. After the spring meeting of the National League in February he was granted an indefinite leave of absence and spent several months with relatives in Tennessee and Florida. He returned to his duties about a month ago and seemed considerably improved by his long rest. His health soon began to give way again, and it is reported that he recently spent a week in a sanitarium. A report was current to-day that Pulliam wrote his resignation as president of the league before shooting himself, but this could not confirmed.

Pulliam was born in Scottsville, Ky., 39 years ago, and was successively reporter and city editor of the Louisville Commercial, president of the Louisville baseball club, secretary and treasurer of the Pittsburg club, and president of the National League, to which office he was elected in 1902.

Pulliam's death marks the passing of one of the most interesting figures of baseball. Imbued with the idea that the complete success of baseball rested on honesty, he often found himself opposed by some of his associates. Worry over his troubles with the leaders of the league brought on a nervous breakdown last winter and his temporary retirement. He resumed his active labor about a month ago.

Word was received from G. Cain, of Knoxville, Tenn., a brother-in-law, that he would be here to-day, when the funeral arrangements will be made. Pulliam will probably be buried in Louisville.

Some of the club proprietors particularly opposed as excessively arbitrary the president's instructions to umpires. Immediately after he assumed office he began to deal severely with cases of so-called "rowdy baseball." A succession of controversies bore hard upon the president's nervous temperament, and at the last league meeting in Chicago in February he showed signs of a breakdown. He wanted to make public the names of the men who, he said, tried to bribe the umpires in the last Chicago-New York game.

He had become imbued with the idea that the league magnates were persecuting him, and that unless the names of the alleged bribers were made public the sport of baseball was doomed.

During the banquet which followed the directors' meeting, Pulliam suddenly rose and began a bitter tirade against the league officials. He was quieted for the time and his friends obtained for him an indefinite leave of absence.

LINES ON SPORT

From all appearances Oshawa are going in to do their best to win the intermediate O.H.A. championship during the coming winter. It is rather early yet to talk hockey, but the hockey sports of the lake shore towns have their eyes open already picking up the good men. It is learned on good authority that they have already secured Kenny Randall, the last centre man of the champion Lindsay Midgets; Frank Cotey, another of last year's Midgets; Leo Quinn, who played a sensational game for Peterborough last year and who hails from Lakefield, and also Ken Lane, last year captain of the 45th regimental team. It is also reported that they have endeavored to secure Captain Billy Stoddard of the Lindsay Midgets, but have so far failed.

There is no doubt but that Oshawa has its eyes on the silverware which now rests secure within our borders.—Lindsay Post.

---

Dick Rudolph, who has been pitching for the Toronto team for the last three seasons, will receive an opportunity to make the big show next season. Rudolph will go to the Pittsburg Nationals, Manager Fred Clarke of the Pirates having completed negotiations with the Toronto club yesterday. Barney Dreyfuss will pay Toronto $4,000 for the player, $2,000 cash and $2,000 additional if Rudolph makes good.

There will likely be a ball game here August 18. The baseball team of Marmora will accompany an excursion to this city from that place and will meet the locals at Riverside Park in the afternoon.

---

Toronto won from Providence yesterday by 7 to 4. Newton pitched effectively for the Leafs and had two triples.

---

Philadelphia Jack O'Brien had the better of the argument with Jimmy Flynn in their six-round bout at Denver last night.

---

Shrubb and Longboat claim to be in the best of shape for their 12-mile race to-night at Scarboro Beach.

---

Matthewson was replaced by Ames in the game with Pittsburg yesterday after the Pirates had made three runs.

BASEBALL

Millen, the Chatham pitcher, struck out 31 men in a 15-inning game with Rossinks of Detroit, and lost his game when a throw by his catcher hit a baserunner on the foot while the runner was sliding to second. The runner scored the winning run, making the score 4-3. Millen struck out the side five times.

The Vancouverites will compete here at the police games. Frank Nebrich, of Buffalo, runs Percy Sellen in the five-mile preliminary at 8.30.

THE WALL THAT WAS NOT.

A Story of a Girl's Treachery to Her Sister.

By HELEN RAMSDELL.

[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

In the rosy light of the setting sun Miss Rachel, the elder of the two Belden sisters, was gathering her sunflower seed. Miss Emily, the younger, sat on the porch watching her sister's movements, her sewing lying idle on her lap. Presently she ventured to remonstrate.

"I'm quite sure, Rachel, that the seeds are not nearly ripe enough to gather and that you are only spoiling your next year's crop."

"Very well. In that case I'll buy some new ones," answered Miss Rachel, "or perhaps we can afford to build a six foot fence on our side of this one and grow it over with vines. Anyway, not one of these seeds is going to fall on their side."

Miss Emily rose and walked over to the fence, speaking very softly.

"I don't want them to hear us, Rachel. It's like trying to quarrel with them, and they've always tried to be friendly. I really can't see why you hate them so. You used to like Steve once, and his wife is a pleasant, sweet spoken woman."

"Sweet spoken—yes! I should say that's how she got him."

Miss Emily sighed wistfully.

"I don't see why you hate them so," she repeated.

"You don't? Humph! Well, you just once try being nice and polite to them, and—you needn't be my sister any longer!"

At that moment a girl some twelve years of age came out of the household thus condemned by Miss Rachel, and both the sisters grew silent. They had been speaking much too low for their neighbors to hear what they said, and in innocent ignorance the girl called over, though timidly, as if half expecting one of the snubs she so completely failed to understand.

"Aren't you gathering your seeds awful early, Miss Belden? It's better to let them get ripe. They're the finest sunflowers we've ever seen. We're sorry they've quit blooming."

To the girl Miss Rachel was silence itself. To her sister she replied in tones of unuttered indignation too low for the girl to hear.

"It'll be a six foot fence next year if I have to live on dry bread."

"Oh, Rachel, how it would look!"

"We can cover our side with vines."

"But in winter the vines would be dead, just the same as the flowers."

Without reply Miss Rachel gathered up her apronful of great staring seed cups and ascended the stairs to her room. Here she went straight to an old fashioned writing desk and, opening it, placed the package of seeds in one of its many compartments.

Once it was out of her sight the hard lines in her comely face relaxed, and gradually as they faded her natural expression returned, revealing tears of suffering and of genuine kindness as well.

For a long time she sat there absorbed in her reverie, and as the sunlight died without new light touched Miss Rachel's face from within, and, led by some touch of previous memory, she opened a small locked drawer and took out a quaint old box of faintly fragrant sandalwood.

It had grown too dark to see its contents plainly, but Miss Rachel did not need to see them. She knew every line of the faded letters that lay there, every detail of the girlish forget-me-not ring in its tiny box beside them, every word of the newspaper notice of death that lay beneath them, while every feature of the photograph that lay on top was graven deeper in her heart.

Tonight she went over it all once again—her joy, her passionate, silent grief, then her awakening from her own bitter sorrow to find that her sister was suffering also. Then she had opened her eyes, so long blinded to all save her own bitter grief, and looked for the cause of her sister's to find that Emily's lover, Stephen Loring, came to see her sister no more.

Questioned, Miss Emily had replied proudly, with swift flushing cheeks, that she did not wish him to come, and Miss Rachel probed no further. Scarcely a year later Stephen married a girl of a neighboring village, and Emily, growing paler and gentler day by day, gave all the love left in her heart to Rachel, which Miss Rachel silently but deeply reciprocated, all the more tenderly that Miss Emily so often seemed inwardly shrinking before her, as if in shame at her fate.

With true New England reticence, mingled with inborn delicacy, neither ever spoke of the other's love and loss, but when Stephen Loring some twenty years later had come to live beside them Miss Rachel's wrath rose high against this destroyer of her gentle sister's happiness in life.

"Rachel!"

Miss Emily stood at the door peering into the now dark room.

"Old Mrs. Clayton is dying, and they want you right away."

At the door she paused, speaking gently:

"You won't need to go until morning. You are too frail for such things."

And before Miss Emily could reply she was gone on this, one of her many deeds of mercy.

Alone, Miss Emily entered the room and went to the window, where she could watch her sister's tall form through the fast deepening darkness.

A lamplighter came by as she stood there and lighted the lamp in the street below, just in front of the window. As she moved from the window the audacious gleam of light penetrated past her, falling directly on the opened box of keepsakes.

Dreamily, yet half startled, Miss Emily moved toward them. She knew well enough what they were—the package of letters tied with a narrow black ribbon were Andrew Arnold's letters of love to Rachel; the little box beside them held a well known turquoise ring, but the picture that lay on top, surely she might see that again after all these many years.

Half guiltily she lifted it and held it in the light, eagerly scanning the face. Then, with a little sob, she sank on her knees, the picture still clasped in her hand, her hidden face resting on her arms.

Silently thus the minutes passed, yet Miss Emily took no heed. And so Miss Rachel, coming home to a darkened, unlocked house, found her a little later.

For a moment she stood in the doorway, lost in wonder at her sister's still form in the lamplight; then she advanced swiftly to her side.

"Emily," she said—"Emily, dear, are you ill?"

Miss Emily sprang to her feet as if suddenly waked from a dream. One hand still held the photograph, but after an instant she dropped it on the desk, and, clasping her hands, she cried in a low, passionate voice—a new voice to Miss Rachel:

"Oh, Rachel, Rachel, forgive me! He did not know; he never, never dreamed it. You, you only, had his life and all of it, and, oh, I could not help it! Surely I have suffered enough, and I never, never meant to wrong you."

Miss Rachel stood so still she might have been carved of stone, too terribly bewildered for the simplest form of thought. But her sister went on with her passionate pleading.

"Can't you forgive me, Rachel, when he never, never knew and you had all his love?"

Miss Rachel's voice trembled.

"But Steve—Stephen Loring?"

"He caught my girlish fancy, Rachel. But when I found out how I felt—about—your Andrew—I sent Steve away. And the next week Andrew died so suddenly—his heart all yours to the last. Oh, Rachel, sister, you cannot forgive me, I know! I will go away—alone!"

"Hush, child," said Miss Rachel sternly. "I have nothing to forgive. You are the greater sufferer, as you have always been. But go away for awhile. I want to be alone."

Next morning the sun had scarcely dried the radiant dew when Miss Rachel opened an unused gate and went over to her neighbor's. In her hand she held the tiny package of seed she had placed last night on her desk.

Next year two rows of sunflowers nodded across the fence—the same low picket fence—not by any means six feet high.

Fixing the Blame.

The young man had returned from his wedding trip and was again at his desk in the office. It was the day after his return that the junior partner called him to his desk and said:

"Now that you're married, Mr. Quills, I trust you will be considerate in your treatment of me."

"I don't quite understand you, sir," exclaimed the young man in surprise.

"Oh, it's a little early, I know," admitted the junior partner, "but there's nothing like taking time by the forelock. I suppose you haven't been out late at night yet."

"Certainly not, sir."

"And it's none of my business if you have. But when you do stay out some night be considerate. Remember that I have a reputation for fairness and humane treatment of everybody in this office that I would like to retain. Don't tell your wife that you're sorry you're late, but that that slave driver at the office piled work upon you to such an extent that you had to work right into the night. Don't tell her that the tyrant you work under gave you 1s. 6d. for dinner and told you that you would have to post all the books in the office before leaving for the night. Just invent some other excuse, you know."

The young man thought the matter over for a minute or two and then asked anxiously:

"Well, if I should be late what shall I say?"

"Oh, put it on the senior partner, as I do. He can stand it."—London Answers.

Silly Accusation.

"Well, of all things," exclaimed Kloseman, "he accused me of making a lie out of the whole cloth"—

"Ridiculous!" remarked Cutting.

"Isn't it, though?"

"Oh, very! Evidently he doesn't know how economical you are."—Catholic Standard and Times.

GOMPERS TELLS OF HIS VISIT TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS IN ENGLAD

"The Deepest Impression That England Made on Me Came From its Poverty"—The Destitution of London.

As a spectator in the House of Commons, I spent one hour one evening listening to the debate. I was given a seat on that little bench for eight persons "under" the gallery, where a select few constituents are at times permitted to whisper to members during the progress of the debates and bills. The oak-panelled hall, as we all have so often read, is the reverse of specious without desks, and with two long sets of uncomfortable benches running lengthwise and mounting upward from a quadrangular area in the middle. To get the 670 members into the 476 narrow seats being quite impossible, the over flow on field day must take to the galleries. As I saw it, the force operating the law-making mill was about 350, the Opposition and the Code Government facing each other in opposite rows of benches, except that the Labor and the Irish members [illegible] on the same side with the Opposition. On the first of the lower benches are the heads of departments seated in line, looking squarely into the eyes of the prominent members of the party who want their places. As the discussions are carried on mainly by these two platoons the scene is, at times, gladiatorial. Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Balfour were tossing repartees and compliments from time to time during the proceedings which I witnessed. The famed House of Commons "manner of speech" was so closely adhered to that individuality in addressing the House was hardly discernable. This I was told, was especially the case as the body was in committee. I enjoyed the action with a lively appreciation. The accepted code of mannerisms for a speaker in this gentleman's debating club begin with an apologetic demeanor on the member arising; then come a propitiatory smile and a hesitating utterance. As he proceeds his voice in thin conversational tone, the speaker frequently stammers "I, I, I," or "ah, ah, ah," meant to be expressive of a brain working profoundly but diffidently and modestly. As if, however, mocking at his own possible seriousness, a vein of flippancy runs through the honorable member's remarks. I am told any display of feeling, a ring in the tones, a play of deep or high voice, would be deemed out of place. To the listening members belonging the right to show approval or disagreement. Those who side with the speaker some times loudly say "Hear, Hear!" while his opponents derisively utter "Oh, Oh!" Wavelets of these expressions which occasionally swell to waves accompanied every address I heard, however brief. A feature of the session not to be overlooked was that far toward the ceiling in the squeeze of a small gallery behind a lattice work sat a few women, the wives of members. Since the suffragette "invasion" of the House of Commons, women who are not related to members are not admitted to the House.

The bill under discussion was the one that sent the hosts defending vested rights into shock and shivers—that providing for the taxation of land values. I was much interested in listening to the speeches on the subject as on many a summer and winter evening in America, through the course of the last thirty years, I have heard the subject more than breached by impassioned Single Taxers. But as the debate on various clauses of the bill proceeded it became apparent that the "confiscation" so feared by opponents of this tax is yet many a long day off. The American system of taxing real estate is in England hardly begun. "Accomodation" land—that lying near built-up districts—vacant and untilled is here not subject to any taxation whatever. The bill proposes one cent annually on every five dollars of its capitalized value! Farm land would pay a small percentage, say perhaps ten or twenty, on its unearned increment, when this has passed fifty per cent beyond its present existing price! Is it anything remarkable that I was occupied in watching the manner of the statesman present rather than being absorbed in their matter? I, who had heard the apostles of taxing the unearned increment one hundred per cent., every bit of it! The bill is no doubt a good beginning, that is, the taxation of the unearned increment of the land, but I was witnessing a play in which the opposition protested against being "robbed" of the land their forefathers either stole or had bestowed upon them through privilege.

As I passed the several gates to the House of Commons I saw standing by them, patient, rather woe-begone, but well dressed women, wearing the sashes of the "Votes for Women" League, and bearing in their hands scrolls of paper. They were Suffragettes, subjects of derision by unwomanly passers-by, objects of fear to the Prime Minister, drums to the sight-seers and apparently friends to the policeman on guard. Like the policeman, the women go on duty several hours, and then are relieved by others. They hand out handbills, describing their unflagging endeavors to get Mr. Asquith to receive their petition. One day they besieged the gates during the session eight hours, another ten hours, another thirteen. They have announced they will keep up their mute protest for all the time the House of Commons remains in session.

The deepest impression that England made upon me came from its poverty. True, I had not the time to measure up and compare the data of its wealth, its middle class comfort, its institutions of social helpfulness, but everywhere is thrust before the traveller's eyes scenes of deplorable misery. If one takes a cab in any street in London, a panting boy or a man suddenly appears and goes through the form of proffering the unsolicited service of closing or opening the cab door. Frequently there are so many of these men and boys, they hustle and hustle with each other as to who shall "apparently" go through the form and perform the service. Of course, I have seen similar efforts in some of the large cities of the United States, but these have been at prominent hotels or restaurants. In England it seems as if there is no place where you may go in which the poor fellow is not immediately upon your heels craving for something. Indeed, if one halts for a moment here to consider his way, or [illegible] at a door of a business house before entering, to look at its signs, he hears a voice at his side, seeking for the "job" of giving him information. Excuses and subterfuges of all kinds are employed by tattered and hungry looking men to get a penny without actually putting forth their hands to beg. Some poor fellows follow cabs for miles to earn a sixpence carrying the traveller's trunks into the boarding houses. The benches in the parks, on the river embankments, at the little triangles and intersecting streets have their ragged human derelicts sitting about in lines and groups. In the newspapers and in the average conversation it is not uncommon to see and hear mention of unemployment as the accepted chronic feature of England's industrial and social life. The trade unions pay out large sums annually to their own unemployed. Wage scales seem not to be seriously threatened as one might think from the presence of the masses of the very poor, for many of these, by their long period of idleness and misery, have been rendered unemployable. Physically, thousands have become unfit, and from habit almost unreclaimable. Vice and the result of idleness may find them ready victims.

Poverty is on view in all parts of London; slum back streets border on fashionable thoroughfares; figures in dirt and rags slouch along amid gay and well-attired promenaders. Men who, as representatives of organized labor, have constantly before them questions of deprivation and idleness, imparted to me their views and conclusions, summarizing verbally the outdoor relief.

In brief, I may consequently say that what the stranger sees of the awful exposed destitution of London fairly illustrates what is in the background or entirely concealed from him. Any interpretation of the measures which Parliament and the councils take up, or which are proposed by social reformers, to be corrected, must be governed by this one leading fact in England—its myriads of empty stomachs, ill-clad bodies, and idle, though by nature productive, human machines. With regret I must confess I came away from London with a sense of depression. From time to time those numbers of demoralized, degraded objects which ought to be men and women have since formed in my mind's eye a procession moving along together past me, mournful, hopeless, repellant, a disgrace to our boasted civilization.

PALE, LANGUID GIRLS

Weak Blood During Development May Easily Cause a Life of Suffering.

A Tonic Such as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is Needed to Build Up the Blood and Give New Strength

quark for July 29 and daily 30th

At no time in her life does a girl stand in greater need of pure, red blood and the strength which it alone can give her, than when she is developing into womanhood. It is then that any inherited tendency to anaemia or consumption needs only the slightest encouragement to rapidly develop. This danger is especially threatening to girls who are confined long hours indoors, in stores, offices and factories—girls depressed by worry and cares. All these conditions quickly impoverish the blood and are among the most common causes of sickness among growing girls and young women. If at any time a girl finds that her strength is failing and she is becoming pale and nervous, has no ambition and is languid, it is a certain sign that her blood is failing to meet the demands upon it, because it is impure and thin.

It is at a time like this that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are invaluable to young women and growing girls. They build up the blood, make it rich, red and pure, tone the nerves and give new health and strength to every part of the body. They have cured so many cases of this kind that they may truly be called a specific for the common diseases of girlhood. Miss Minnie Smith, Creighton street, Halifax, says:—"I have proved that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are all that is claimed for them in cases similar to mine. About three years ago I suddenly began to run down. I grew so weak that I could hardly attend to my school studies. I suffered from headaches, my heart would palpitate violently at the least exertion, and my appetite was very fickle. I tried doctors' medicines and emulsions, but the treatment did not help me. Then I started taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after taking seven or eight boxes I was stronger than ever before. I feel that I owe my present good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I gratefully recommend them to other ailing girls."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EXPLODING SUBMARINE MINES

Ships to be Blown up on the Waterfront at Exhibition Grounds

The submarine mine, which plays such an important part in naval warfare will be part of the Military display at the Canadian National Exhibition. These hidden guardians of every port in war time will be laid in the lake in front of the Exhibition grounds, and every day at five o'clock a ship will be blown up by one of them. There is nothing more spectacular than what happens to a ship when it runs on to one of these hidden dangers of the deep.

SIR THOMAS IS STILL HOPEFUL

He Wants another Race for America's Cup

Sir Thomas Lipton is extremely anxious to arrange another race for the America's cup. He has made additional inquiries about the race of the New York authorities. These inquiries, however, contain certain points, which Sir Thomas thinks necessary, but which may cause a hitch. His principal objection to the universal rule, under which the previous contests were held is the unfair advantage it gives to the cup defenders. In Sir Thomas' own words, "The situation as advanced by the New York Yacht club allows of the entrant of the defendant yacht to build any kind of freak boat, without regard for seaworthiness, while the challenging yacht must abide by the regulation made 56 years ago, which provides that a boat must be seaworthy enough to cross the Atlantic under her own sail."

"That is the condition to-day," Sir Thomas points out, "notwithstanding the clause in the original deed of gift which provides for equality in the two competitors."

"I am willing to race under any rules existing to-day in the New York Yacht club or any club in America," says Sir Thomas, "but I must say I fail to understand why this exceptional condition exists with regard to this one race."

"Are you expecting anything definite to be arranged this year?" Sir Thomas was asked.

"Yes, I shall have concluded some definite arrangements within the next four or five weeks," was the reply.

Although a small dot in the Indian ocean, Mauritius has between seventy-five and a hundred automobiles, mostly French and English makes, there being but one American machine on the island. The roads of Mauritius are almost equal to the best metropolitan boulevards, and it may be called the autoist's paradise, for there is neither state nor town law in regard to speed limit.

CLAIMS AN OLD DEBT

JOHN L. BIRNEY WANTS MONEY LENT IN 1837.

His Father, Joseph Birney, Paid Eight Hundred Pounds in Salary to Troops in War of the Rebellion, and Son is Now Asking Government to Make It Good—His Father Was Beside Brock at Queenston Heights.

Repayment of £800 which his father, Joseph Birney, paid his militia company for their services in 1837, is asked by John Land Birney, of Toronto.

His father, Capt. Birney, of the 3rd Gore Militia, was never repaid the money. The funds advanced by the Government were embezzled, and sooner than see his men go unpaid Capt. Birney advanced the funds himself. His son has petitioned the Attorney-General for a fiat to sue in the courts for the amount.

At the request of Col. Robert Land, the deficiency was made up by Capt. Birney.

Capt. Birney, according to his son's petition, was beside General Brock when that gallant officer fell mortally wounded. Capt. Birney was born in Orange, New Jersey, in 1777, and as a loyalist came to Upper Canada with his mother in 1801. In 1812 he was an ensign in Capt. Hutt's company, which accompanied General Brock to Detroit. Later he became a lieutenant in Capt. Duran's company in the 5th Lincoln Regiment and took part in the battles of Queenston Heights and Lundy's Lane.

He built a bridge for the troops to cross the water gap at Burlington and assisted in the construction of defence works at Burlington Heights for use in case of retreat during the battle of Stoney Creek.

"At the battle of Queenston Heights my father engineered the work for some of the batteries at that place," says Mr. Birney, in his petition. "These were tested by General Brock himself and found to be correct in every particular.

"During the earlier part of the battle of Queenston Heights General Brock found that the Canadians, in firing at the Americans who were coming across the river, were throwing the ammunition away, as the bullets were falling short, so he ordered them to cease firing. General Williams misunderstood this order, and took it that he was to retire, and started to retire from Queenston Heights to Niagara. My father, who was with General Brock at the time, called the general's attention to the retirement of the troops. General Brock immediately ordered my father to take a message to General Williams to take the troops back.

"When the troops got back they found the Americans in such large force in the camp of the Canadians that the Canadians were compelled to retire. In retiring, General Brock was on horseback, and had just turned to follow the troops when my father, who was near him, noticed him sway and heard him groan. My father immediately rushed to his assistance and lifted him from his horse to the ground. The general, while lying on the ground, gave the order to the troops to come around by St. David and come over from the top again."

Capt. Birney did not wish to take a hand in the disturbance of 1837, as he was then about sixty years old. But he acceded to the persuasions of Sir Allan McNab and Lieutenant-Colonel Land, and accepted a captaincy in the Third Militia, which he held till 1841. For his services in 1812 and later he was granted 500 acres of land in 1824.

Col. Land was one of the sureties for the defaulting paymaster, and was sued for the sum embezzled. Other officers put in their claims, and were recouped for their loss out of the money recovered from Col. Land in the suit brought against him as the defaulting paymaster's surety.

Mr. Birney remembers well driving his father repeatedly to Col. Land's house, and hearing his father urge his claim to the £800. George K. Chisholm, M.P., was also requested to take up the matter.

Because of his loss, Capt. Birney had to mortgage his homestead of 200 acres in Nelson Township, and lost the 200 acres granted him for his services in 1812, and 200 acres granted him for his surveying services.

Militia regulations stipulated that the Birney claim could not be presented by any one but Colonel Land, the head of the regiment, but as surety for the absconding paymaster he could not present it without making himself personally liable. Thus it was the claim has got no farther than it has.

John Land Birney is the sole surviving heir of the late Capt. Birney, and he presents original documents and letters, both in his own possession and in the archives in support of his claim. They include the pay lists, and returns for provisions as well as other particulars of Capt. Birney's company.

As Seen by a Reporter.

Sir Hugh Graham, the proprietor of The Montreal Daily Star, is one of the newspaper-owners, who have occupied much space of late in London, England,—and the cable reports. Sir Hugh has been especially prominent, and has been quoted very largely for after-dinner sentiments which do honor to his convictions as a proprietor and a patriot. Incidentally he has been given an honorary LL.D., by Glasgow University. But there are motes in these beams of fame, and one which must have seemed particularly large-sized to Sir Hugh was a description of himself by a London newspaper writer. The owner of The Star, by the way, is a particularly spruce and dapper man of about fifty or little over. He is as active and energetic as a boy and is generally effervescent with vitality. In a word he is one of these men who look less than their years and feel younger still—and rather like it to be generally recognized. Judge then of the pleasure with which he must have heard himself described as "the white-haired veteran of seventy, still alert and active!"

Hardest Prospecting He Ever Did.

Possibly the last man in the north country whom the casual observer would mistake for an actor is the quiet and dignified secretary-treasurer of the Temiskaming and Hudson Bay Mining Co., Mr. F. L. Hutchinson. Yet who of us is there that has not at some time rejoiced in a footlight triumph? Mr. Hutchinson's excursion into stage-land was long ago but is still recalled in vivid recollection. In those days the hard worked secretary and auditor was not the giant of endurance he is to-day, and, after the stress and strain of the public appearance he hurried home, threw himself on the bed with his grease-paint on, and was soon fast asleep. Then it was that some joker got in his work. When the rising young actor arose next morning the materials necessary for the removal of his "make up" had disappeared.

That trip about town in search for vaseline, decorated as he was like a wild red Indian, is an adventure that will not soon be forgotten either by Mr. Hutchinson or the friends whom he chanced to meet.

NONE OF THE HOTELS WILL HAVE TO SELL OUT THIS YEAR

Commissioners Deal With Licenses of Hotels Which Expired To-day—All Are Renewed for Balance of Year.

Some three months ago, when the board of license commissioners held a meeting to discuss the issuing of liquor licenses for the present year, four of the local hotels were given notice that their licenses would expire to-day, July 31st. The four hotels in question were the Grand, the Cavanaugh House, the Peterborough House and the Queen's Hotel. Last night the commissioners held another meeting, and after some deliberation decided to allow the managers of the above hotels to extend their licenses for the rest of the year. Those present were Messrs. M. A. Morrison, chairman; Jas. Kendry, H. LeBrun, and Inspector Stewart. After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read, the following resolution was carried:

"That the licenses of Messrs. Nixon, Ackley, Head and Cavanaugh be granted for the balance of this year, and that the above persons be notified by the inspector that if local option does not carry, their strict observance of the law will determine the board in granting their licenses for the following year."

HOWELL CAUGHT IN THE ACT OF LEAVING HOUSE

Had Changed His Clothes and Intended Catching Midnight C.P.R. Freight—Was Remanded This Morning—Robt. Wilson Charged With Aiding in the Escape Was Also Remanded.

By the arrest of Wesley Howell last night a pretty smooth plan was nipped in the bud, and one of those implicated is in the cells at the police station, charged with aiding Howell to escape.

The particulars of Howell's escape were given in yesterday's issue, but the fine points of the plan have only now been found out. Previous to the time Howell was let out of the cell to use the telephone by P. C. McGinty, two men walked into the police station and asked if they would be allowed to see the prisoner in regard to securing bail for him. The request was granted, and it was then that the plan (which later proved a failure was hatched. Robt. Wilson was one of the two men. The understanding between him and prisoner was that he (Wilson) would go to some telephone, and Howell was to ask the police officer on duty to be allowed the use of the machine at the police station. This was carried out as stated before. But the other man at the line was no doubt Wilson, who, as soon as Howell had finished talking and left the phone, rang up the station again. Howell said to P. C. McGinty, "You are wanted at the telephone," and while the officer was in the act of answering the call, Howell, who was in the hall by his cell, sneaked out past McGinty and secured his freedom.

The officers on night duty, P. C.'s Newhall, Meagher and McBarry, by information best known to themselves, became aware of the fact that Howell would be at Wilson's house, near the corner of Mark and Sophia streets last night, and they gathered outside this place at eleven o'clock and kept close watch on the premises until twelve. It was just at this hour that Howell was seen coming up the hall of the house, and as he was in the act of leaving by way of a door he was grabbed by the waiting officers and taken to the police station. Howell had changed clothes while in Wilson's house, and he probably intended to catch the C.P.R. midnight freight when caught.

He appeared this morning before Magistrate Dumble to face a charge of having unlawfully escaped from custody. Mr. G. N. Gordon, who conducted the case in the accused's behalf, did not make any election or plea.

The case was remanded till next Friday morning, when he will be called upon to answer to three offences, that of assaulting a police officer, escaping from custody, and being drunk and disorderly.

At the conclusion of Howell's case, Robt. Wilson was charged with receiving Howell in order to assist his escape, but as in the former case, Mr. Gordon, who acted for Wilson, did not elect or make any plea.

On the request of Mr. Gordon for bail the magistrate said he would allow the accused out if two securities of $500 each were furnished. It was learned this afternoon that the amount would be given for Wilson's appearance at court next Friday.

Rev. Mr. Kenner Arrives.

To the Editor.—

Pipestone, Manitoba. — I desire, through the columns of your paper, to make known to our friends in Peterborough our safe arrival at Pipestone, Man. The journey in many respects was pleasing and enjoyable. My youngest brother, John, and his good lady from Mitchell joined our society at Toronto, going west to see relatives. We had quite a few of Christian people in our car. We had vocal and instrumental music, and many of the songs sung in our Sabbath schools and in our week night prayer meetings were made to do service. From our old car, interesting the young and old, we passed along over the road to the home beyond. This is the fourth time I have gone to see my children who are scattered over the west, and none equalled it in the character and elevating influence of the people. It appears to me that the world is moving on in social and religious attainments.

We arrived at Winnipeg at 2 p.m. Thursday, and took a rest with a Winnipeg brother of mine and his good lady until Saturday morning, when we left for Pipestone. It being fair time, the cars were crowded, and no addition was made to our comfort during the remainder of the journey. Our reception at Pipestone by one daughter and her worthy husband was warm and hearty, such as might well make a king elated. Rest is now sought and enjoyed. As one of the trains was a special, we had to take the side track from time to time to allow the regular trains to pass, and the knocking about we got was at times unreasonable and unnecessary. It was not safe to be on one's feet. If we had been a train of cattle I should hardly think we would have been jolted about much more.

My daughter, with her two children, who came from the new province, was knocked off her feet, and in the fall cut her hand and fainted, and had to have it dressed at a drug store, and was thus disqualified from rendering that assistance to her children that she otherwise would. I think the travelling public is entitled to more generous consideration at the hands of the officials.

W. KENNER.

A TRAGEDY NEAR LONDON AROUSES THE NEIGHBORHOOD

Farmer's Wife is Found Dying in Stall in Stable—Husband of Mrs. Martin Jenkins of London Township, Says She Was Kicked by Stallion.

London, Aug. 2.—The mysterious death of Mrs. Martin Jenkins of London Township has convulsed the whole neighborhood. Excitement is intense and the sole topic of discussion is the mysterious death.

The coroner's jury after viewing the remains Saturday night adjourned until Tuesday night when all available evidence will be heard.

On Friday morning the husband, James C. Jenkins hurriedly despatched two of his sons to neighbors' houses with the news that Mrs. Jenkins had been kicked by a horse and was dying. Mrs. Morrow and Wm. McNaughton, the neighbors summoned, hurried to the scene, and when they arrived found the woman lying in one of the stalls in the stable unconscious. Her head was battered and bruised, and she died within an hour. Just beyond the stalls there is a box stall in which a stallion is kept. The door of this was open and the stallion was found in the barn yard. There were horses in the other stalls.

Dr. McNeil of Arva was summoned but the woman was dead when he arrived.

Dr. McNeil is the coroner and in consequence of the rumors afloat, in the neighborhood, he ordered an inquest, but after consultation with the legal authorities decided to call on Dr. Ferguson to conduct the investigation. Upon the facts being laid before Crown Attorney McKillopin he ordered an inquest, which opened on Saturday night.

The story told by the husband is that he was in a field near the barn and noticed the stallion in the barn yard. He drove it into the barn and there found his wife lying on the floor with her head smashed in.

The woman was carried into the house, where she died soon afterward.

The family moved from Westminster Township six years ago, and there are six children.

The funeral of Mrs. Jenkins was held yesterday, and was an immense one. The services were conducted by Rev. John Mahan of Arva, assisted by Rev. B. L. Hutton of London. Interment was made at St. John's.

In the neighborhood of the tragedy there appears to be considerable ill-feeling towards Jenkins, though apparently with little real grounds. Jenkins is about 55 years of age, and the deceased, who was his second wife, was 42. They have not always lived happily together, having been living separately for about a year. The farm is well tilled and is about seven miles from London.

Various theories are advanced as to how the woman met death. When found she was laying in the middle stall with her head in the passage leading to the box stall in which the stallion was kept. The most likely accidental theory is that the door of the box stall was left open or loose and that the stallion broke out while the woman was in the barn gathering eggs and knocking her down, crushed out her life. The left side of the skull was caved in and the scalp badly torn. There were also wounds on the left eye and on the top and back of the head. The injuries were more than sufficient to cause death.

WAS STRICKEN IN CHURCH

Fergus, Aug. 2.—During church service yesterday morning, James Pattison, a leading merchant of Fergus, and a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian choir, took a hemorrhage of the stomach and was carried from the choir in a dying condition, passing away almost instantly.

Several in the congregation fainted and the service was discontinued. Mr. Pattison is the only son of a widowed mother. He was at one time a member of the council, is a director of the Fergus Horticultural, the Agricultural Society, a prominent Mason, and leading Conservative.

THE IRISH BEST ADMINISTRATORS

Montreal, Aug. 2.—An interesting story comes from Ottawa supplementing the many rumors anent the coming appointment of an archbishop of that archdiocese.

It appears that the Irish-Canadian element sent a document to Rome declaring amongst other reasons why one of that nationality should be appointed, that the French-Canadians, while good and faithful missionaries, were failing in administrative capacity, and as administrative talent would be required in a very high degree in the capital, an Irish-Canadian should be the successor of the late Mgr. Duhamel.

THIEF GETS SOME JEWELRY

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 2.—Mrs. E. D. Smith, who was robbed of jewelry valued at $1,000 three weeks ago, is to-day mourning the loss of about $250 in cash and jewelry. Between one and four yesterday morning her house was entered and rifled. Several rooms were entered and jewelry, the property of guests, stolen.

This house was robbed three weeks ago by Edward Barrymore, who was sentenced to five years for robbing the Walker House in Toronto. It is believed the thief may be a friend of Barrymore's.

VICE CONSUL IS MURDERED

New York, Aug. 2.—Dr. Luke Wing, Chinese vice-consul at New York, a graduate of Lehigh and Yale Universities, and married to an American woman, was mortally wounded at his offices in a lower Broadway building Saturday afternoon by a man of his own race, who gives voluble but confused and contradictory reports of himself in pigeon English.

Dr. Wing died last night in St. Gregory's Hospital shortly after 8 o'clock. He had been shot in the back with a revolver.

Michael McDonnell, for 27 years special watchman at the Chinese consulate, identified the murderer as Wong Bow Chung, who, he says, was formerly a steward on the U. S. battleship Indiana.

Despondency is given as the cause of the rash act. He leaves a widow and one son.

White-Black Man Dies.

TARIFF BILL IS ADOPTED

United States Senate Adopts the Payne Bill

Washington, Aug. 2.—The House on Saturday night adopted the conference report on the tariff bill, 195 to 183. The Republicans shrieked in their delight over the final outcome, and Chairman Payne was the central figure of an admiring and congratulatory crowd of colleagues.

Twenty Republicans voted against the report and two Democrats for it.

The day opened with what appeared to be part of an organized filibuster against the conference report, when Mr. Mondell, Wyoming, demanded the reading of a lengthy document. This proceeded for about an hour and a half, when with about two-thirds remaining to be read, Mr. Mondell permitted the debate to go on.

Chairman Payne defended the report and appealed to his Republican colleagues to support it, prophesying at the same time that when the bill was enacted into law it would meet with the approval of the country.

Mr. Clark, the minority leader, and many of his colleagues denounced the bill and chastised the Republicans for failings, as they alleged to revise the tariff downward, and thus keep their party pledges.

Perhaps the most sensational speech of all was by Mr. Mann of Illinois, Republican, who said he would vote against the report, provided the rates on pulp and print paper as reduced by the House, were not retained. He denounced that particular schedule and declared that Canada would take such action regarding pulpwood, and print paper as to place an almost prohibitive price on paper in this country.

At 9.07 p.m. the House with the conference report ready to be messaged to the Senate for action, adjourned until Monday noon.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The plant of the Niagara Pulp Board Co. was destroyed by fire Saturday night. Loss $50.

Henry Isles, a farmer of Firdale, Manitoba, was drowned on Saturday while bathing in a slough.

The plant of the Canadian Canners Limited, at St. Catharines, was totally destroyed by fire early Saturday morning.

The Vancouver exhibition management will invite Louis Bleriot or the Wright Bros. to make airship flights in that city.

The 23-year-old son of Matthew Moody, manufacturer, of Terrebonne, fell under the Quebec train on Saturday and was killed.

A committee of the Selkirk Centennial Exposition for 1912 waited on Earl Grey Saturday at Winnipeg, and presented through him an invitation to King Edward to open the fair, and, failing him, the Prince of Wales.

Minister of Defence Cooke of New South Wales, declares that whatever the Imperial Defence Conference decided Australia would be asked to shoulder, and he was confident she would respond. Australia must do more than hitherto.

Comic Editor Shot.

Havana, Aug. 2.—Postmaster-General Nodarse Saturday night entered the home of Senor Torriente, editor of an illustrated weekly, Policia Comica, and fired several shots, seriously wounding Torriente. Nodarse then escaped.

The cause of the attack is said to be rumors concerning the relations of a certain high Government official with Nodarse's wife. The publication of a scandalous cartoon Saturday is believed to have induced Nodarse to attack Torriente.

20,000 HOUSES ARE BURNED TERRIBLE FIRE OSAKA, JAPAN

Many Thousands Are Homeless and Are Confronted by Starvation—Populace, Firemen and Troops Unite in Struggle With Fire.

Osaka, Japan, Aug. 2.—Confusion still prevails here as a result of Saturday's disastrous fire. Thousands of persons are homeless and hunger is staring many of them in the face.

A system of relief has been organized by the municipal authorities, but it is inadequate. Outside cities and towns are assisting.

The number of casualties has not yet been determined, but hundreds of injured persons are crowding the hospitals.

The latest estimates are that 20,000 buildings were destroyed, including banks, the stock exchange, the museum, Government edifices, and factories.

Losses are given roughly at several million yen. It is feared that consequently some of the insurance companies will fail.

The conflagration lasted more than 25 hours. The streets of the city are very narrow, and the houses mostly of wood constuction.

Under a strong breeze therefore the buildings were easy prey for the flames. The firemen fought valiantly against the odds of lack of water and wind, and many of them fell unconscious.

The belongings of the people who were able to save anything from their burning homes are piled in great heaps along the railroad tracks from Osaka to Kobe, where they were removed early Saturday morning when the fire broke out.

All day Saturday and far into the night the male populace assisted firemen and the troops in quenching the conflagration. An area of over four miles square, containing some of the city's handsomest structures, including the Buddhist temple, the largest in the world, was burned over before the fire was controlled. The stock exchange, one of the most important of this country, was entirely destroyed. This loss, it is believed, will tend to dislocate the business of Osaka, which, with its manufacturing concerns, is one of the chief commercial cities of Japan.

YOUNG BOY RESCUED FROM DROWNING ON SATURDAY

Mr. W. Bailey Saves Young Boy's Life by Plunging into the Water and Bringing Him to Shore at Street Railway Wharf.

What might have been a serious accident occurred Saturday afternoon about two o'clock. A small boy, who lives in the vicinity of Rye's boathouse, was playing about the foot of the lower steam-boat wharf. Suddenly he was seen to stumble, and as he was quite near to the edge of the wharf at the time he was unable to regain his balance soon enough, and tumbled into the water. The depth of the water at this point is about five feet, and as the boy was only a little fellow and could not swim, he would assuredly have drowned but for a timely intervention. Mr. Wm. Bailey, who was passing at the time, noticing the boy's plight, quickly rushed to the scene and jumped in after him and succeeded, without much difficulty, in bringing him to the shore.

Other than being badly scared, the little fellow was not hurt, and was soon playing merrily away, as if nothing had happened.

YOUNG COUPLE TAKE SUDDEN DIP IN WATERS OF OTONABEE

On Saturday afternoon, about four o'clock, a young couple had a very narrow escape from drowning. They were going down the river in a canoe and were bowling along at a fine rate when all of a sudden the boat capsized, throwing the occupants into the river.

Fortunately a passerby noticed the affair, and rushing to the water, swam out to the girl and reached her just in the nick of time. After a little hard work on the part of her rescuer, she was brought to shore, and in a short time recovered from the effects of her sudden descent into the water.

Her companion, while he was not an expert swimmer by any means, was able to reach shore without much trouble.

SOMEBODY MAKES A RAID ON THE EVANGELISTIC TENT

There are some person or persons in this city who, not only have very little sense of what is decent and right, but who do not hesitate to do a wrong thing for the gratification of a debased sense of humor.

Yesterday evening, between the hours of five and eight, somebody went into the evangelistic tent, on the custom house lot, and proceeded to put it decidedly hors de combat. The chairs and tables were overturned, and a large number of hymn books were stolen. Such jokes are bad at the best of times, but when an organisation like this is made the butt of them something ought to be done about it.

MILES OF WARSHIPS

King Edward Reviews British Fleet in the Solent

Cowes, Eng., Aug. 2.—The last of the great naval pageants, which for the past few months have played such a prominent part in the campaign waged around the question of Great Britain's sea power, took place Saturday afternoon in the Solent, where eighteen miles of warships were reviewed by King Edward and Queen Alexandra.

Anchored in three main columns, with smaller craft in flanking lines, every ship dressed and newly painted, the fleet presented a magnificent spectacle, and the scene was strikingly picturesque, as the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, bearing Their Majesties, and escorted by the Admiralty yachts, and the White Star Line steamer Adriatic, on which members of the House of Lords and the Commons had gathered, passed down the lanes of ships.

The surrounding waters were crowded with steamers and craft of all kinds, which were thronged with spectators. The gaiety of the scene was greatly heightened by the permission given the officers to entertain their friends. Every warship was dispensing hospitality with naval lavishness, and the preponderance of women in summer garments gave the quarter-decks the appearance of garden parties in miniature.

Last night the Indomitable, the Invincible and the Inflexible — three battleships of the Dreadnought class —sailed to meet the Russian Imperial yacht Standart and escort Emperor Nicholas and the Russian Imperial family to Cowes. This will be the first official visit of the Russian monarch to Great Britain. The coming of Emperor Nicholas to-day is regarded as sealing the triple entente between Russia, France and Great Britain, and indicating that the period of estrangement and suspicion between Great Britain and Russia is now ended.

Officially, the visit will be afloat, although it is expected that the Russian monarch will land privately at Cowes Tuesday and pay visits. King Edward, Queen Alexandra and the Prince of Wales will sail at 10.45 on the Victoria and Albert, to meet the Russian Imperial party, who will board the King's yacht for luncheon, and the subsequent review of the British fleet.

FRENCH ELEMENT ARE MUCH PLEASED

Montreal, Aug. 2.—Naturally the French-Canadian element are elated over the new Senatorial appointment from the west replacing Senator Perley.

It was at first announced that a Mr. Price had been appointed, but the man who really got the job is no other than the Hon. Benjamin Prince, a French-Canadian from the Province of Quebec, who went west and grew up with the country. He was formerly a member of the Northwest Assembly and a Conservative, but went over with a good many of his compatriots in 1896.

He is well and favorably known here, and should, with Senator Roy from Edmonton, make a good French-Canadian team from the west in the Upper House.

TEN DEAD IN WRECK

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 2.—Ten persons were killed and at least sixty were injured in a head-on collision of two electric trains on the Spokane and International Railway late Saturday afternoon.

The wreck occurred at Coldwell, Wash., a station between Couer D'Alene, Idaho, and Spokane. Both trains were going at the rate of about 15 miles an hour. They crashed together without warning.

The heavily laden coaches were crushed, and the men and women in them were thrown from their seats, some being hurled to the tops of the coaches, while others were sent flying through the windows. Several coaches left the tracks, and passengers were caught under the pile of broken wood and steel.

A partial list of the dead includes: Will Allee, Wenaichie, Wash.; Walter Lalquist, Spokane; A. T. Whitney, an attorney of Memphis, Tenn., and an unknown woman and son.

SBARETTI OFF FOR ROME

Montreal, Aug. 2.—It is learned today that the rumor to the effect that his excellency Mgr. Sbaretti had gone to Rome on an official mission is to say the least premature.

One thing is certain the papal delegate did not give it to be understood that he was leaving for the city of the Popes, and that it was only supposed that he had taken his departure for the eternal city. As a well-posted gentleman in ecclesiastical matters observed yesterday if the delegate has really gone to Rome he certainly never intimated to anyone of either high or low estate that such was his intention.

LITTLE IMPROVEMENT SHOWN REVOLUTION GROWING WORSE

Official Reports Declare That Order is Being Rapidly Restored in Barcelona, But News is Rare—Prowling Bands Cutting Off Communication.

Paris, Aug. 2.—Although official Spain minimizes the Catalonian insurrection and insists that the revolt has been crushed, a far different story emanates from the frontier.

Refugees and travelers declare that the revolt is still rampant, and that desperate combats continue at Barcelona, where 50 revolutionists are reported to have been wounded in a conflict which occurred as late as Saturday night.

Information concerning the actual situation in Barcelona and the rest of the province is rarer to-day than ever before. Although some of the news from the frontier is from revolutionary sources, and, therefore, open to suspicion, more reliable intelligence leads to the belief that although Barcelona is calmer, the insurrectionists have taken to the suburbs and the outlying country, where they are sowing the seeds of revolt and inflaming the populace to maintain the struggle to the bitter end.

Barcelona Province is in the hands of prowling bands of workmen, heavily armed, who occupy the railroads and highways to prevent communication, and who refuse entrance to new comers. Cassan de la Selva is in the hands of revolutionaries, and at Palamis, where the monastery was fired upon and the monks tortured, the situation is described as critical and the lives of foreigners endangered.

The opinion in semi-official circles here concerning Spain's internal condition is pessimistic and the belief is expressed that the trouble is not yet over. Official Madrid announces that Barcelona is tranquil, but qualifies this statement with the words, "This is especially so in the centre of the city."

From Melilla comes the news of another Spanish convoy being ambushed and several of its officers being wounded before the troops succeeded in extricating themselves from the attack of the tribesmen.

Rumors are afloat that a general strike will be launched to-day at Madrid, and that strike is being organized in the Biscayan region. All persons subject to military duty are forbidden to leave Spain under grave penalty, and elaborate measures have been adopted to forestall a possible outbreak in the other provinces of the country.

Official denial is given to the report that the temper of the Madrid garrison is hostile. Another official statement says that the number of victims of the fighting at Barcelona is unknown, but frontier reports, one of them of alleged authoritative inspiration, declares that the killed or wounded will aggregate 3,000 and that the number of insurrectionists summarily shot as between 40 and 120.

Official Version.

Madrid, Aug. 2.—An official statement issued yesterday says that the latest advices from Barcelona are to the effect that order reigns, especially in the centre of the city, where the public is circulating and a majority of the stores are reopened. Work has been commenced again in several factories. The newspapers probably will reappear to-morrow. A French torpedo boat is awaited to take official correspondence. The number of victims of the outbreak, according to the official note is not known exactly. Troops are actively engaged in clearing the streets and demolishing the remaining barricades erected for the revolutionists.

MAKES A HERO BY SURGERY

Paris, Aug. 2.—"Such emotions as fear and melancholy are conveyed by a small nerve which springs from the human brain near the medulla oblongata, the top of the spinal cord."

So announces Dr. Bonnier, a distinguished surgeon, who adds that he has removed this nerve and so relieved greatly persons suffering from melancholia and timidity.

Other surgeons seem sceptical about the value of Dr. Bonnier's discovery. But newspaper paragraphers find opportunity to discuss the possibility of turning a coward into a hero by a surgical operation.

MEXICO HAS ANOTHER QUAKE

Mexico City, Aug. 2.—Mexico City was again severely shaken by an earthquake Saturday. A shock more severe than any yet experienced rocked the city for one minute and 40 seconds at 12.43 p.m.

No great damage was done, though innumerable public and other buildings were cracked. The national palace suffered considerably.

Reports from Governor Daminia Flores, of the State of Guerrera, declared that in Acapulco, the largest and strongest buildings were razed by the force of Saturday's tremors, and there has been heavy property loss throughout that section.

At Acapulco the custom house with its warehouse, the military barracks and a number of other prominent buildings were absolutely destroyed, while the municipal palace suffered serious damage.

BUILDING BURNED; FIVE ARE KILLED

St. Paul, Aug. 2.—An explosion of gasoline, followed by a destructive fire in a four-storey building on West Third street Saturday afternoon, is known to have caused the death of five persons and the injury of six others. The police believe that the bodies of four other persons are still in the ruins.

The dead: Roam Bouska, 3 years old; Mrs. Gagnon, 50 years old; child supposed to be Clifford Gamble, 3 years old, and two unidentified men.

The explosion blew the building to fragments in an instant and set fire to and badly damaged the central police station and another adjoining building.

Chief of Police O'Connor suffered an irreparable loss in the destruction of his private gallery of crooks, a collection of 20,000 pictures.

LARGE NUMBER OF SHARP SHOOTERS

Berlin, Aug. 2.—Nearly two and one-half millions of trained, disciplined sharp shooters have been added to the defensive forces of the German empire last week by the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. Bethmann-Hollweg. The chancellor has taken this far-reaching step by given permission by degree to 2,402,644 members of 27,676 veterans' societies to practice rifle shooting on the military rifle ranges throughout the country, with army rifles at an annual charge of 67 cents a piece. Cartridges will be supplied to the shooters at 62 cents a hundred.

Heretofore all requests made by the veterans' societies in this direction have been refused.

THE NEWS AS TOLD IN DESPATCHES

Wright's Fast Time.

Washington, Aug. 2.—Orville Wright traveled 47.431 miles an hour in his flight Saturday in returning from the Alexandria end of the course to Fort Meyer. This is the official report made by the trial board at the War Department yesterday. His speed to Alexandria from the Fort Meyer end of the course was 37.735 miles an hour, making his average 42.438. The Wright brothers will receive $30,000 for their aeroplane, $5,000 of which is the bonus for excess in speed over the contract requirement.

Doukhobors on the March.

Winnipeg, Aug. 2.—A despatch from Canora, Sask., says: Word has been received among the Doukhobors here that another nude parade was instituted among their people in the vicinity of Swan River last Sunday. During the march one old woman died and was left by the roadside, while the deluded procession sped onward.

Found Wounded Tramp.

Kingston, Aug. 2.—Three tramps at Tweed started up Stoco Lake in a rowboat. They stole a pig from W. Bowers on the way. At night J. Marshall of Lost Channel drove a wounded tramp into Tweed. A bullet had pierced his head and passed down into his shoulder. His wounds were attended to, and all put under arrest.

Paper Under Ban.

Montreal, Aug. 2.—La Semaine, a weekly paper, published here during the last few weeks and containing articles, not only of a very anti-clerical, but material character, was placed under the ban yesterday by the Archbishop of Montreal, his letter on the subject being read in all the Roman Catholic churches.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

Peterborough has never looked so pretty as this summer. The streets are clean and the removal of nearly all the fences in the residential districts has left the exceedingly well-kept lawns open to the public gaze. In the old days ("befoah de wah" or, in other words, before the waterworks, lawns were not worthy of the name. The lawnmower also had not appeared on the scene here. But, after a bit, the good example of a few engaged the attention of the rest. Prizes for lawns and kitchen-gardens worked wonders, not so much on account of the money, as the general interest thus shown to be taken in what had before that been considered as uninteresting and beneath notice. Wherever we go now it is a delight to the eye. Slovenly surroundings are no longer tolerable by public taste. The transformation has been as complete as acceptable. No matter how poor or cheap the house or otherwise unpretentious the surroundings, it is open to every householder with a little care, to make his "place" a joy to his family and to all beholders. As a matter of fact a hovel made radiant with care and a few flowers, is more pleasing to the eye and to the sense of the artistic than a castle and the precise landscape that surrounds it. It is well known also that good habits are just as hard to shake off as bad habits, hence the prospect is even brighter than the retrospect. By the way this fact of habit or training, for they are one and the same thing, is not half paid attention to by our wiseacres.

Some day the banks of the river in the city itself will be attended to. When that long-desired day arrives, Peterborough will be as pretty an inland town as one would care to see. The lawn in front of the armouries is, however, an exception. It is also a disgrace.

CANCELLING LEASES

There is no good ground for allowing people to acquire opportunities of simply holding up the people. The right of expropriation for railway and similar purposes is a recognition of this fact. Any government has a right to buy off people who lease a waterpower privilege and show that they are doing so only for purposes of monopoly, and not development, that they must pay for that waterpower what it is worth, or give it up. The nominal rental charged by the Government is on that implied understanding. This principle is recognized and put into practice freely by the Whitney Government. Why should the Laurier Government not follow suit? Where a fair equivalent has been paid or given for a privilege it is a different matter, but where it is only a humbug and an excuse for doing a hold-up against people who really do want to use it, we cannot see that any argument in its favor is of any value whatever. It is no great tribute to the public-spiritedness of men either that they should seek to claim a usurious return for a lucky find which they have no intention of making good use of. The dog-in-the-manger policy is a thing of the past. The mere speculator also has had his day. The people want fair play, and may be depended upon to get it some day.

Re-payment of what was actually paid may be necessary, and with current interest, since the Government permitted what it now ought to see the error of. But simple justice demands no more. There is another side to the question than that of the man who depends on his selfishness for his success.'

EDITORIAL NOTES

Lord Kitchener is a believer in the transcendent power of the military. He paid no regard to the civil power in India, and has the same opinion, it is said, of it in England.

The weed crop carefully fenced off in front of the armouries has been mistaken by visitors for a poor crop of broadcast corn. Others thought it a root crop. But it isn't either. It took a month for the local representatives of the government service to clean up the old drill-shed mess, and the weeds are the natural outcome of the same lack of system and disregard for public comfort.

"Why is it," asks a reader, "that in Toronto, in a wheat-growing country, the cost of bread is as 5 to 4 to the price existing in countries that have to import wheat?" He sees no reason why, with wheat much cheaper than in 1870, bread should be much dearer.

Forty years ago we had small grist mills to do the grinding; wheat was often teamed long distances; milling is now done in mills of enormous capacity; bread is no longer manufactured in little shops by laborious processes, but in great factories. And yet the cost of a four-pound loaf to the consumer steadily increases.

No doubt the maker of bread would reply to a questioner by saying: "Everything else has gone up." That answer is invariably given when such a question as this is asked. Labor costs more; light, heat, fuel, meat supplies.—Toronto Star.

While citizens of Toronto may have felt free to sign a petition asking the Dominion Government to disallow the Ontario power bill, it is difficult to see how a group of citizens of Montreal persuaded themselves that they were entitled to sign any such petition.

Montreal is in another province and it will scarcely be necessary for the brokers of that city to take on their shoulders the worries incidental to the governing of the Province of Ontario. They have in Quebec a province that is lawfully entitled to such advice and guarding care as they are capable of supplying when their ordinary work of the day is done.

In this power question many of the "financiers" are showing a concern that can best be described as fussy, but they are not making much headway in the effort to alarm public opinion concerning the policy of Sir James Whitney's Government. So far as our observation goes, they seem rather to be defeating their purpose, and confirming the popular impression that in the general interest of the people it was about time Ontario had a Premier who was prepared to go his own way in full disregard of the all too unanimous opinions of brokers and bankers.

There will be many who will agree that Premier Whitney used the right word when he referred to the action of the Montreal brokers as impertinent.—Toronto Star (Liberal).

A Wonderful Musician.

Koussewitsky, the king of contrabass players, was recently heard in concert in Berlin. The left-hand agility and accuracy of this renowned Russian virtuoso are said to be simply astounding; his hand flies up and down the huge, unwieldly instrument with a speed and certainty that baffle description. The artist's manipulation of the bow also shows great strength and flexibility.

Munroe Renders "First Aid."

"Jack" Munroe, former heavyweight pugilist, now mayor of Elk City, Ont., ably demonstrated in Part III., special term of the supreme court in New York, the value of a prizering training in rendering aid to the overheated. Munroe was in court as a witness for the defence in the suit of William S. Mitchell against Eric Hamilton Rose and another defendant over some Cobalt mining deals.

Rose, overcome by the heat, toppled from the witness chair. Munroe despatched a court attendant hurriedly for a bucket of water and a large sponge, and doused Rose with water until he came to.

King Alfonso and his Premier are said to be convinced that the worst of the Catalonian rebellion is over.

PROSPERITY OF THE WEST.

English Minister Describes the New Provinces as He Found Them.

"I have just returned from the Northwest, where I have seen to the settlement of a considerable body of English immigrants, and I am simply amazed at the growth all over during the past decade."

The Rev. Charles Anderson, of London, is an enthusiastic admirer of the Northwest, which he visited for the first time about ten years ago. At the general offices of the C.P.R. he referred to the wonderful changes which has occurred in the West during the interval.

"The cities which especially struck me were Calgary, Edmonton and Regina. Of course, Winnipeg has grown enormously—that was inevitable, but the younger communities are also growing so fast that in a generation, while you will have Winnipeg a second Chicago, you will have these smaller places big modern cities. Calgary, especially, is forging ahead—spending large sums upon permanent pavements, sewers, parks, etc.

"Twenty-five years ago it was a struggling village, with half a dozen white people in it. To-day it has a various population — eager, thriving and energetic. You see the Indians go through the streets now and then, which hints of the past! but there is bustle, and the doing of things by the general population. The whole country looks fine, and all with whom I conversed are full of hope. Already there is talk of a bumper crop, notwithstanding that the spring was a little backward.

"The Americans are coming in from the Western States in large numbers, while the British immigrants are also flocking in.

"Of course, there is bound to be some anxiety about the foreign elements—the peoples from Russia and Central Europe; but, doubtless, assimilation will come in time."

Asked as to the condition of the working classes in England, the reverend gentleman said that trade was rather dull, and, in London, especially, many men were idle.

"We admit the foreigner, and the foreigner takes the bread out of the mouths of our own people by underselling English labor. There are thousands of these foreigners who will live on two or three shillings a week. The English workingman cannot do the same. The Alien Act is a dead letter. The only hope, in my opinion, is found in the occupancy, in increasing numbers, of the over-seas possessions by our British people. When I return I shall certainly have a favorable story to tell. If many of our small farmers and farm laborers could see the prosperity I have witnessed in the Northwest, they would be only too eager to come out to the Dominion."

Winnipeg's Heterogeneous Population.

If anyone has any doubt that every language under the sun is spoken in Winnipeg and that the western capital has the most heterogenous population of any city in Canada, all he has to do is to take a glance through the city directory. Vowels seem particularly distasteful to the foreigners of Winnipeg. The k's form one long series of jaw-breaking names. Here is a sample: Kon Krzyssinornski. For exercise try pronouncing this name: Mike Kyrszcznk. It is when the z's are reached that a page of the directory looks like a jumble of all the hard-sounding consonants of the alphabet. Here are four or five as they appear one after the other in the directory: Zavvodoffski, Zawerszenink, Zawidoski, Zawogowsk, Zazangta, Zborowski.

Rev. Hamilton Wigle, pastor of Zion Methodist Church, Winnipeg, ran into a Welsh name recently which he thinks is just about a record breaker. A couple came to the parsonage to be married. The groom was Walter John Huntingford, of Elstow, Sask.

"Where is your place of births?" asked Mr. Wigle.

The groom rattled off a name which fairly knocked the parson over.

Finally he got him to write it down and here is what appeared:

Llanfairpivothgwyrgyphgogerythwyrndrobiellandisniogogogoch.

There are just 59 letters in the name.

Moose Never Seeks Fight.

Numerous cases have been recorded of bull moose having unprovoked, given battle to man, but the peculiar part of this is that we have as yet to hear of a real sportsman being so attacked. Circumstantial evidence goes to prove that these unprovoked attacks are only excuses given for the killing of a moose out of season, or by an unlicensed hunter.

The ungainly body of the little calf moose, perched on long stilt-like legs, presents a ludicrous appearance; but it is an object of the tenderest solicitude on the part of the mother, who will often charge fiercely upon hunters if they approach too near, or try in sport to capture their offspring. A female calf moose once became so tame though being left unmolested that she used to come right up to a camp occupied by a brother of the writer and after a time allowed itself to be photographed in several different positions.—W. H. Moore in The Educational Review of St. John, N.B.

Canada's Newest Knight.

Nearly everyone is familiar with the portrait of Sir R. W. Scott—that of a very old gentleman with bushy white whiskers covering almost the whole of his countenance. He has looked precisely the same for thirty years, and this peculiar hirsute appearance of his was once the occasion of a rather rude jest from the lips of Sir John A. Macdonald.

The latter, when he lived at Earnscliffe, Ottawa, had in his library the mounted head of a Rocky Mountain goat, which, as everyone is aware, is snow white with a bushy fringe around its face. One night Sir John gave a dinner party to a few friends and afterward they adjourned to the library to smoke. As he led his guests into the room the Prime Minister said, "Gentlemen, allow me to present Senator Scott," at the same time pointing to the trophy upon the wall.

Washouts following heavy rains have destroyed several patches of roadbed on the main line of the Great Northern railway.

Loder moved around the table. "Something's gone wrong," he repeated, "and you've come to tell me."

The tone unnerved Chilcote. He suddenly dropped into a chair. "It—it wasn't my fault!" he began. "I—I have had a horrible time!"

Loder's lips tightened. "Yes," he said, "yes, I understand."

The other glanced up with a gleam of his old suspicion. "'Twas all my nerves, Loder"—

"Of course. Yes, of course." Loder's interruption was curt.

Chilcote eyed him doubtfully. Then recollection took the place of doubt, and a change passed over his expression. "It wasn't my fault," he began hastily. "On my soul, it wasn't! It was Crapham's beastly fault for showing her into the morning room"—

Loder kept silent. His curiosity had flared into sudden life at the other's words, but he feared to break the shattered train of thought even by a word.

In the silence Chilcote moved uneasily. "You see," he went on at last, "when I was here with you I—I felt strong. I—I"— He stopped.

"Yes, yes. When you were here with me you felt strong."

"Yes, that's it. While I was here I felt I could do the thing. But when I went home—when I went up to my rooms"— Again he paused, passing his handkerchief across his forehead.

"When you went up to your rooms?" Loder strove hard to keep his control.

"To my rooms?— Oh, I—I forget about that. I forget about the night"— He hesitated confusedly. "All I remember is the coming down to breakfast next morning—this morning— at 12 o'clock"—

Loder turned to the table and poured himself out some whisky. "Yes," he acquiesced in a very quiet voice.

At the word Chilcote rose from his seat. His disquietude was very evident. "Oh, there was breakfast on the table when I came downstairs—breakfast, with flowers and a horrible, dazzling glare of sun. It was then, Loder, as I stood and looked into the room, that the impossibility of it all came to me—that I knew I couldn't stand it—couldn't go on."

Loder swallowed his whisky slowly. His sense of overpowering curiosity held him very still, but he made no effort to prompt his companion.

Again Chilcote shifted his position agitatedly. "It had to be done," he said disjointedly. "I had to do it—then and there. The things were on the bureau—the pens and ink and telegraph forms. They tempted me."

Loder laid down his glass suddenly. An exclamation rose to his lips, but he checked it.

At the slight sound of the tumbler touching the table Chilcote turned, but there was no expression on the other's face to affright him.

"They tempted me," he repeated hastily. "They seemed like magnets; they seemed to draw me toward them. I sat at the bureau staring at them for a long time. Then a terrible compulsion seized me—something you could never understand—and I caught up the nearest pen and wrote just what was in my mind. It wasn't a telegram, properly speaking. It was more a letter. I wanted you back, and I had to make myself plain. The writing of the message seemed to steady me; the mere forming of the words quieted my mind. I was almost cool when I got up from the bureau and pressed the bell"—

"The bell?"

"Yes. I rang for a servant. I had to send the wire myself, so I had to get a cab." His voice rose to irritability. "I pressed the bell several times, but the thing had gone wrong; 'twouldn't work. At last I gave it up and went into the corridor to call some one."

"Well?" In the intense suspense of the moment the word escaped Loder.

"Oh, I went out of the room, but there at the door, before I could call anybody, I knocked up against that idiot Greening. He was looking for me—for you, rather—about some beastly Wark affair. I tried to explain that I wasn't in a state for business. I tried to shake him off, but he was worse than Blessington! At last, to be rid of the fellow, I went with him to the study"—

"But the telegram?" Loder began. Then again he checked himself. "Yes—yes—I understand," he added quietly.

"I'm getting to the telegram! I wish you wouldn't jar me with sudden questions. I wasn't in the study more than a minute more than five or six minutes"— His voice became confused, the strain of the connected recital was telling upon him. With nervous haste he made a rush for the end of his story. "I wasn't more than seven or eight minutes in the study; then, as I came downstairs Crapham met me in the hall. He told me that Lillian Astrupp had called and wished to see me and that he had shown her into the morning room"—

"Loder, what are you going to do?"

"The morning room?" Loder suddenly stepped back from the table. "The morning room? With your telegram lying on the bureau?"

His sudden speech and movement startled Chilcote. The blood rushed to his face, then died out, leaving it ashen. "Don't do that, Loder!" he cried. "I—I can't bear it!"

With an immense effort Loder controlled himself. "Sorry," he said. "Go on!"

"I'm going on. I tell you I'm going on! I got a horrid shock when Crapham told me. Your story came clattering through my mind. I knew Lillian had come to see you. I knew there was going to be a scene"—

"But the telegram! The telegram!"

Chilcote paid no heed to the interruption. He was following his own train of ideas. "I knew she had come to see you. I knew there was going to be a scene. When I got to the morning room my hand was shaking so that I could scarcely turn the handle; then, as the door opened, I could have cried out with relief. Eve was there as well!"

"Eve?"

"Yes. I don't think I was ever so glad to see her in my life." He laughed almost hysterically. "I was quite civil to her, and she was—quite sweet to me"— Again he laughed.

Loder's lips tightened.

"You see, it saved the situation. Even if Lillian wanted to be nasty, she couldn't while Eve was there. We talked for about ten minutes. We were quite an amiable trio. Then Lillian told me why she'd called. She wanted me to make a fourth in a theater party at the Arcadian tonight, and I—I was so pleased and so relieved that I said yes!" He paused and laughed again unsteadily.

In his tense anxiety Loder ground his heel into the floor. "Go on!" he said fiercely. "Go on!"

"Don't!" Chilcote exclaimed. "I'm going on—I'm going on." He passed his handkerchief across his lips. "We talked for ten minutes or so, and then Lillian left. I went with her to the hall door, but Crapham was there too—so I was still safe. She laughed and chatted and seemed in high spirits as we crossed the hall, and she was still smiling as she waved to me from her motor. But then, Loder—then, as I stood in the hall, it all came to me suddenly. I remembered that Lillian must have been alone in the morning room before Eve found her! I remembered the telegram! I ran back to the room, meaning to question Eve as to how long Lillian had been alone, but she had left the room. I ran to the bureau—but the telegram wasn't there!"

"Gone?"

"Yes, gone. That's why I've come straight here."

For a moment they confronted each other. Then, moved by a sudden impulse, Loder pushed Chilcote aside and crossed the room. An instant later the opening and shutting of doors, the hasty pulling out of drawers and moving of boxes came from the bedroom.

Chilcote, shaken and nervous, stood for a minute where his companion had left him. At last, impelled by curiosity, he too crossed the narrow passage and entered the second room.

The full light streamed in through the open window; the keen spring air blew freshly across the housetops, and on the window sill a band of grimy, joyous sparrows twittered and preened themselves. In the middle of the room stood Loder. His coat was off, and round him on chairs and floor lay an array of waistcoats, gloves and ties.

For a space Chilcote stood in the doorway staring at him, then his lips parted and he took a step forward. "Loder," he said anxiously, "Loder, what are you going to do?"

Loder turned. His shoulders were stiff, his face alight with energy. "I'm going back," he said, "to unravel the tangle you have made."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

LODER'S plan of action was arrived at before he reached Trafalgar square. The facts of the case were simple. Chilcote had left an incriminating telegram on the bureau in the morning room at Grosvenor square. By an unlucky chance Lillian Astrupp had been shown up into that room, where she had remained alone until the moment that Eve, either by request or by accident, had found her there. The facts resolved themselves into one question: What use had Lillian made of those solitary moments? Without deviation, Loder's mind turned toward one answer. Lillian was not the woman to lose an opportunity, whether the space at her command was long or short.

So convinced was he that, reaching Trafalgar square, he stopped and hailed a hansom.

"Cadogan gardens!" he called. "No. 33."

The moments seemed very few before the cab drew up beside the curb and he caught his second glimpse of the enameled door with its silver fittings. Instantly he pressed the bell the door was opened by Lillian's discreet, deferential manservant.

"Is Lady Astrupp at home?" he asked.

The man looked thoughtful. "Her ladyship lunched at home, sir"— he began cautiously.

But Loder interrupted him. "Ask her to see me," he said laconically.

The servant expressed no surprise. His only comment was to throw the door wide.

"If you'll wait in the white room, sir," he said, "I'll inform her ladyship." Chilcote was evidently a frequent and a favored visitor.

In this manner Loder for the second time entered the house so unfamiliar—and yet so familiar in all that it suggested. Entering the drawing room, he had leisure to look about him. It was a beautiful room, large and lofty. Luxury was evident on every hand, but it was not the luxury that palls or offends. Each object was graceful and possessed its own intrinsic value. The atmosphere was too effeminate to appeal to him, but he acknowledged the taste and artistic delicacy it conveyed. Almost at the moment of acknowledgment the door opened to admit Lillian.

"I thought it would be you," she said enigmatically.

Loder came forward. "You expected me?" he said guardedly. A sudden conviction filled him that it was not the evidence of her eyes, but something at once subtler and more definite that prompted her recognition of him.

She smiled. "Why should I expect you? On the contrary, I'm waiting to know why you're here?"

He was silent for an instant. Then he answered in her own light tone. "As far as that goes," he said, "let's make it my duty call—having dined with you. I'm an old fashioned person."

For a full second she surveyed him amusedly. Then at last she spoke. "My dear Jack"—she laid particular stress on the name—"I never imagined you punctilious. I should have thought bohemian would have been more the word."

Loder felt disconcerted and annoyed. Either, like himself, she was fishing for information or she was deliberately playing with him. In his perplexity he glanced across the room toward the fireplace.

Lillian saw the look. "Won't you sit down?" she said, indicating the couch. "I promise not to make you smoke. I shan't even ask you to take off your gloves!"

Loder made no movement. His mind was unpleasantly upset. It was nearly a fortnight since he had seen Lillian, and in the interval her attitude had changed, and the change puzzled him. It might mean the philosophy of a woman who, knowing herself without adequate weapons, withdraws from a combat that has proved fruitless, or it might imply the merely catlike desire to toy with a certainty. He looked quickly at the delicate face, the green eyes somewhat obliquely set, the unreliable mouth, and instantly he inclined to the latter theory. The conviction that she possessed the telegram filled him suddenly, and with it came the desire to put his belief to the test—to know beyond question whether her smiling unconcern meant malice or mere entertainment.

"When you first came into the room," he said quietly, "you said 'I thought it would be you.' Why did you say that?"

Again she smiled—the smile that might be malicious or might be merely amused. "Oh," she answered at last, "I only meant that though I had been told Jack Chilcote wanted me, it wasn't Jack Chilcote I expected to see!"

After her statement there was a pause. Loder's position was difficult. Instinctively convinced that, strong in the possession of her proof, she was enjoying his tantalized discomfort, he yet craved the actual evidence that should set his suspicions to rest. Acting upon the desire, he made a new beginning.

DEEP BORING.

The Problem of Tapping the Earth For Its Internal Heat.

Sir William Ramsay's recent suggestion that the interior heat of the earth might be tapped by means of a bore hole is not exactly new.

Indeed, experiments have actually been undertaken with that end in view.

One of the most important was carried out some years back by the German government at a place called Paruschowitz, in Silesia, when a depth of 9,572 feet was reached. Of course the bore is of very slender dimensions—three feet six inches in diameter at the top, decreasing gradually to two feet six inches at the depth of one mile, at which it remains for the rest of the distance.

At La Chapelle is a bore of a similar kind and nearly as deep constructed by the French government for experimental purposes, and another similar one exists near Stavropol, in southern Russia.

In each case it was the original intention to carry the bore much lower, but the expense was found to be prohibitive when contrasted with the prospective results. That is the worst of such works. After a certain depth the cost increases by leaps and bounds, and the time occupied lengthens proportionately.

Thus Charles Parsons of turbine fame, who has made a special study of the question, estimates that to drill a hole ten miles deep down through the earth's crust would cost £5,000,000 and take eighty years.

The job is a stupendous one, yet it may be necessary to undertake it. Our coal supply will not last forever, and when this is exhausted the greatest industrial communities will be those that have the most direct means of access to the stored up heat of the earth's interior.—Pearson's Magazine.

The Meteorograph.

The methods of penetrating the upper strata of the air on board a vessel equipped with the latest devices for meteorological observations include kites, sounding balloons, captive balloons and pilot or free balloons. With the exception of the free balloons all these vehicles are equipped with a wonderful instrument called a meteorograph, which makes an automatic record of the conditions of the air. In spite of its complicated mechanism the meteorograph weighs but two pounds. It contains a cylinder, revolved by clockwork, around which is wound a sheet of paper, and upon this sheet four different meteorological conditions are recorded—humidity, pressure or altitude, temperature and wind velocity. The humidity record is traced by a pen actuated by a strand of human hairs, which lengthen when exposed to moist air and shorten in dry air.—World's Work.

Inquisitive Penguins.

Dr. Lionville, who is with the Charcot expedition, in a letter to Paris says: "The antarctic region is quite up to its reputation. I understand how one can be fascinated with these weird landscapes, where everything that nature shows is strange and unaccustomed. The animals are prodigiously curious and the formations of the mountains and glaciers very unexpected. It is unfortunate that we cannot spend ten days at this place, 'Deception,' so inaptly named. The penguins are most interested in my work. When I turn over pieces of rock on the shores they come up to watch what I am doing, draw closer and closer, elbow each other to see better, peck the places where I am digging and end up by hustling me. I had to speak very plainly to one this morning, and he walked away limping."—London Standard.

Generals Wood and Bell.

Major General Leonard Wood, now in command of the military department of the east, with headquarters at Governors island, New York, will be the next chief of staff of the army. General Wood will succeed Major General J. Franklin Bell, whose reappointment to his present office was announced immediately after the inauguration of the new administration. General Bell, however, has decided to remain in Washington but a year longer and some time next spring probably will be transferred to Manila, where he will have command of the troops stationed in the Philippine archipelago.—Argonaut.

Phonographic Library.

The Academy of Sciences at Vienna has decided upon the creation of phonographic archives which will be divided into three parts and which will probably be the most remarkable library on record. The first section will be devoted to examples of European languages and dialects of the different people spoken at the beginning of the twentieth century. The second will contain examples of music and song of the same period, while the third section will be reserved for the records of contemporary orators.

Fairly Warned.

Postmaster Carney of Norfolk, Va., recently posted this notice to employees in his office: "All requests for leave of absence on account of toothache, severe colds and minor physical ailments and on account of funerals, picnics, church sociables and the like must be handed to the superintendent of your division before 10 a. m. on the morning of the game."

KRYPTOK BIFOCALS
Kryptok Bifocals are the only perfect invisible, double vision lens made. There is no split or crack to gather dirt, and being made of one piece of Glass, it forms no line between the near and far sight. No cemented double vision lens is entirely satisfactory, because the cement will come loose in time. The Kryptok lenses are fused and welded in such a way as to become solid lens of perfect optical qualities. We have issued a Booklet on these lenses, which covers the question of Bifocals thoroughly, and explains why the Kryptok Bifocals are much superior to the ordinary cemented kind. These Booklets we give away free of charge as well as our Antiseptic Lens Wipers. Call and ask for one.

EXCEEDINGLY BUSY TIME FOR CUPID THESE DAYS

An Increase of Eight in Number of Marriages in July, 1909, Over July, 1908—Death Rate Shows Increase and Birth Rate Decrease.

Without a doubt Cupid should have been given a chance to compete in the recent trials at Bisley. During the last thirty days alone, his arrows have made eighteen perfect scores. Eighteen pairs of hearts have been united, as a result of his deadly aim.

This shows a great improvement in his skill since July of last year. In 1908, in that month, there were only ten marriages, which leaves a difference of eight between the number of couples united in the two months of the succeeding years.

On the other hand, there has been an increase in the death rate of about 21 per cent. Last year there were only nineteen deaths in the month of July, while this year there have been twenty-three. This also was the number of deaths in the year of 1896, during the same month. This is something unusual, when one considers the difference between the population of this city now and at that time.

Last year there were thirty-seven births in July, while this year there have been only twenty-six, showing a decrease of eleven in the month.

COBOURG MAN HAS COSTLY EXPERIENCE AT JUBILEE

A Cobourg man was placed in a rather awkward predicament at Jubilee Point last week. He had driven over from Cobourg early in the morning, but as the day was hot and the roads very dusty, on reaching the Point he decided to have a bath before commencing the return journey.

His horse, which he had left standing on the bank, suddenly became imbued with the same inspiration, and proceeded to carry it out, dragging the buggy in with him. Unfortunately, during the swim the harness became shifted, and as the horse struggled to regain the bank it became tangled about his feet, and the buggy, overturning in the water, threw the creature on his back.

A couple of small boats which were in the neighborhood were rushed to the scene, but the mad struggles of the fast-drowning horse made it a dangerous feat to attempt to rescue it. Some trials were made, however, but they proved fruitless, and the horse soon sank.

FRUIT GROWERS OBJECT TO COMMISSION AGENTS' CHARGES

Mr. F. E. Durieu, representing the Canadian Horticulturist, has returned from a three weeks' trip among the fruit growers in the vicinity of Burlington, Bartonville, Beamsville, Stoney Creek, etc. He reports very favorably as regards the prospects for fruit. Apples, peaches, plums and tomatoes will be a big crop if the present weather continues.

Great dissatisfaction is felt amongst the growers on account of the cartage charges incurred by the commission agents at Toronto. They state that in half the cases where the charge is made for cartage of fruit the fruit is taken away by the retail men, and yet the grower has to pay cartage just the same.

Mr. Durieu reports business as very good, and prices for fruit are likely to rule high. Several meetings of growers have been held to try and inaugurate a system of co-operation among themselves, and so do away with so much cutting of prices and high commission charges.

CUSTOMS HOUSE RECEIPTS ALMOST DOUBLED FOR JULY

Local Customs Receipts for July of This Year Are Almost Twice Those for Month of July, 1908.

The custom's receipts of this city for the month of July show a great increase over those of the same month for the year of 1908. This year the receipts for the month amounted to $22,423.16, while last year they were only $11,929.98. This means that in an interval of twelve months the customs house receipts have become practically doubled, a state of affairs which lends itself to the assertion that the volume of business transacted in this city is practically becoming greater and greater.

MOTOR BOATS SHOULD BE MORE RIGIDLY INSPECTED

The Toronto Star, speaking editorially, says—

The accident which occurred in the vicinity of the dry dock last week when an explosion occurred on the gasoline cruising launch "Caprice," and in which two men narrowly escaped losing their lives, furnishes another instance of the existing need for more rigid and thorough inspection of these motor boats than now exists, if indeed any official system of inspection does exist.

A few weeks ago, near Brockville, a new boat of this type was being operated on the river for the first time, after being accepted by its purchaser, when some disarrangement of the boat's machinery occurred, the craft was enveloped in flames, and its half dozen occupants (all fortunately able to swim) were forced to seek safety by casting themselves into the water.

These and several other similar occurrences that have periodically been reported in the past few years since motor boats have come into such general use, would seem to indicate that the danger from fire on gasoline driven boats should be classed as extra hazardous, and that a system of most thorough and rigid inspection of such boats should be insisted upon before they are permitted to be used for private pleasure or public use.

Perhaps objection might be made to this proposition so far as concerns the use of these boats by pleasure parties consisting of their owners and their friends, but it must be remembered that these same private pleasure boats are operated on the public waterways and that a source of danger to any craft plying these waters may be a source of danger to all.

Indeed, since motor yachts and boats have sprung into existence there has already been much complaint regarding the reckless manner in which they are operated by some owners, and particularly with regard to the apparent disobedience of these owners to the laws of navigation relative to carrying of lights at night time. Stricter inspection should at least have a tendency to minimize these dangers.

THE OTONABEE POPULAR IN LINDSAY WATERS

The people of Lindsay appear to have become attached to the steamer Otonabee, which recently run a number of excursions out of the Scugog town. Probably the most successful excursion in connection with the visit of the steamer to the Lindsay waters was the one run by the Woodmen of the World from Lindsay to Peterborough. The large capacity of the steamer, which is nearly double that of any other boat on these waters, was taxed to its fullest extent by the Lindsay people on almost every occasion.

During the last few days the Woodmen of the World have received so many requests that their trip to Peterborough by steamer and thence to Lindsay by rail be repeated, that Alderman Hicks, manager of the company, visited Lindsay on Friday last and completed arrangements with the Woodmen of the World to do so.

He has had a wide experience in the erection of lumber mills and when this mill is completed it will be Mr. Gage's 85th mill that he has erected, which is pretty nearly a record for Canada.—Lindsay Post.

The deal was closed last week and Mr. Pearson will start at once, to make plans for next year.

THIS SILL HAS HISTORY

Is Lumber of Oak Tree Which Sank Forty Years Ago

The sill in the front door of the residence of Mr. Sam Mitchell, Emily, has a history. About two years ago Mr. Mitchell started the erection of the house he now lives in, and the oak tree, which was sawn up and used for the sill, was cut by him and his brother, Mr. Zach. Mitchell, 45 years ago. It was put on the ice on Pigeon Lake, and when the ice thawed in the spring it sank.

During dredging operations on the lake a couple of years ago the sunken timber was recovered and used by Mr. Mitchell for the purpose stated above.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

Bradley, the popular concert directress, who has brought artists to Peterborough on several occasions, and who looks after eastern business for Harold Jarvis and Donald C. ## FISHING GOOD AT JUBILEE POINT

The fishing in and around Jubilee Point is becoming better and better every day. The wild rice beds and rushes are just beginning to show themselves above the water, and are drawing the fish in further towards the Point. Last Saturday the manager of the Jubilee Park Hotel secured four nice 'lunge as the result of a two hours' paddle. The first one weighed about 11 pounds, and the other three ranged from seven to nine in weight.

Several other good catches have been made in the last few days, and prospects are for a good season.

Will Give Prize

Messrs. Clarke and Son have offered to donate either a medal or signet ring for a prize at the Printers' Picnic at Idyl Wyld on Civic Holiday.

TWO MEETINGS AT TENT YESTERDAY

Special Services for Men Were Interesting and Impressive

The two meetings in the tent on George street, held yesterday under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A., were interesting, and productive of much good. At the four o'clock meeting Dr. Middleton presided, and Mr. J. B. Ferguson gave the address, taking for his text, "I am not ashamed of the Gospel, for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." The points brought out by the speaker were convincing, and those in attendance received such an impressive message that, no doubt, it will bring results. At the conclusion of the address Mr. A. C. Davenport rendered a solo which was very much appreciated.

At the evening meeting Mr. J. F. Thornton presided, and Rev. Riddiford, of Park St. Baptist church, made an eloquent appeal to the men present to admit God into their lives; to submit to His will, and to commit their way to Him.

The Orpheus quartette, Messrs. Miller, Cole, McCann and C. B. Thornton, sang a selection in their usual pleasing manner.

Mr. Hassard, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., conducted the closing exercises and in doing so, urged those present to cultivate more the friendship of Jesus Christ, and to let Him into their lives.

Here and There

Talking about inconsistency, did you see the printers' picnic advertised on the water wagon?

The weeds in front of the armories would form a valuable ambuscade in case the armories were attacked by an enemy.

The oak that was sunk in Pigeon Lake and later resurrected, to be made into a door sill, after forty-five years' rest in the lake, as stated in the news section of to-day's Review, has the old oaken bucket, which they sing so much about, beaten to a moss-covered frazzle in the matter of antiquity.

The Belleville Intelligencer suggests that the reporter who was threatened with expulsion from the police station may have a chance at getting back at the threatening cop if he bides his time. This savors so much of detention that the ejection process would be highly preferable.

The car, which was built in the Angus shops, Montreal, under the supervision of Mr. Carey, is 80 feet long and weighs 150,000 pounds. It is most completely fitted up for airbrake instruction in every detail. The car will accommodate a class of fifty, and instructive lectures are given in the mornings, afternoons and evenings. One end is fitted up with a cosy and comfortable office. The car travels from one divisional point to another on the C.P.R. system on all lines east of Fort William. Mr. L. C.
